still they do not believe! No wonder He chides them for their dullness of both head and heart! Besides, they had the scriptures, and it is to these He appeals to explain the sufferings which they could not understand. Doubtless He spoke of the rejection of Moses himself by his brethren and of David the king, and especially of Hezekiah, who was smitten for the nation's sins, the type of the suffering Messiah. Many a passage in the Psalms of David is charged with a deeper doctrine and a higher thought than appears upon the surface. Peter, on the day of Pentecost, shows that David, in the so-called sixteenth Psalm, speaks of Him Who was his Lord and Son, when he gives a detailed account of the body and soul of Christ in death (Ps. 16<sup>9-10</sup>; Ac. 2<sup>25-28</sup>). The concluding verse of the Psalm, "Thou makest known to Me the paths of life", accounts for His spirit, for it is the spirit that imparts life. Thus fully did David predict Messiah's death. Once our eyes are opened, the pages of the scriptures become aglow with the things concerning Christ. As the dwelling place of God, the tabernacle and the temple were faint shadows of Him and His varied offices. The ritual, the sacrifices, the priesthood, the festivals—all pointed to the Coming One and His work. So much is there of Him that He could not have given much more than an outline on the road to Emmaus. Even then they do not seem to have fully realized the import of His words. They do not express any conviction that Christ must have been raised, and that the rumors they had heard must be true. Their inability to see Him in the stranger was but a sign that they were still unable to see Him in the scriptures. No doubt they had heard of the new observance which He had given the twelve, and knew that the broken bread was a figure of His body, broken for them. The symbolic act of blessing and breaking the bread opened their eyes at last, and they finally awoke to the reality of His resurrection. His task accomplished, the Lord vanishes, but they are eager to report the marvelous truth to the apostles, and return to Jerusalem.

about to be redeeming Israel. But surely, together with all these things also, it is leading in this third day from which these things occurred. But some of our women also amaze us, coming to be at the tomb early, and, not finding His body, they came saying that they had seen an apparition of messengers also, who are saying that He is living. And some of those with us came away to the tomb, and they found it thus, according as the women also said, yet they perceived Him not."

25 And He said to them, "O foolish and tardy of heart to be believing on all which the prophets speak! 26 Must not the Christ be suffering these things, and be entering into 27 His glory?" And beginning from Moses He interprets to them from all the prophets also, in all the scriptures, that which concerns Himself.

28 And they draw near to the village where they went, and He does as though He were going further.

29 And they urge Him, saying, "Remain with us, seeing that it is toward dusk and the day has already declined." And He entered

30 to remain with them. And it occurred, at His reclining with them, taking bread, He blesses it, and, breaking, He handed it to them.

31 Now their eyes were opened, and they recognize Him. And He became unapparent to them.

32 And they say to one another, "Was not our heart burning in us as He spake to us on the road and

39 The nature of our Lord's resurrection is nowhere more clearly revealed than in His efforts to convince the trembling disciples. The Lord was human in the full sense of the word, and had a body, soul, and spirit before His death. He lost none of these in resurrection. Had He been a spirit, as some of the disciples supposed at first, then He would not have had a body, with flesh and bones. The fact that His body did not decompose in death, that it still had the wounds which came at the crucifixion, that it is never said to have blood, all go to show that it was as real a body as before, but changed in its powers and mode of living. The bodies of the saints will be changed from soulish bodies, sustained in life through the medium of the blood, into spiritual (not spirit) bodies, vivified directly by means of spirit.

46 Compare 26,27 Ps.22 Isa.53.

46 This commission, for all mankind, in contrast to the kingdom commissions of Matthew (Mt.10<sup>5-8</sup> 28<sup>16-20</sup>), is concerned with sins and the suffering of Christ. It promises a pardon to all who repent. In actual practise it was often combined with the other commissions, as recorded in the book of Acts. It was not in force until Pentecost. There Peter proclaims: "Repent . . . for the pardon of your sins . . . (Ac. 2<sup>38</sup>). He used it again in preaching to Cornelius: "everyone who is believing in Him is to be obtaining the pardon of sins through His name" (Ac. 10<sup>43</sup>). Peter and the eleven do not seem to have left the land of Israel in the proclamation of pardon. Paul was appointed to carry it to the nations. His first commission was to the effect that the nations were "to get a pardon of sins" (Ac. 26<sup>18</sup>). After his separation (Ac. 13<sup>2</sup>) he coupled this with justification (Ac. 13<sup>38,39</sup>), and drops pardon when he no longer proclaims Christ after the flesh (2 Co. 5<sup>16-21</sup>). Pardon is administered by the executive of a government, for those who are proven guilty; justification acquits those who are reckoned not guilty.

47 Compare Ac.2<sup>38</sup>.

as He opened to us the scriptures?" And, rising in the same hour, they return to Jerusalem and found the eleven convened together and those with them, saying that the Lord was really roused and was seen by Simon. And they unfolded what was on the road, and how He is known to them in the breaking of the bread.

36 Now, at their speaking these things, Jesus Himself stood in their midst and is saying to them, 37 "Peace to you!" Yet, becoming dismayed and affrighted, they supposed they are beholding a spirit. 38 And He said to them, "Why are you disturbed? And wherefore are reasonings coming up in your hearts? Perceive My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself. Handle Me and perceive, seeing that a spirit has not flesh and bones according as you behold Me having." And, saying this, He exhibits to them 40 His hands and feet. Now, at their still disbelieving from joy, and marveling, He said to them, "Have 42 you any food in this place?" Now they hand Him part of a broiled 43 fish, and, taking it, He ate before them.

44 Now He said to them, "These are My words, which I speak to you still being with you, seeing that all must be fulfilled which has been written in the law of Moses and the prophets and psalms concerning 45 Me." Then He opens up their mind to understand the scriptures, 46 and said to them that "Thus it is written, and thus the Christ must be suffering and rise from among 47 the dead the third day. And repent-

JOHN'S ACCOUNT

THIS ACCOUNT presents our Lord in the character of the Son of God. Matthew portrays Him as the Son of David and the Son of Abraham. Luke impresses us with His humanity, Mark with His service, but here we rise above these lesser glories, and learn of His divine relationship. The genealogies of Matthew and Luke are each in accord with the truth they teach, Mark needs none for the Servant, but John unveils Him as the Word before His advent in fleshly form.

The keynote is struck in the first sentence. He is the Word, the Expression, the Logos. God is revealing Himself here through the medium of sound. He appeals to human ears. While this is a higher method than an appeal to power or acts, it is a much lower means than that used in this day of grace, for to us He is presented as the Image of God. He appeals to our spiritual sight.

A comparison of John's ministry and Paul's for the nations is suggested by the name given to John. In recognition of His tempestuous character, the Lord calls him a "son of thunder". Paul's first meeting with the Lord was like the lightning. The light of a flash travels about a million times as fast as the thunderclap which it occasions, and perhaps a billion times as far. No sound reaches us except from earth and even then, at no great distance. We can see stars so far from us that no human speech can more than suggest their remoteness.

So then, John presents the Son of God as the Word, in His relation to the earth. Paul also presents Him as the Son of His love, but rather in relation to the celestial universe. And, high as the spiritual flights of the beloved disciple, the apostle of the nations reveals a transcendent realm of truth to which John was a stranger. He was a minister of the Circumcision, and such blessing as he doles out to the nations is entirely dependent on Israel's prior bliss. Paul bases all his blessing for the nations on Israel's previous apostasy. It is a notable fact that this account was not written until after the apostolic ministry had closed. Possibly none of the other apostles even saw it. They never used it in the period comprised by the Acts. Paul never read it. He was able to fulfill the most marvelous of all ministries without a single glance into this narrative. Indeed, his later ministries were not concerned with Christ after the flesh and it would have had but little appeal to him so far as its proclamation was concerned. Being, then, given after all present need for it was past, it undoubtedly is intended for the Israel of the future, especially in the millennial era. Unlike the other accounts, it suggests Christ's rejection at the commencement, and soon unveils a preview of the marriage of the Lambkin which takes place during the thousand years, and gives a series of seven signs, all of which find their fulfillment in the day of Jehovah.

The seven signs are specially designed to support the central thought that He is the incarnate Word. Unlike the accounts elsewhere, there is no personal contact, or action. He speaks and it is done.

His word has power because of what He is. The water blushed into wine at the word of Him Who was the true Vine (15<sup>1</sup>). He not only said "I am the Way and the Truth and the Life" (14<sup>6</sup>), but could tell the courtier, "Go. Your son is living" (45<sup>0</sup>). He is the Door (10<sup>7</sup>) through which the impotent man was saved. He is the Bread (6<sup>35</sup>) that fed the five thousand (65<sup>14</sup>). As the Good Shepherd (10<sup>11</sup>) He seeks His sheep in the storm (6<sup>18</sup>). As the Light (9<sup>5</sup>) He opens the blind man's eyes (9<sup>7</sup>). As the Resurrection and the Life (11<sup>25</sup>) He rouses Lazarus (11) from the tomb. It is the word of "I AM" which displays its potency in the seven signs of this evangel. Briefly, the words of Christ are substantiated by a divine sign language which only those who knew the Word of God could understand.

The Logos, or Saying, or Expression, or Word, brings before us the revelation of God through sound, which appeals to the ears of His creatures. It is inferior to and in contrast with the revelation in which Christ is presented to sight, as the Image of God. Paul was saved by a sight of His transcendent glory. John was called by His word. Sound is slow and confined to the earth. Sight is swift and searches the heavens. This suggests the limited sphere of John's ministry.

"With" suggests two Greek words neither of which is used here, hence for accuracy's sake it is best to translate literally "toward". "With God" has no cogency in this connection. "Toward" indicates that the revealed Word pointed the creature in the direction of God. Take every "thus saith the Lord" in the Hebrew Scriptures and they all point us to God, and reveal some attribute of the divine character.

It is impossible for the mind to entertain the two thoughts that the Word was toward (or with) God, and the Word was God. Nothing which is toward (or with) an object can actually be that object. The difficulty lies in the difference between English and Greek idiom. "Was" and "is" are usually omitted in Greek, unless they are used in a figurative sense. Thus "This is my body" does not mean that the bread of the communion actually is the Lord's body but represents it. As the bread stands for the Lord's body, so the Word took the place of God. The God of the Hebrew Scriptures spoke: it was an oral revelation. He was revealed as Elohim, Jehovah, Adonai, etc., by means of utterances which came to the fathers through the prophets, while His essence was concealed. As at Sinai, His voice was heard, but He was hid.

IN THE BEGINNING was the Word, and the Word was toward God, and God was the Word. This was in the beginning toward God. All came into being through It, and apart from It not one thing came into being which has come into being. In It was life, and the life was the light of men. And the light is appearing in the darkness, and the darkness grasped it not.

<sup>6</sup> There came to be a man commissioned by God, named John. This one came for a witness, that he should be testifying concerning the Light, that all should be believing through It. He was not the Light, but that he should be testifying concerning the Light. It was the true Light, which is enlightening every man, coming into the world.

<sup>10</sup> In the world He was, and the world came into being through Him, and the world knew Him not. Into His own He came, and those who are His own accepted Him not. Yet as many as obtained Him, to them He gives the right to become children of God, to those who are believing into His name, who were begotten, not of bloods, neither of the will of the flesh, neither of the will of a man, but of God.

<sup>14</sup> And the Word became flesh, and tabernacles among us, and we gaze at His glory, a glory as of an only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth.

<sup>15</sup> John is testifying concerning Him and has cried, saying, "This was He of Whom I said, 'He Who is coming behind me, has come to be in front of me, seeing that He was before me', seeing that we all obtained of that which fills Him, and grace for grace, seeing that the law was given through Moses,

<sup>3</sup> Tindale, the first translator of our English Bible, used the pronoun "it" in referring to the Word, nor did he ever change it in his revisions.

<sup>3</sup> Being is based on the Word of God; creation is connected with Christ as the Image of God (Col. 1:15-17). The reason of all existence is evident. It provides a field for God's self-revelation. Sounds without ears are nothing and sights without eyes are vain. God wishes to be known: hence the need of creatures and a medium of revelation which is also the means of creation.

<sup>4</sup> The Word of God is presented as the channel of life in both the physical (Gen. 1:11, 20, 24, 27) and spiritual spheres (Ps. 119:25); as well as a light in the prevailing darkness (Ps. 119:105). Yet even the nation to whom the Word of God came remained in dense darkness.

<sup>6</sup> The opening paragraph is a summary of the Hebrew revelation. The law and the prophets were until John. He, too, belonged to that period, and concluded the testimony to the Coming One.

<sup>13</sup> An ancient reading, preserved by one of the early Fathers, is exceedingly apt and suggestive. It has "Who was begotten" and refers this statement to the incarnation of the Word, rather than to the spiritual birth of believers.

<sup>14</sup> The pre-existence of Christ is clearly implied in the statement that the Word became flesh. The Word had assumed a human form before, but now it becomes a human being. In this way grace and truth came into being through Jesus Christ. The divine expressions of the Hebrew Scriptures now converge in the Man. His previous place is further confirmed by John, when he insists that He was before him, though, as to flesh, He was after him.

<sup>18</sup> The various theophanies of the Hebrew Scriptures, such as Isaiah saw (Isa. 6:1), were not actual discoveries of the Deity, but sights of the Son at the time when He subsisted in the form of God (Phil. 2:6).

<sup>19</sup> The Jews did well in sending priests to John. But the priests had no sense of sin, so do not inquire about a sacrifice, but whether he is the ruler or prophet for whom they are looking.

grace and truth came into being through Jesus Christ. Now no one has ever seen God: the only-begotten God, Who is in the bosom of the Father, He unfolds Him.

<sup>19</sup> And this is the testimony of John when the Jews of Jerusalem dispatch to him priests and Levites that they should be inquiring of him, "Who are you?" And he avows and denies not and avows that "I am not the Christ." And they ask him again, "Who are you, then? Are you Elijah?" And he is saying, "I am not." "Are you the Prophet?" And he answered, <sup>22</sup> "No." Then they said to him, "Who are you?—that we may be giving an answer to those who send us. What are you saying concerning yourself?" He averred, <sup>23</sup> "I am a voice imploring in the wilderness, 'Straighten the road of the Lord!' according as said Isaiah the prophet."

<sup>24</sup> And those who have been dispatched were of the Pharisees. <sup>25</sup> And they ask him and said to him, "Why, then, are you baptizing, if you are not the Christ, neither <sup>26</sup> Elijah, nor the Prophet?" John answered them, saying, "I am baptizing in water. Now in the midst of you is standing One of Whom <sup>27</sup> you are not aware. He it is Who, coming behind me, has come to be in front of me, of Whom I am not worthy that I should be loosing the <sup>28</sup> thong of His sandal." These things occurred in Bethany, the other side of Jordan river, where John was, baptizing.

<sup>29</sup> On the morrow he is observing Jesus coming toward him, and is saying, "Lo! the Lamb of God Which is taking away the sin of the <sup>30</sup> world! This is He concerning Whom I said, 'Behind me is com-

Government and education are still the panaceas proposed by the majority of priest-craft. But John wisely withdraws himself from their notice, and as the Voice, heralds the coming of Jehovah Himself.

21-34 Compare Mt. 3:3-17; Mk. 1:2-11; Lu. 3:4-22, 29-36.

29 First John points out God's Lamb for the sinner, then for the saint. No other animal was so freely used in the sacrifices of the Mosaic ritual. Not only was a lamb slain at the passover (Ex.13<sup>3</sup>), but it might be used as a sin offering (Lev.4<sup>32</sup>) or a guilt offering (Lev.5<sup>6</sup>) and was prescribed for the cleansing of a leper (Lev.14<sup>12</sup>). But never, as here, did it take away the sin of the whole world. But it was not slain for sin only, but for worship and communion. Every morning and every evening witnessed the smoke of an ascending offering (Lev.29<sup>38</sup>). It was used as a peace offering (Ex.37). Besides this it was offered with the wave offering (Lev.23<sup>11</sup>), a symbol of the resurrection. Thus on seven different occasions a lamb was used to depict the sacrificial work of the Messiah. Indeed, His ministry of approximately four years may well be viewed as the antitype of the four days during which the passover lamb was kept before it could be offered (Ex.12<sup>6</sup>). During this period He displayed His marvelous perfections to the world. Not a blemish was found in Him. No wonder that the disciples, when they found the true Lamb of God, left John, and followed Him!

40 The call of Simon Peter is worthy of careful consideration, as it is undoubtedly an index of his ministry. It is especially instructive when viewed in contrast with the call of Paul. He was introduced to Messiah by a blood relation. Hence he, in turn, proclaims Christ to the Circumcision. Paul met Christ Himself come down from heaven, outside the land, hence he goes to the Uncircumcision with a heavenly message. Peter was a disciple of John, who was eager to welcome the Messiah. Paul was His most malignant enemy. Hence Paul preaches an evangel of undiluted transcendent grace, such as Peter himself never even apprehended.

ing a Man Who has come to be in front of me', seeing that He was before me. And I was not aware of Him. But that He may be manifested to Israel, therefore came I, baptizing in water."

32 And John testifies, saying that "I have gazed upon the spirit descending out of heaven as a dove, and it remains on Him. And I was not aware of Him, but He Who sends me to be baptizing in water, That One said to me, 'Upon Whomever you may be perceiving the spirit descending and remaining on Him, This is He Who is baptizing in holy spirit.' And I have seen and have testified that This One is the Son of God."

35 On the morrow John again stood and two of his disciples. And, looking at Jesus walking, he is saying, 36 "Lo! the Lamb of God!" And the two disciples hear him speaking and they follow Jesus.

38 Now Jesus, being turned and gazing at them following, is saying to them, "What are you seeking?" Yet they said to Him, "Rabbi" (which, being construed, is termed "Teacher"), "Where art Thou remaining?" He is saying to them, "Come and see." They came, then, and perceived where He is remaining, and they remain with Him that day. It was about the tenth hour.

40 Now Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, was one of the two with John who hear and follow Him. 41 This one first is finding his own brother, Simon, and is saying to him, "We have found the Messiah!" (which is, being construed, 42 "Christ"). And he led him to Jesus. Looking at him, Jesus said, <sup>42</sup> The contrast between Paul and Peter is further emphasized by their names. Simon, or Simeon, is Hebrew for "hear", or "hearken". He hearkened to the Word incarnate, and became His disciple. "Saul" suggests the disobedience of Israel's first king, and the words of Samuel, "Behold, to hearken is better than sacrifice, to attend than the suet of rams" (1 Sam. 15<sup>22</sup>). Simon was saved by sound. Saul was saved by sight. One was rewarded for his obedience, the other was favored because of his disobedience. One is the leading exponent of God's mercy to Israel, the other of God's transcendent and gratuitous grace to the nations.

Both were given new names to accord with the character of their commissions. Simon was called Cephas or Peter, meaning "rock", because he was to be used as a foundation. Saul was called Paul, because his ministry filled the "interval" between the repudiation of Israel in the past and their reception in the future.

<sup>44</sup> A devout Jew had good cause to question whether the Messiah should come out of Nazareth, unless he knew that He had been born in Bethlehem and His parents had gone there as a refuge from Herod's successor (Mt. 2<sup>22</sup>). Moreover, though there was a spoken prophecy that He should be called a Nazarene (Mt. 2<sup>23</sup>), the name does not occur even once in the Hebrew Scriptures, or in the Talmud. "The Nazarene" was a term of reproach, and was used only by those who wished to insult Him.

<sup>47</sup> Nathanael (gift of God) is a delightful type of the faithful in Israel. His position "under the fig tree" suggests those who longed for Messiah's kingdom and were looking for redemption in Israel, knowing from the Scriptures that the time spoken of by Daniel drew near. Nathanael heard His proclamation and acknowledged His right to the throne, and His higher glories as the Son of God. To such He promises a place in the coming kingdom. The opened heaven is a millennial picture, when all like Nathanael will enjoy the blessedness of heaven and earth united under the rule of their Messiah.

"You are Simon, the son of John. You shall be called Cephas" (which is, being translated, "Peter").

<sup>43</sup> On the morrow He wants to come away into Galilee, and He is finding Philip. And Jesus is saying to him, "Be following Me."

<sup>44</sup> Now Philip was from Bethsaida, out of the city of Andrew and Peter. Philip is finding Nathanael and is saying to him, "We have found Him of Whom Moses in the law, and the prophets write, Jesus, a son of Joseph, from Nazareth."

<sup>46</sup> And Nathanael said to him, "Can anything good be of Nazareth?" Philip is saying to him, "Come and see!"

<sup>47</sup> Jesus perceived Nathanael coming toward Him, and is saying concerning him, "Lo! truly an Israelite in whom there is no guile!"

<sup>48</sup> Nathanael is saying to Him, "Whence do you know me?" Jesus answered and said to him, "Before Philip summons you, being under the fig tree, I perceived you."

<sup>49</sup> Nathanael answered and is saying to him, "Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God! Thou art the King of Israel!"

<sup>50</sup> Jesus answered and said to him, "Seeing that I said to you that 'I perceived you underneath the fig tree', are you believing? You should be viewing greater things than these!"

<sup>51</sup> And He is saying to him, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, henceforth you shall be viewing heaven opened up and the messengers of God ascending and descending on the Son of Man-kind."

2 And on the third day a wedding occurred in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there.

<sup>1</sup> Cana, in Hebrew, means "acquire". The marriage feast is a sign of the time when the Son acquires the kingdom, and as the bridegroom is elated over the bride, so will He be elated over Israel (Isa. 62<sup>3,5</sup>). So long as they trust in the law, which was graven on stone, they will be in want of the wine which gladdens the heart of God and mortals (Jud. 9<sup>13</sup>). When they are restored to Jehovah, He will write His laws on their hearts. This is the new covenant He will make with them in that day (Jer. 31<sup>31-33</sup>). Then He will perform the much greater miracle of turning right into rejoicing and justice into joy. The power to transmute water into wine was the sign that He is competent to fill their hearts with the joy and gladness which can come only with the kingdom. He is the true Vine. Hence He is the Messiah. In general, it reveals the principle that God has the best still in reserve for His creatures, and that their lack is a lesson to lead them into an appreciation of His goodness. Men put their best forward at first, but God leaves His for the last. His saints will be satisfied but never satiated with Him. Who is the never-failing source of joy. The best is always on before. Yet the poor wine serves its purpose to commend the good.

<sup>13</sup> As the Passover was at hand, and every Jewish family was preparing for it by banishing all leaven from their houses (Ex. 12<sup>15</sup>), the Lord went up to His Father's house to cleanse it from the leaven of covetousness (1 Co. 5<sup>10</sup>). Little did the priests dream that the dreaded leaven was in the most sacred place in all the land! While the meanest house was being cleansed of literal leaven, the priests actually allowed spiritual leaven in the courts of Jehovah. More than this, covetousness is idolatry (Col. 3<sup>5</sup>). They boasted that they abhorred all idolatry, and here we find it in the very house of God! No wonder, when the Lord went up to Jerusalem, He found it necessary to cleanse His Father's house in preparation for the coming Passover. He drove out the beasts with a small whip, and ordered the culprits out of the temple precincts. Idolatry and leaven should find no harbor in the house of His Father!

<sup>6</sup> Now there were six stone water pots lying there, according to the cleansing of the Jews, containing two or three measures [nearly 9 gallons each] apiece. And Jesus is saying to them, "Fill the water pots with water to the brim." And they <sup>8</sup> fill them up to the brim. And He is saying to them, "Draw now and bring to the chief of the dining room." Now they bring it.

<sup>12</sup> After this He descended into Capernaum, He and His mother and His brothers and His disciples, and there they remain not many days.

<sup>18</sup> The Jews ask for a sign. But if they have become so dense that they utterly fail to read the significance of His act in cleansing the temple of its spiritual leaven, how can they understand when He reveals its end? Priesthood had apostatized, sacrifice had failed, the temple was doomed. Hence He points them away from the type to the Antitype. The temple was defiled, but He was holy. God had deserted it, but now He dwelt in His Son. The sacrifices were of no avail, they only wearied Jehovah. Then it was that He came to do God's will (Heb.10<sup>5-10</sup>). They would shudder at the thought of razing Herod's temple. They would never be guilty of such an awful crime against God! Yet their very zeal for Jehovah led them to destroy the true temple, His body. Mere religion, even if it is divine, only darkens the mind and hardens the heart. Forms are futile; it is the spirit that gives life. The very priests are ignorant of sacrifice. They not only defile the literal temple with leaven, but are absolutely blind to the true temple of God when He appears in their midst. Even when He speaks of it they fail to find the force of the figure.

<sup>24</sup> Our Lord's intimate insight into humanity is fully illustrated in this very evangel. No matter of what class or spiritual condition, all hearts were open to His gaze. He discovered the spiritual ignorance of Nicodemus, the teacher in Israel (3<sup>10</sup>), yet recognized in Peter, the fellaheen fisherman, a spiritual (1<sup>42</sup>) and a fond and faithful friend (21<sup>17</sup>). Guileless Nathanael is amazed at His acumen (1<sup>47</sup>), while Judas' treachery was ever before Him from the very first (13<sup>11</sup>). The woman of Samaria concluded that He knew all her past (4<sup>17</sup>), and the impotent man at Bethesda found that He fully understood his former failure (5<sup>6</sup>). The applause of the crowd did not blind Him to the motive which prompted it. He knew that they had no hunger for spiritual food. He is aware of all things (21<sup>17</sup>). Our character, our conduct, our condition, our inmost motives are transparent to His view. No wonder He did not entrust Himself to faith secured by signs!

whip of ropes, He cast all out of the sanctuary, the sheep as well as the oxen, and He pours out the change of the brokers and overturns the <sup>16</sup> tables. And to those selling the doves He said, "Take these away hence, and do not be making My Father's house a merchant's store."

<sup>17</sup> Now His disciples are reminded that it has been written: "The zeal of Thy house will be devouring Me."

<sup>18</sup> The Jews, then, answered and said to Him, "What sign are you showing us, seeing that you are doing these things?" Jesus answered and said to them, "Raze this temple and in three days I will raise it up." Then the Jews said, "In <sup>20</sup> forty and six years was this temple built, and you will be raising it <sup>21</sup> up in three days!" Yet He said it concerning the temple of His body.

<sup>22</sup> When, then, He was roused from among the dead, His disciples are reminded that He said this, and they believe the scripture and the word which Jesus said.

<sup>23</sup> Now as He was in Jerusalem at the Passover at the festival, many believe into His name, beholding <sup>24</sup> the signs which He did. Yet Jesus Himself did not entrust Himself to <sup>25</sup> them, because He knows all, and He had no need that anyone should be testifying concerning mankind, for He knew what was in mankind.

3 Now there was a man from among the Pharisees, Nicodemus <sup>2</sup> his name, a chief of the Jews. This

<sup>1</sup> We have found an unholy temple, an unspiritual priesthood, and now we are introduced to an ignorant teacher! Intense application to a single text book for a whole life had not taught him the elements of the truth! Nicodemus, however, was impressed with the Lord's works, little as he understood His words. Like the rest, he takes literally what is figurative. He should have known from Ezekiel, the prophet, that Israel could not enter the kingdom without a new spirit (Eze.36<sup>26</sup>). Spiritual regeneration, the one imperative condition, apart from which the kingdom cannot be entered, is utterly beyond his erudition. All that he considered vital was physical relationship with the favored nation.

The Lord did not give out regeneration as good news, but as bad news. This is not the gospel, even for the Circumcision. The evangel is always concerned with God and His Christ, never with man and his needs or efforts. Of the latter nothing good can be said, no evangel can be formulated. The new birth is not an evangel in any sense. It makes a demand he has no means of meeting.

For one like Nicodemus, expecting to enter the kingdom by physical generation, it would be quite a blow to demand spiritual regeneration. Men are utterly helpless in regard to their physical generation. They can do no more to accomplish their spiritual regeneration. It is the sovereign work of God's spirit.

Searching as the figure is, it does not probe nearly so deeply into human helplessness as the truth for the present economy of God's grace. Now, if any one is in Christ, there is a new creation (2 Co.5<sup>17</sup>). In spirit, we skip the era of the kingdom, the renascence, and enter the new creation, over a thousand years later. A new birth will fit them for a life on earth during the millennial eon. The new creation fits us for our celestial destiny. They will receive a rejuvenation of the faculties, we will be changed at the resurrection and receive powers and capacities far beyond our present possibilities. Regeneration keeps company with repentance and baptism. The new creation accompanies the dispensation of the conciliation (2 Co.5<sup>18</sup>).

one came to Him by night and said to Him: "Rabbi, we are aware that Thou art a Teacher come from God, for no one can be doing these signs which Thou art doing, except God should be with Him."

<sup>3</sup> Jesus answered and said to him, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, except anyone should be begotten anew, he cannot perceive <sup>4</sup> the kingdom of God. Nicodemus is saying to Him, "How can a man, being a veteran, be begotten? He cannot be entering into the womb of his mother a second time and be <sup>5</sup> begotten!" Jesus answered, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, except anyone should be begotten of water and spirit, he cannot be entering into the kingdom of God.
<sup>6</sup> That which is begotten by the flesh is flesh and that which is begotten
<sup>7</sup> by the spirit is spirit. You should not be marveling that I said to you, 'You must be begotten anew.'
<sup>8</sup> The blast is blowing where it wills, and you are hearing the sound of it, but you are not aware whence it is coming and whither it is going. Thus is everyone begotten by the water and the spirit."

<sup>9</sup> Nicodemus answered and said to Him, "How can these things
<sup>10</sup> occur?" Jesus answered and said to him, "Are you a teacher of Israel and know not these things?
<sup>11</sup> Verily, verily, I am saying to you that we are speaking of that which we have perceived, and are testifying to that which we have seen, and you are not getting our testimony.
<sup>12</sup> If I tell you of the terrestrial and you are not believing, how shall you be believing if I should be telling you of the celestial?"

<sup>14</sup> Nicodemus chose the cover of night, to save his reputation; for he was a proud Pharisee who would not care to have his name coupled with Christ's. How it must have humbled him to be compared with the serpent-bitten Israelites of the wilderness! Scholar that he was, he could not understand regeneration, but the most foolish could look away from themselves to the serpent and find life. This he undoubtedly did, for later he ventured to speak in Christ's behalf (<sup>750</sup>) and he came openly in the day time to bring spices for His burial (<sup>1989</sup>).

<sup>16</sup> This gives us, not the measure, but the character of God's love—not "so", but "thus". Nor is it a thing of the past—"loved". The gift of His Only Begotten is an expression of His timeless love. Whenever man's love is mentioned it is circumscribed in time and extent. But God's love knows no bounds except those it imposes on itself. The character of the God Nicodemus knew confined Him within Israel's narrow pale, and represented Him as a Lawgiver, demanding, and giving only as a reward. Now His love breaks through the narrow confines of the favored nation and shows Him a munificent Giver, imparting eonian life to all who believe. This evangel is especially adapted to the coming eon, when Israel is once more the channel of blessing to the nations. Good as it is, it falls far below the outflow of favor for the present economy. Now we have not only eonian life, but justification and reconciliation. Now God's love urges Him to actually beseech His enemies to be conciliated to Him. Grace will flow out through Israel to the nations in the regeneration. Now it overflows to the nations in far more lavish measure. Compare the grace here revealed with that displayed in Romans and especially Ephesians. Life alone is promised here; there we have righteousness and peace and exaltation to celestial honors far beyond the range of the fullest interpretation of this passage.

<sup>17</sup> While it was not the mission of Christ to condemn, yet, being the Light, He exposed the darkness. The priests and Pharisees were judged by their hatred of the Light.

<sup>13</sup> And no one has ascended into heaven except He Who descended out of heaven, the Son of Mankind

as Moses exalts the serpent in the wilderness, thus must the Son of <sup>15</sup> Mankind be exalted, that everyone who is believing on Him should not be perishing but have eonian life.

<sup>16</sup> For thus God loves the world, so that He gives His only begotten Son, that everyone who is believing into Him should not be perishing, but have eonian life.

<sup>17</sup> For God does not dispatch His Son into the world that He should be judging the world, but that the world may be saved through Him.

<sup>18</sup> He who is believing into Him is not being judged: yet he who is not believing has been judged already, seeing that he has not believed into the name of the only begotten Son of God.

<sup>19</sup> Now this is the judgment, that the light has come into the world and men love darkness rather than light, for their acts were wicked.

<sup>20</sup> For everyone who is committing bad things is hating the light and is not coming to the light, lest his

<sup>21</sup> acts should be exposed. Now he who is doing the truth is coming to the light, that his acts may be made manifest, that they have been wrought in God."

<sup>22</sup> After these things Jesus and His disciples came into the land of Judea. And there He tarried with

<sup>23</sup> them and baptized. Now John also was baptizing in Enon near Salim (seeing that there was much water there) and they came along and

<sup>25</sup> Ceremonial cleansing is the true definition of baptism. Before this, baptisms were a common feature of the Jewish ceremonial system, but were usually connected with the temple and the laver and were done by the person himself. John was called "the baptist" because he introduced the new method of doing it for others. This created a new unity. All baptized by John were distinguished from the rest of the nation by their cleansing. Now, however, the Lord's disciples baptize and John's disciples are going to Him, thus forming a new group and threatening to absorb John's disciples. So John defines his relation to Christ. He is simply a forerunner. He is glad to have his disciples leave him for the Messiah, his Master.

<sup>36</sup> This must be left to the time in which John was speaking. God is conciliated now, since Christ has died and Israel has been set aside, so that His indignation is not against the stubborn now. He is beseeching all to be conciliated (2 Co. 5<sup>19</sup>).

<sup>26</sup> And they came to John and said to him, "Rabbi, He Who was with you on the other side of the Jordan, to Whom you have testified, lo! this One is baptizing and all are coming to Him."

<sup>27</sup> John answered and said, "No man can get anything if it should not have been given him out of heaven. You yourselves are witnessing to me that I said, 'I am not the Christ', but that 'I am dispatched in front of That One'. He Who has the bride is the Bridegroom. Yet the friend of the Bridegroom, who has stood and is hearing Him, is rejoicing with joy because of the Bridegroom's voice. This, my joy, then, has been fulfilled. He must be growing, yet I am to be inferior.

<sup>31</sup> He Who is coming from above is above all. He who is of the earth is of the earth and is speaking of the earth: He Who is coming out of heaven is above all. What He has seen and hears, this He is testifying, and no one is getting His testimony. He who is getting His testimony, He seals, seeing that God is true. For He Whom God commissions is speaking God's declarations, for God is not giving the spirit by measure.

<sup>36</sup> He who is believing into the Son has eonian life, yet he who is stubborn as to the Son, shall not be seeing life, but the indignation of God is remaining on him."

4 As, then, the Lord knew that the Pharisees hear that Jesus is mak-

4 He must come through Samaria. This is the compulsion of grace, for Samaria had small claim upon His consideration. The seventeenth of second Kings shows us what a mongrel race they were, and how incurably idolatrous. They never had conformed to the divine ritual. The Jews had no intercourse with them. We do not wonder, then, that the Lord meets an outcast woman at Jacob's spring. Nicodemus was too proud to visit the Lord during daylight. The woman was too shamed to visit the spring in the evening, when all other women came. So she endures the heat of the midday sun to avoid their insults. Nicodemus offered the Lord no refreshment. The woman thought she could give Him none. But it is from sinners, not the self-righteous, that God derives joy.

This scene suggests a marvelous thought. The Lord first presents His need, and then hers. This is the true order. It is God Who is thirsty, first of all. He needs and desires the affectionate fellowship of His creatures. He would not condescend to make His desires known to a haughty Pharisee, but to the humiliated outcast He does not hesitate, even though it was considered a disgrace to talk to a woman in such circumstances.

11 Like Nicodemus, she fails to fathom the figure of speech. As physical life is dependent on water, so spiritual life is sustained by the spirit and word of God. We are so accustomed to a plentiful supply of water that the force of the figure is largely lost with us. In the arid East, the thirsty traveler knows something of the delight of a drink of pure water. There the professional water seller carries a porous clay jar, which keeps the water cool by evaporation, and two tinkling cups, in which he serves it to customers, as he goes along shouting Isa. 55. A spring was a prized possession. They often cost enormous labor, and were very deep. A whole town depended on this spring for its very life.

But a physical figure of spiritual realities always falls short. Jacob's spring was a deep well. There was no windlass or bucket. Travelers were expected to carry their own long leather buckets. But the Lord and His dising and baptizing more disciples than John (though, to be sure, Jesus Himself did not baptize, but His disciples), He leaves Judea and came away again into Galilee.

Now He must come through Samaria. He is coming, then, to a city of Samaria termed Sychar, nigh the freehold which Jacob gives his son Joseph. Now Jacob's spring was there. Jesus, then, weary with the journey, was seated thus at the spring. It was about the sixth hour. NOON

7 A certain woman of Samaria is coming to draw water. Jesus is saying to her, "Give Me a drink," for His disciples had come away into the city that they should be buying nourishment. The Samaritan woman, then, is saying to Him, "How are you, being a Jew, requesting a drink from me, being a Samaritan woman?" For the Jews are not beholden to the Samaritans. Jesus answered and said to her, "If you were aware of the gratuity of God, and Who it is Who is saying to you, 'Give Me a drink,' you would request Him, and He would give you living water." The woman is saying to Him, "Lord, you have not even a bucket, and the well is deep. Whence, then, have you living water? Are you greater than our father Jacob, who gives us the well, and he drank of it and his sons and what was nurtured by him?"

13 Jesus answered and said to her, 3 "Everyone who is drinking of this 14 water will be thirsting again, yet whoever may be drinking of the water which I shall be giving him, shall under no circumstances be thirsting for the eon, but the water ciples were not equipped with comforts. This was well, for it gave Him a good excuse to break the stringent etiquette which forbade a man speaking to a strange woman.

How different is the spirit He imparts! It is an artesian spring welling up and overflowing with blessing to all around. No need to draw, or a bucket to lift a scant supply! No need to walk a long distance with huge water jars! The spirit is within and becomes a stream surging forth to others.

<sup>19</sup> The ancient controversy between Jerusalem and Samaria was most bitter in connection with the proper place of worship. Of course Jerusalem was right and Samaria was wrong, for God had chosen the city of David for His dwelling place. Yet now we are confronted with the strange contradiction that, whereas He found idolatry in the temple at Jerusalem, He finds true adoration in Samaria! We would go to the magnificent ritual at Jerusalem to find pure worship. We would go to the rebellious unauthorized shrine at Samaria for idolatry. Not so He.

The same is true of our Lord's message. We would have demanded a new birth from the moral outcast and discussed the nature of God and worship with the religious Jew. But He, with wisdom from above, insists on regeneration when dealing with the respectable religionist, and reveals His spiritual secrets to the moral leper of Samaria.

<sup>24</sup> True worship is not a matter of place or of ritual, but must correspond with its Object, Who is spirit. In the present era of grace, we worship Him wherever and whenever we please, and He deigns to dwell in us. Heartfelt adoration is hindered by forms and set ceremonies. Prayer that flows forth freely; praise that pours forth spontaneously; beseeching that breaks the bands of convention and precedent, mean more to God than petitions repeated like a prayer wheel and supported by custom or habit. The religious "exercises" of Christendom are like the sacrifices of old, which He could not bear. Let us not draw near with our lips when our hearts are far from Him.

which I shall be giving him will become in him a spring of water, <sup>15</sup> leaping up into eonian life." The woman is saying to Him, "Lord, be giving me this water, that I may not be thirsting, neither coming to this place to draw."

<sup>16</sup> Jesus is saying to her, "Go, summon your husband and come to this place." The woman answered and said to Him, "I have no husband."

<sup>17</sup> Jesus is saying to her, "You said ideally that 'I have no husband,' <sup>18</sup> for you have had five husbands, and he whom you now have is not your husband: this you have declared truly."

<sup>19</sup> The woman is saying to Him, "Lord, I behold that thou art <sup>20</sup> a prophet. Our fathers worship in this mountain, and you are saying that in Jerusalem is the place where one must be worshipping."

<sup>21</sup> Jesus is saying to her, <sup>22</sup> "Believe Me, woman, that the hour is coming when neither in this mountain nor in Jerusalem will you be worshipping the Father. You are worshipping that of which you are not aware; we are worshipping that of which we are aware, seeing <sup>23</sup> that salvation is of the Jews. But the hour is coming and now is, when the true worshippers will be worshipping the Father in spirit and truth, for the Father also is seeking such to be worshipping Him. <sup>24</sup> God is spirit, and those who are worshipping Him must be worshipping in spirit and truth."

<sup>25</sup> The woman is saying to Him, "We are aware that Messiah is coming, Who is termed 'Christ'. Whenever that One should be coming He will be informing us of all things." <sup>26</sup> Jesus is saying to her, "I Who am speaking to you, am He."

 27 TALKING to-YOU AND ON this CAME

East it was not proper for a man to speak to a woman. Only such an excuse as a drink of water made it possible for Him to address her at all.

<sup>28</sup> The fruitfulness of God's grace shines forth in this narrative. Her need was great and it became the measure of her satisfaction. Nicodemus knew little lack and did not feel constrained to tell his joy to his friends and neighbors. We know of none who were reached through his efforts. But this poor woman is so filled with joy that she forgets how her message reflects on her own sad life. Here was a Man Who knew all her sordid past, and yet she did not shun Him! His grace had captured her heart and filled it overfull. She must share her joy with others. Her fervor was infectious. The men of the city did not murmur at the morals of the messenger, but marveled at her message. She did not ask them to believe her, but constrained them to come and hear Him. Such are the blessed results when grace grows in the fertile field of sin.

<sup>31</sup> Perhaps the most notable result of this marvelous meeting was the satisfaction which it brought to Christ. And this is still more marvelous when we reflect that it is the indirect result of the most sordid of sins. Throughout His ministry He emphasized the fact that sinners were a necessary complement to His message of love and grace, but this seems to be all unheeded in this self-righteous generation. Sin is a necessary factor in the revelation of God to man and indirectly essential to the satisfaction of His love. Love cannot be lavished on those who are deserving. But to be undeserving presupposes sin and all its train of evils.

There can be no Saviour without a sinner, no Healer apart from sickness, no Justifier where there is no unrighteousness, no Reconciler unless first there be enmity. Let us enjoy the great satisfaction of knowing that the evil influences in the world are not merely beneath the control of God so that they cannot get beyond bounds but their limited exercise provides the most potent ingredient, not only in the ultimate bliss of His creatures, but in that of the Creator.

<sup>27</sup> And at this His disciples came, and they marveled that He spoke with a woman. Howbeit, no one said to Him, "What art Thou seeking?" or "Why art Thou speaking with her?" The woman, then, leaves her water pot and came away into the city, and is saying to the men, "Come hither! Lo! there is a Man Who told me all whatever I do. Is not this the Christ?" Then they came out of the city and came to Him.

<sup>33</sup> The disciples, then, said to one another, "No one brings Him aught to eat?" Jesus is saying to them, "My food is that I should be doing the will of Him Who sends Me, and should be perfecting His work."

<sup>35</sup> Are you not saying that 'It is still four months and the harvest is coming'? Lo! I am saying to you, Lift up your eyes and gaze on the countryside, seeing that they
<sup>36</sup> are white for harvest already. And he who is reaping is getting wages and is gathering fruit for eonian life, that the sower and the reaper
<sup>37</sup> likewise may be rejoicing. For in this is the saying true, that 'One is <sup>38</sup> sowing and another is reaping'. I commission you to reap that for which you have not toiled. Others have toiled and you have entered into their toil."

<sup>39</sup> Now many of the Samaritans of that city believe into Him because of the word of the woman, testifying that "He told me all whatever

<sup>40</sup> The first sign, at 'Cana, signifies the blessing of Israel in the kingdom. This, the second sign, is also at Cana, hence is also concerned with the coming kingdom. The wine prefigured the joy of the favored nation. This second sign foreshadows the healing of that nation. The effect of human government is aptly figured by a burning fever. Never was this more evident than after the great European conflict: The delirium, the weakness, the oppression, the dread of death, possesses the nations. It will be far worse at the time of the end. It will not be cured by human medicaments, but by the coming of Christ. The seventh hour is suggestive of the seventh seal, and the seventh trumpet which proclaims that the world kingdom became our Lord's and His Christ's . . . (Un. 11<sup>15</sup>). Christ is the Way and the Truth and the Life. He will assuage the pain and unrest which possesses Israel today. He will change their feverish delirium into a quiet restful peace.

<sup>49</sup> "Lord, descend!" is the only cure for the earth's political ills. The resort to arms has not healed but rather aggravated the sores which caused it. Instead of being the last war it seems to be the seed of further conflict. Even if the war weary world should patch up a truce, it would not last. There is no other cure but "Lord, descend!"

This sign does not signify blessing to the nations now, during Israel's defection. At present the fever of the nations continues unabated and all our blessings are spiritual and celestial. The fact that the courtier was connected with the king, suggests that the rule of Israel over the nations is in view, and that they are included in the blessing. The Lord does not visit the son, but heals him at a distance. So He will deal with the nations in the millennial era. When He comes for us we are snatched away to meet Him in the air and enter His very presence, and remain with Him, and share His heavenly rule for the eons. The nations on earth in that day will not be so highly blessed.

<sup>40</sup> I do." As, then, the Samaritans came together to Him, they asked Him to remain with them. And He <sup>41</sup> remains there two days. And many more believe because of His <sup>42</sup> word. Besides, to the woman they said that "We are believing no longer because of your speaking, for we have heard Him, and we are aware that this truly is the Saviour of the world, the Christ."

<sup>46</sup> Jesus came again, then, into Cana of Galilee, where He makes the water wine. And there was a certain courtier whose son was in- <sup>47</sup> firm in Capernaum. This one, hearing that Jesus is arriving in Galilee, out of Judea, came away to Him and asked Him that He may be descending and should be healing his son, for he was about to <sup>48</sup> be dying. Jesus, then, said to Him, "If you should not be perceiving signs and miracles, you should under no circumstances be believ- <sup>49</sup> ing." The courtier is saying to Him, "Lord, descend ere my little <sup>50</sup> boy dies!" Jesus is saying to him. "Go. Your son is living." And the man believes in the word which Jesus said to him, and went.

<sup>1</sup> The third sign brings before us another picture of Israel before and after His advent. They are not only joyless, but weak, infirm through the flesh (Ro. 8<sup>3</sup>), unable to put into practise the precepts of that holy law which had been given to them. They cannot walk in the commandments. The occasional presence of a prophet sent from God stirred them up and recalled them to righteousness. But it had been a long time since a prophet had risen in Israel and they became almost hopeless of such help. They lay in the portico, outside. Christ is the Door.

Here we have Israel under the old covenant, which they are powerless to fulfill. Their infirmity followed the breaking of its precepts (<sup>14</sup>). It was given to teach them the excessive sinfulness of sin, and, by transforming sin into transgression, show them their utter helplessness to fulfill His will apart from His enabling grace.

The sign signifies that none other than Messiah had given strength to the infirm man, even as He will do for the whole nation when He confirms a new covenant with them, in the days of His coming. Then, like the infirm man, they will have a due sense of their own impotence, and will be looking for some one outside of themselves to introduce them into the sphere of God's healing power. But, as it will be in the future, His Word will be sufficient to turn their weakness into strength. He will put His law in their inward parts, and write it on their hearts . . . He will forgive their iniquity and remember their sin no more (Jer. 31<sup>33,34</sup>).

In that day, instead of ineffectual efforts to fulfill the law, and being dispersed among the nations for their failure, He will gather them together from the peoples, and gather them from all of the lands in which they have been scattered and give them the land of Israel. And He will give them one heart, and put a new spirit within them. He will take away their stony heart and give them a heart of flesh, to walk in His statutes (Eze. 11<sup>17-20</sup>).

port, saying that his boy is living.
<sup>52</sup> He, then, ascertained from them the hour in which he was better. And they said, then, to him that "Yesterday at the seventh hour [about one o'clock] the fever leaves him." The father knew, then, that it is in that hour in which Jesus said to him, "Your son is living." And he believes, he and his whole house.

<sup>3</sup> In these were laid down a multitude of the infirm, blind, lame, withered, waiting for the stirring <sup>4</sup> of the water, for a messenger of the Lord at a certain season bathed in the pool and disturbed the water. The first one, then, who steps in after the disturbance of the water, became sound, whatsoever disease held him.

<sup>5</sup> Now there was a certain man there having been in his infirmity
<sup>6</sup> thirty-eight years. Jesus, perceiving this one lying and knowing that he has already spent much time, is saying to him, "Do you
<sup>7</sup> want to become sound?" The infirm man answered Him, "Lord, I have no man that, whenever the water may be disturbed, should be casting me into the pool. Now while I am coming another is stepping

 LIFT-YOU THE PALLET OF-YOU AND

<sup>10</sup> The day on which the cure was effected indicates that its fulfillment will find place in that great sabbatism that remains for God's people of the Circumcision (Heb. 4<sup>9</sup>). As a pallet was a mere bundle of bedding, the only burden which the Lord put upon the man who had been infirm was the means of rest. The Jews had no rest in their spirits even on the sabbath. So we have the astonishing absurdity of Jews striving to take away the means of rest on the plea that it was work! They, rather, were breaking the sabbath. They did not hesitate to try to kill Him, no matter what the day might be. This is one of the delusions which blinds all who seek to keep the law. They do not allow themselves real rest even on the sabbath, and those who are burdened with the rest of God are deemed lawbreakers. All rest for man can only be based on God's work.

<sup>18</sup> The charge of equality with God brings out a clear statement of the relationship of the Son to the Father. Of Himself the Son is unable to do anything. He does not claim divine power independent of the Father. Neither does He claim to exercise His own will. That is God's prerogative (<sup>30</sup>). As He has neither the ability nor the will of the Father, the charge of making Himself equal with God was false. Nevertheless, because He did not exercise His own will and because He did nothing except by the power and sanction of the Father, and was sent and commissioned by Him, He is entitled to all the honor due to the Father, for only thus can the Father receive the homage of His creatures. The healing of the impotent man was done by the power and will of the Father. If it was a desecration of the sabbath, then the Father was responsible.

How few today really enter into God's rest! His grace and love are bartered for so much faithfulness or service. Instead of the exultant consciousness of His settled smile, there is a constant striving to do something to appease His wrath or fulfill His imaginary demands. God will not have our hands without our hearts. He does not want us to work for Him. He wishes to work through us.

ately the man became sound, and he was roused and picks up his pallet and walked.

<sup>10</sup> Now it was the sabbath on that day. The Jews, then, said to him who has been cured, "It is the sabbath, and it is not allowed you to pick up your pallet!" Yet he answered them, "He Who makes me sound, that One said to me, 'Pick up your pallet and walk'." <sup>12</sup> Then they ask him, "Who is the man who said to you, 'Pick up your pallet and walk'?"

<sup>13</sup> Now he who is being healed had not perceived Who He is, for Jesus evades him, a throng being in the place. After these things Jesus is finding him in the sanctuary, and said to him, "Lo! you have become sound. By no means be sinning longer, lest something worse should be coming to you."

<sup>15</sup> And the man, then, came away and informs the Jews that Jesus is <sup>16</sup> He Who makes him sound. And because of this the Jews persecuted Jesus and sought to kill Him, seeing that He did these things on <sup>17</sup> a sabbath. Yet Jesus answers them, "My Father is working hitherto, <sup>18</sup> and I am working." Therefore, then, the Jews sought the more to kill Him, seeing that He not only annulled the sabbath, but said His own Father also is God, making Himself equal to God.

<sup>19</sup> Then Jesus answers and said to them, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, the Son can be doing nothing of Himself if it is not what He should be observing the Father doing, for whatever He may be doing, this the Son also is

One MAY-BE-DOING these AND THE SON

<sup>20</sup> The Father's fondness for the Son is one of the most intimate and delightful revelations of holy writ. The fondness is not the love which flows out to those least deserving it, but the affection founded on the fellowship of purpose and of work, and agreeable association. It is liking rather than love. It is the great Master Workman initiating His Associate into His great designs.

<sup>21</sup> To appreciate fully the greatness of the work of the Son we must grasp the fact that He is more than the Resurrection. He is the Resurrection and the Life (11<sup>25</sup>). Great as resurrection is, vivification far surpasses it. Resurrection is for the dead. Vivification is for the living or those who have been raised (11<sup>26</sup>). Resurrection imparts physical life, subject to decay and death. Vivification is the life abundant. Those who have it do not die for the eons. All who are in the tombs shall hear His voice, yet for some it will be a resurrection of judgment, for others it will be a resurrection of life. As all resurrection implies life in its ordinary sense, the resurrection of life must impart life in a superlative sense.

<sup>22</sup> Judgment is not, in itself, condemnation. It consists in setting things to rights. It is the prerogative of the Son to correct all wrongs, whether done to God or man. He is the Supreme Arbiter and Adjudicator of the universe. All men must submit their cases to His decision. Hence the honors due to God are accorded Him. As the accredited representative of the Father all affronts He receives are affronts to the Father Who sends Him.

<sup>25</sup> This is vivification, for only those who hear shall live. It is for those who believe. It will be fulfilled in the former resurrection (Un. 20<sup>6</sup>).

<sup>20</sup> doing likewise. For the Father is fond of the Son and is showing Him all that He is doing.

And greater works than these will He be showing Him, that you may be marveling. For even as the Father is rousing the dead and vivifying ~~them~~, thus the Son also is vivifying whom He will. For neither is the Father judging anyone, but has given all judgment to the Son, that all may be honoring the Son, according as they are honoring the Father. He who honors not the Son is not honoring the Father Who sends Him.

<sup>24</sup> Verily, verily, I am saying to you that he who is hearing My word and believing in Him Who sends Me has eonian life, and is not coming into judgment, but has proceeded out of death into life.

<sup>25</sup> Verily, verily, I am saying to you that the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall be hearing the voice of the Son of God, and those who hear shall be living. For even as the Father has life in Himself, thus also He gives to the Son to have life in Himself.

<sup>27</sup> And He gives Him authority to be doing judgment, seeing that He is a son of mankind. Marvel not at this, seeing that the hour is coming in which all who are in the tombs will be hearing His voice, and those who do good things shall be going out into a resurrection of life, yet those who commit bad into a resurrection of judgment.

<sup>30</sup> I can do nothing of Myself. According as I am hearing am I judging; and My judgment is just, seeing that I am not seeking My will, but the will of Him Who sends Me.

 MAY-BE-wITNESSING ABOUT MYSELF THE

<sup>31</sup> The usual rendering, "If I bear witness of Myself My witness is not true", is not true! The Lord Himself insisted, on another occasion, that His testimony concerning Himself was true. "And if I should be testifying about Myself, My testimony is true . . ." (Jn. 8:14). He was not like other men who need references from others to establish the truth of their own account of themselves. Though John the baptist had come for the very purpose of bearing witness to the Coming One, yet He is not dependent on any human testimony whatever.

The credibility of Christ's account concerning Himself may be tested in two ways, by His acts and by His fulfillment of the scriptures. John the baptist did no signs or miracles, but He did many, every one of which was an attestation to His messianic claims. The sign under discussion is an example of this. The correspondence between the thirty-eight years of Israel's wanderings after the spying out of the land and the length of time the infirm man had suffered implies that the One Who can bring Israel into the kingdom is present. The very point to which they objected—healing on the Sabbath—should have spoken in His favor, for when Israel is healed it will be the great millennial sabbatism for them.

<sup>39</sup> The Jews prided themselves greatly on being the depository of the oracles of God, and on knowing His will. How could they fail to see in Him the long promised Messiah? Does it not seem strange that He should ask them to search the Scriptures. They did search them to disprove His claims (<sup>752</sup>), but their search was neither accurate nor honest. Instead of finding that Isaiah (9:1-2) foretold His ministry in Galilee, they were offended at it and used it against Him. They searched and found that Christ should be born in Bethlehem, and inferred without reason that that should be His home as well. We, as well as they, need to search and believe accurately, honestly, whole-heartedly, if we are to enjoy the fullness there is in the scriptures.

<sup>41</sup> Who else could say this? The true servant of God may be known by this mark. Is he seeking to please men or God? Popularity is often a mark of apostasy.

cerning Myself, is My testimony
<sup>32</sup> not true? There is another who is testifying concerning Me, and I am aware that the testimony which he is testifying concerning <sup>33</sup> Me is true. You have dispatched to John, and he has testified to the <sup>34</sup> truth. Yet I am not getting the testimony from a man, but I am saying these things that you may be
<sup>35</sup> saved. He was the lamp, burning and appearing, yet you will exult an hour in its light.

<sup>36</sup> Now I have a greater testimony than John's, for the works which the Father has given Me that I should be perfecting them, the works themselves which I am doing are testifying concerning Me that the Father has commissioned <sup>37</sup> Me. And the Father Who sends Me, He has testified concerning Me. You have neither heard His voice at any time nor have you seen His <sup>38</sup> appearance. And you have not His word remaining in you, seeing that you are not believing the One Whom He commissions.

<sup>39</sup> Be searching the scriptures, seeing that in them you are supposing you have eonian life, and those are they which are testifying concerning <sup>40</sup> Me, and you will not be coming to Me that you may have life.

<sup>42</sup> men. But I know you, that you have not the love of God in yourselves. I have come in the name of My Father, and you are not getting Me. If another should come in his own name, him you will get.

We know that man shall not be living on bread alone, but on every declaration going out through God's mouth (Mt. 4<sup>4</sup>). The coming eon will be a time of plenty (Amos 9<sup>13</sup>), but the life of the world is not sustained by the stomach, but by the head and heart. It comes from the knowledge of God. In the day when Jehovah shall acquire the remnant of His people, the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah, as the waters cover the sea (Isa. 11<sup>9-11</sup>). Such was the spiritual dearth in the nation when our Lord came the first time that their spiritual sustenance was but a thousandth part of what it should be and what it will be when Messiah comes. The feeding of the multitude is a sign of His presence.

A comparison of this sign with the feeding of the four thousand is startling and instructive (Mt. 15<sup>32-38</sup>; Mk. 8<sup>1-9</sup>). God's provision comes in inverse ratio to human help. When seven loaves and some fishes were used to feed four thousand they gathered seven hampers full of fragments. Surely when only five loaves and two fishes are distributed among five thousand the remnants will be scarce! Not so! For, after feeding the larger number with the smaller provision, there is a larger surplus left. Seven loaves among four thousand left seven hampers. Twelve large panniers remained after the five thousand were fed with only five loaves. And, while the hampers were full, the panniers were packed, crammed to their utmost. It is evident that, the less there is of human help, the greater is His grace. This principle applies to His dealings with Israel and the world at the coming of Christ. The spiritual plenty of that day will not be approached gradually by natural development, by character building and education, but by a miraculous diffusion and multiplication of the knowledge of God. In its personal application, we may deduce that the possession of natural talents is not essential to God's operations. He prefers a famine, where He can furnish food, to a feast where His hand is not needed and His heart is unheeded. He can use the humblest means and mediums to accomplish His miracles.

<sup>45</sup> Be not supposing that I shall be accusing you to the Father. He who is accusing you to the Father <sup>46</sup> is Moses, in whom you rely. For if you believed in Moses, you would believe in Me, for he writes <sup>47</sup> concerning Me. Now if you are not believing in his writings, how will you be believing in My declarations?"

<sup>8</sup> One of His disciples, Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, is saying to Him, "There is a lad here who has five barley cakes and two food fishes. But what are these for <sup>10</sup> so many?" Yet Jesus said, "Make the people lean back." Now there was much grass in the place. The people then lean back, the men in number about five thousand. <sup>11</sup> Then Jesus took the bread, and, giving thanks, He distributes it to

<sup>15</sup> Exactly a year later (12:12-16) He presented Himself to them as their King. This effort to make Him King was premature and arose from the fact that they had not comprehended the significance of the sign. They had not been filled with the knowledge of God, the true sustenance, but with perishable provisions. His kingdom is not food and drink (Ro. 14:17). It will not be established by human hands, but by divine power. It will not be set up in man's day, but in Jehovah's day. Most significantly He retires into a mountain alone and His disciples descend to the sea. So He later ascended to His heavenly throne, while His followers were dispersed among the nations.

16-21 Compare Mt. 14:22-33; Mk. 6:45-52.

<sup>16</sup> The parallel is continued. Israel is now in darkness, tossed about by the raging sea of the nations, which has been stirred up by the spiritual forces of wickedness who rule the world during the absence of the Messiah. The Jews will be scattered among the nations and hated and persecuted with the utmost cruelty and injustice and inhumanity. It is evident to all who have studied their history that there must be some cause which cannot be seen. Just as the wind lashed the waves of Galilee into a fury and threatened to drown the fearful disciples, so malignant spirit forces are at work, stirring up hatred to the Jews, for they know God's purpose concern-those lying back at table. Likewise also of the food fish, as much as they wanted.

<sup>12</sup> Now as they are filled, He is saying to His disciples, "Gather the surplus fragments, that nothing <sup>13</sup> should be lost." They gathered them then, and pack twelve panniers with fragments of the five barley cakes which are superfluous for those who were fed. The men, then, perceiving the sign which Jesus does, said that "This truly is the Prophet Who is coming into the world!"

<sup>15</sup> Jesus, then, knowing that they are about to come and snatch Him, that they should be making Him king, retires again into the mountain Himself alone. Now as it became evening, His disciples descend to the sea. And stepping into the ship, they came to the other side of the sea to Capernaum.

And it had already become dark, and Jesus had not as yet come to them. Besides the sea was roused <sup>18</sup> by the blowing of a great wind. As, then, they have rowed about twenty-five or thirty stadia [2.87—3.44 miles] they are beholding Jesus walking on the sea, and coming to be near the ship, and they were <sup>20</sup> afraid. Yet He is saying to them, <sup>21</sup> "It is I. Be not afraid!" They wanted, then, to take Him into the ship. And immediately the ship came to be at the land to which they went.

<sup>22</sup> On the morrow the throng standing on the other side of the sea perceived that no other boat was there except one, and that Jesus did not ing the nation, and resent it, and would prevent it if they could. For this reason men persecute the Jews without reason, and both men and demons carry out the doom they decreed for themselves when they cried that His blood be on them and on their children (Mt. 27<sup>25</sup>).

But when Christ comes He will still the wind and the waves and bring them to their desired haven. He will bind Satan (Un. 20<sup>2</sup>) and judge the nations (Mt. 25<sup>31-46</sup>), and establish the kingdom (Un. 11<sup>15</sup>). Then, and not till then, will His word be fully fulfilled, "It is I, be not afraid!" This is the fifth sign.

<sup>26</sup> The miracle of feeding the five thousand brought the Lord to the highest pitch of His popularity. Up to this time He had not been despised and rejected. The turning point came when He filled them with food, and they were too blind to see its significance. Now that He explains this to them, they stop following Him.

He is not flattered by the large following which flocks after Him, and does not hesitate to offend them by disclosing their own hearts to them. They came to be filled with food and cared nothing for the spiritual sustenance for which it stood. They wanted food and needed faith. Instead of reading this sign and recognizing the Messiah, the Son of God, they actually asked Him for a sign! He had just given them that. They further display their blindness by reminding Him of the manna which God gave their forefathers in the wilderness (Ex. 16; Ps. 78<sup>23-25</sup>). The true Manna was with them and they ask Him for a sign such as Moses gave! He Himself was all that the manna signified.

<sup>28</sup> After being fed gratuitously, and having heard that God would give them the true bread, we would expect them to see that God had not put a price on His presents. But, instead of this, like Jacob their forefather, they try to strike a bargain with God. Blind pride demands that they do something. Thus today, though man is taught in all spheres how dependent he is on what God does, the moment he gets into the presence of God, it is "what must I do?" Faith, not deeds, is what God demands.

enter the ship together with His disciples, but His disciples came <sup>23</sup> away alone. But boats out of Tiberias came near the place where they ate the bread for which the
<sup>24</sup> Lord gave thanks. When, then, the throng perceived that Jesus is not there, neither His disciples, they step into the ships and came to
<sup>25</sup> Capernaum, seeking Jesus. And finding Him on the other side of the sea, they said to Him, "Rabbi, when camest Thou to be here?"

<sup>26</sup> Jesus answered them and said, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, you are seeking Me, not that you perceived signs, but that you ate of the bread and are satisfied.
<sup>27</sup> Be not working for the food which is perishing, but for food which is remaining for eonian life, which the Son of Mankind will be giving to you, for this One God, the Father, seals." They said, then, to Him, "What may we be doing that we may be working the <sup>29</sup> works of God?" Jesus answered and said to them, "This is the work of God, that you should be believing into One Whom He commissions."

<sup>30</sup> They said, then, to Him, "What sign, then, are you doing, that we may be perceiving and should be believing you? What are you
<sup>31</sup> working? Our fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, according as it is written, 'He gives them bread
<sup>32</sup> out of heaven to be eating.' " Jesus, then, said to them, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, Moses has not given you the bread out of heaven, but My Father is giving you the true Bread out of heaven, <sup>33</sup> for the Bread of God is He Who is

<sup>34</sup> Eating to supply the demands of physical hunger and thirst is but a symbol of the spiritual satisfaction apart from which life is debased to mere existence. Desires and aspirations for spiritual sustenance can never be finally filled apart from the One Who came down from heaven. It is only as we have every heart hunger satisfied in Him that we cease to feel the pangs of famine. It is only as we find all our spiritual aspirations realized in God's Son that our thirst is assuaged. How slow we are to learn that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceeds out of God's mouth! It is because Christ is set forth as the Word in this evangel that so much is made of eating and drinking.

<sup>37</sup> How marvelously serene and sure are God's operations! The Jews may murmur and misunderstand Him, but how could they do otherwise? There was nothing in Him to attract them to Him. He is not moved by their murmurs, but tells them plainly that God alone, in His sovereign pleasure, picks out those who come to Him. They are a gift from the Father to the Son. Such not only desire to come to Him, but cannot fail to reach Him, and when they find Him, He counts them as precious presents from His Father, prized much for themselves but most for the Giver. Nothing can possibly arise to estrange Him from them. They are not only His for life, but He will rob death itself to restore them to Him in the resurrection.

<sup>40</sup> That the life here bestowed on the believer is not everlasting is clear from the context, for it is not continuous, but waits until the resurrection. Those who received this life died. Their life lasted only a few years. But they will be raised to live for the eons. The life is eonian, not everlasting.

<sup>41</sup> The great truth which begins and pervades John's account, that the Lord was the Logos, and corresponds to the One Who appeared to Adam and to Abraham and to Moses and to Isaiah, Who was known as Elohim and Jehovah and Adonai—the God in Whom they boasted—never reached their hearts.

<sup>34</sup> They said, then, to Him, "Lord!
<sup>35</sup> always give us this bread!" Jesus, then, said to them, "I am the Bread of life. He who is coming to Me should under no circumstances be hungering, and he who is believing into Me should under no circumstances be thirsting at <sup>36</sup> any time. But I said to you that you have also seen Me and you are <sup>37</sup> not believing in Me. Everyone whom the Father is giving Me shall be reaching to Me, and he who is coming to Me I should under no
<sup>38</sup> circumstances be casting out, seeing that I have descended from heaven, not that I should be doing My will, but the will of Him Who <sup>39</sup> sends Me. Now this is the will of Him Who sends Me, that everyone whom He has given to Me, of these I should be losing none, but shall be <sup>40</sup> raising him in the last day. For this is the will of My Father, that everyone who is beholding the Son and is believing into Him may have eonian life, and I shall be raising him in the last day."

<sup>41</sup> The Jews, then, murmured concerning Him, that He said, "I am the Bread which descends out of <sup>42</sup> heaven." And they said "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we are acquainted with? How is he then saying that 'I have descended out of <sup>43</sup> heaven'?" Jesus, then, answered and said to them, "Be not murmuring against one another.
<sup>44</sup> No one can come to Me if the Father Who sends Me should not be drawing him. And I shall be raising him in the last day. It is written in the prophets, 'And they shall all be taught of God.' Everyone, <sup>47</sup> This passage should be studied carefully in order to correct the erroneous impression that believers have "eternal" or "everlasting" life. Eternal may be applied only to that which had no beginning and will have no end. No one but God has eternal life. Everlasting should be used only of that which continues without intermission endlessly. Not a single one of the Lord's personal followers is alive today. None of them received "everlasting" life. They are dead. If everlasting life permits of interruption by death now, why not in the resurrection also? All of these expressions denote definite periods of time, measured by eons, or ages. Eonian life begins in the next eon.

Now it is evident that the Lord had no thought of a life lasting for ever. In that case how could He be raising him in the last day? The life here spoken of was to be bestowed in resurrection. There could be no resurrection apart from a previous death. In short, our Lord spoke in such a way that we are sure that "everlasting" life, so-called, does not commence until He calls His own from the grave.

As this life has a definite beginning, it also has an end. But as the end does not come until death is abolished, it changes from "eonian" life into actual "everlasting" life. This will be the portion of all. It is not the special privilege of the believer. The peculiar kind of life promised to faith begins at Christ's presence, when those who are His will be vivified, and continues through the last two eons, embracing the millennium and the succeeding eon in the new earth, until the eons end, and the last enemy, death, is abolished. Hence the life received in vivification is actually "everlasting", though never so called in the Word of God.

then, who hears from the Father and is learning the truth is coming to Me. Not that anyone has seen the Father, except the One being from God, This One has seen the Father. Verily, verily, I am saying to you, he who is believing into Me has eonian life. I am the Bread of life. Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness and died. This is the Bread which is descending out of heaven that any one may be eating of it and may not be dying. I am the living Bread which descends out of heaven. If anyone should be eating of this Bread, he shall be living for the eon. Now the Bread also, which I shall be giving for the sake of the life of the world, is My flesh."

<sup>53</sup> Jesus, then, said to them, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, if you should not be eating the flesh of the Son of Mankind and drinking His blood, you have no eonian life in yourselves. He who is masticating My flesh and drinking My blood has eonian life, and I shall be raising him at the last day, for My flesh is the true food, and My blood is the true drink."

<sup>56</sup> He who is masticating My flesh and drinking My blood is remaining in Me, and I in him. According as the living Father commissions Me, I, also, am living because of the Father. And he who is masticating Me, even he will be living because of Me. This is the Bread which descends out of heaven; not according as the fathers ate and died. He who is masticating this Bread shall be living for the eon."

<sup>56</sup> Just as Nicodemus failed to see the figure when our Lord spoke to him about the new birth, so now His followers fail to understand when He speaks of feeding on His flesh and blood. There is a subtle irony here, for their religion was primarily a fleshly one. Their title to blessing from Messiah was based entirely on their blood relationship to Him. In that case, if He is to give Himself to them, He must give His physical flesh and actual blood. They can see how preposterous such an idea is, but do not discern how it cuts from beneath them the whole foundation of blessing through a physical channel. They should have seen that life divine is not transmitted by flesh but by spirit. Not material forms, but spiritual realities count with a God Who is spirit. His thoughts, as conveyed to them by the Lord's declarations, are the vital principle from which all life and felicity flow.

<sup>70</sup> Peter and the rest of the apostles probably had the impression that they had chosen Christ, and in this crisis, they seem to be confirming their choice of Him. With this background, how strange to hear Him reverse their thoughts and emphatically affirm His choice of them! On another occasion He asserted that they had not chosen Him. He reserves the right to choose His own. A realization of this principle gives strength and stability to vacillating mortals, who look within and find no soundness, and look without on turmoil and strife, and fear for the future of which they know nothing. To be chosen by One Who has power to keep and knows all gives satisfaction and rest. It is infinitely more precious to be His choice than to have the questionable satisfaction of feeling that we were free to choose Him. If we were, we would have chosen another. There is none that seeketh after God.

<sup>70</sup> Judas was one of "the elect". The Lord "elected" or chose him while fully aware of his future. It was not Judas who chose Christ and then went back on Him. Indeed, he greatly regretted his action and publicly repudiated it. This Peter did not do. He did not betray his Lord until Satan entered into him.

<sup>61</sup> Now Jesus, being aware in Himself that His disciples are murmuring concerning this, said to them, "Is

<sup>62</sup> this snaring you? If, then, you should be beholding the Son of Mankind ascending where He was

have spoken to you are spirit and <sup>64</sup> are life. But there are some of you who are not believing." For Jesus had perceived from the beginning there are some who are not believing, and who is betraying

<sup>65</sup> Him. And He said, "Therefore have I declared to you that no one can come to Me except it should be

<sup>70</sup> Jesus answered and said to them, "Do I not choose you, the twelve, and of you one is a slanderer?"

<sup>71</sup> Now He said it of Judas of Simon Iscariot, for this man was about to betray Him, being one of the twelve.

<sup>2</sup> There were seven sacred festivals in Israel: the Passover, Firstfruits, Pentecost, Blowing of Trumpets, Day of Propitiation, Tabernacles, and Ingathering. The latter two were both held on the fifteenth day of the seventh month, so that both are referred to here as "Tabernacles". These festivals were typical of God's great dealings with His beloved people Israel. The Passover sets before us the death of God's Lamb. Hence Christ could not be killed at the festival of Tabernacles, for it was not the proper time. Firstfruits typifies His resurrection. Pentecost, fifty days afterward, foreshadowed the work so called in the book of Acts. Blowing of Trumpets and the Day of Propitiation will have their antitypes in the dread judgment period before the thousand years. Tabernacles and Ingathering are the happy harvest festivals, picturing their fullness of blessing in the millennial kingdom. See Lev. 23; Nu. 28<sup>16</sup>; 29; Deut. 16; Neh. 8<sup>13-18</sup>; Zech. 14<sup>16-18</sup>.

This was one of the three times in each year that all the males in Israel were required to appear in the temple in Jerusalem. They were to bring a gift on each occasion. This suggests the three great gifts of God for Israel. At the festival of unleavened bread He gave Himself as the Passover Lamb. At the festival of Pentecost He gave the holy spirit. At the future festival of Tabernacles He will give them the bountiful harvest of His millennial reign. See Deut. 16<sup>15, 16</sup>.

<sup>6</sup> With the foregoing in view, the action of our Lord is full of meaning. It was not the Passover, hence He could not go up openly and invite death. The time for that had not yet been fulfilled. Still, in obedience to the law, and as a private Israelite, He must go, for in Him must both the letter and the spirit of the law be fulfilled.

It is significant that, while we often read of the Passover, only this once is the festival of Tabernacles brought before us, and now He refuses to go. There is no true Tabernacle festival for Israel until after the true Passover has been slain and all the other feasts have had their fulfillment. In all His acts He was consciously in line with God's revelation.

<sup>7</sup> And after these things Jesus walked in Galilee, for He did not want to walk in Judea, seeing that <sup>2</sup> the Jews sought to kill Him. Now the Jews' festival of Tabernacles <sup>3</sup> was near. His brothers, then, said to Him, "Proceed hence and go into Judea, that your disciples also should be beholding your works <sup>4</sup> which you are doing. For no one is doing anything in hiding and he is seeking publicity. If you are doing these things make yourself <sup>5</sup> manifest to the world." For neither did His brothers believe into Him.

<sup>6</sup> Jesus, then, is saying to them, "My time is not as yet present; yet your time is always present, <sup>7</sup> ready. The world cannot be hating you, yet it is hating Me, seeing that I am testifying concerning it <sup>8</sup> that its acts are wicked. You go up to this festival. I am not going up to this festival, seeing that My time has not as yet been fulfilled. <sup>9</sup> Now, saying these things to them, He remains in Galilee.

<sup>10</sup> Yet as His brothers ascend to the festival, then He also ascended, not apparently, but as though in hiding. <sup>11</sup> The Jews, then, sought Him at the festival and said, "Where is <sup>12</sup> he?" And there was much murmuring about Him among the throngs. These, indeed, said that "He is good," yet others said, "No— But he is deceiving the <sup>13</sup> throng." Howbeit no one spoke boldly concerning Him because of fear of the Jews.

<sup>16</sup> Here we have the test of a true teacher. The greatest of all Teachers could easily have formulated a philosophy of His own before which all the wisdom of the ages would sink into insignificance. He could have eclipsed Socrates and Plato, discounted Confucius, silenced all the sages. Yet He did not originate a single doctrine, formulate a single principle, invent a single saying of His own. Though the embodiment of truth, He did not claim to be its source, but only its channel.

"My teaching is not Mine, but His Who sends Me" is the disclaimer of the only One Who ever was qualified to teach the truth. It is the highest achievement of the truth seeker to discover that there is no truth outside of God, and originality is inevitably false unless it conforms with truth already immanent in God—which destroys its originality. Truth is one. Its source is God. Its expression is found in Him Who is the Word of God. Happy is the teacher who distrusts his own thoughts, and discards his own theories, and seeks to submerge his own personality by a constant and continuous contact with the living oracles of God! "My teaching is not Mine" will not be a reluctant, humiliating admission, but an exultant and eager desire to give God the glory for truth beyond our powers of apprehension and utterly foreign to our native faculties.

<sup>19</sup> Sinning men are the same today as ever. The truth is always the signal for strife. This is especially so among those who consider themselves the sole depository of truth. We need not suppose that these Jews had a bad conscience in seeking to kill One Who seemed to be undermining their religion. We know that Saul of Tarsus opposed Him conscientiously. So today, Christendom still crucifies the truth, while loud in its professions of loyalty to the Bible. Indeed, so thoroughly has error saturated the atmosphere that it is practically impossible for any one to view the truth except through the haze of error with which each is surrounded. Only continual contact with God's Word will avail us. Only a close acquaintance with the facts of the originals will save us from the prevailing apostasy.

then, marveled, saying, "How is this one acquainted with letters, <sup>16</sup> not having learned?" Jesus, then, answered them and said, "My teaching is not Mine, but His <sup>17</sup> Who sends Me. If any one should be wanting to be doing His will, he will know concerning the teaching, whether it is of God or I am <sup>18</sup> speaking from Myself. He who is speaking from himself is seeking his own glory, yet He who is seeking the glory of Him Who sends Him, this One is true and there is <sup>19</sup> no injustice in Him. Has not Moses given you the law? And no one of you is doing the law! Why are you seeking to kill Me?"

<sup>20</sup> The throng answered, "You have a demon! Who is seeking to <sup>21</sup> kill you?" Jesus answered and said to them, "I do one act and <sup>22</sup> you all are marveling. Therefore Moses has given you circumcision (not that it is of Moses, but that it is of the fathers) and on a sabbath you are circumcising a man. <sup>23</sup> If a man is getting circumcision on a sabbath lest Moses' law should be annulled, do I raise your bile, seeing that I make a whole man <sup>24</sup> sound on a sabbath? Be not judging by a view, but be judging just judgment."

<sup>28</sup> Perhaps nowhere is the utter futility of human efforts to frustrate God's plans so evident as in this scene. It was God's definite counsel that they should slay Him. This they were all too eager to do. But the feast of Tabernacles was not the fit time for His sacrifice. So He boldly enters the sanctuary, the stronghold of His enemies. The Pharisees send deputies to arrest Him, but they simply do not do it, being restrained by an irresistible reluctance which they could not account for themselves. Like Daniel, He was in the lions' den, but God had shut the lions' mouths.

God uses human wrath for His own ends and restrains its activities to accord with His purpose. He has all his enemies on a leash beyond which they cannot range. Satan himself is limited, and allowed to do only that which will eventuate in good. So it proved in the case of Job, and who can doubt that his case was typical?

<sup>33</sup> When the deputies come to arrest Him, He is not disturbed, but calmly gives an outline of what will happen to Him in the future. It was still six months until the Passover, and He knew they could not arrest Him till then. So He says "Still a little time I am with you." Nor does He acknowledge that they will be successful in taking Him then, for it is His permission, not their power, that accomplishes it. So He simply says "and I am going to Him Who sends Me."

<sup>34</sup> The statement "where I am you cannot be coming" cannot be taken as their everlasting reprobation, for He uses the very same words to His disciples on a later occasion (<sup>13</sup><sup>33</sup>). Indeed, the form of the verb is the present active "be coming", not the indefinite "come". Even the unbeliever enters the presence of Christ in the resurrection of judgment.

<sup>35</sup> The Jews, in our Lord's day, were scattered all over the known earth, but were especially numerous in Egypt. Alexandria rivalled Jerusalem as a center of Jewry, but its culture was strongly Greek.

<sup>37</sup> This last day concluded the cycle of yearly festivals and was a fitting time to foretell the fullness of spiritual blessing which it prefigured.

<sup>28</sup> Jesus, then, cries in the sanctuary, teaching and saying, "You are acquainted with Me also, and you are aware whence I am, and I have not come from Myself, but He Who sends Me is true, with Whom <sup>29</sup> you are not acquainted. Yet I am acquainted with Him, seeing that I am from Him, and He has commissioned Me." They sought, then, to arrest Him, and no one laid a hand on Him, seeing that His hour had not as yet come.

<sup>31</sup> Now many of the throng believe into Him, and said, "When Christ should come, He will be doing no more signs than this Man does!"

<sup>32</sup> Now the Pharisees hear these murmurings of the throng concerning Him, and the chief priests and the Pharisees dispatch deputies that they should be arresting Him.

<sup>33</sup> Jesus, then, said, "Still a little time I am with you, and I am going to Him Who sends Me. You will be seeking Me and you shall not be finding Me. And where I am there you cannot be coming."

<sup>35</sup> The Jews, then, said to themselves, "Whither is He about to go, that we shall not be finding him? He is not about to go to the dispersion of the Greeks and teach the <sup>36</sup> Greeks? What is this word which he said, 'You will be seeking me and you shall not be finding me, and where I am you cannot be coming'?"

<sup>37</sup> Now on the last, the great day of the festival, Jesus stood, and cries, saying, "If any one should be thirsting, let him come to Me and <sup>38</sup> drink. He who is believing into Me, according as the scripture said, out of his bowels shall gush rivers of

<sup>41</sup> Ever since the days of Moses the nation of Israel has been waiting for the Prophet Who was to be like him, and lead the nation out of worse than Egyptian bondage into the heritage of the kingdom. Those who knew Him for that promised Prophet little realized that, as Moses was rejected by his brethren when he first came to deliver them, so the great Antitype of Moses must also be rejected by them.

A prophet, in the Scriptures, is not primarily one who predicts the future, but one who has a message from God. It is a well-nigh universal rule that God's message and its bearer must first be refused. Indeed, the "Prophet like Moses" must follow the footsteps of the type, and, in his first efforts to save His people He must be opposed by the people themselves. This shows us that we must not lay too much stress on human "responsibility" (a term unknown to the Scriptures), for, if the Jews had received the Lord, He would not have been the true Prophet. They were obliged to reject Him!

<sup>41</sup> "Galilee of the nations" and especially the town of Nazareth, were held in contempt by pious Jews. The term "Nazarene" is a term of reproach, never used by His friends. From it could come no Christ. Messiah must be born in Bethlehem, the city of King David, and as they should have known, the birthplace of his greater Son. Let us never be guilty of calling Him a Nazarene, and thus class ourselves with His worst enemies and murderers.

<sup>46</sup> Throughout this account it is the incarnate Word which is before us. The testimony of the deputies is a notable tribute to the supernal nature of that which came from His lips. How lame their excuse must have seemed to the hard hearted Pharisees! Why do they not arrest Him? Why do they not do the duty assigned them? "No man ever speaks thus!" Not His superb looks, or august appearance, but His utterances arrest them, and all power to perform their part vanishes.

<sup>50</sup> Nicodemus, the half-hearted disciple, is afraid to champion His cause boldly, so he seeks to hinder them in their lawless act. But such a weak supporter is soon silenced, and by the very law to which he appealed.

concerning the spirit which those believing into Him were about to get. For holy spirit was not as yet given, seeing that Jesus was not as yet glorified.

<sup>40</sup> Among the throng, then, hearing of these sayings, they said, <sup>41</sup> "This truly is the prophet!" Others said, "This is the Christ!" Yet they said, "For Christ is not coming out of Galilee! Did not the scriptures say that Christ is coming of the seed of David, and from Bethlehem, the village where David <sup>43</sup> was?" There came, then, to be a schism in the throng because of <sup>44</sup> Him. Yet some from among them wanted to arrest Him, but no one laid hands on Him.

<sup>45</sup> The deputies, then, came to the chief priests and Pharisees and they said to them, "Wherefore did

<sup>51</sup> is one of them), "Is our law judging a man, except it should first be hearing from him and may be knowing what he is doing?"
<sup>52</sup> They answered and say to him, "Are you also out of Galilee? Search and perceive that out of Galilee is no prophet being roused."

<sup>8</sup><sup>12</sup> Again, then, Jesus speaks to them, saying, "I am the light of the world. He who is following Me should under no circumstances be walking in darkness, but will be

 Pharisees, then, said to Him, "You are testifying about yourself. Your <sup>14</sup> testimony is not true!" Jesus answered and said to them, "And if I should be testifying about Myself, My testimony is true, seeing that I am aware whence I came and whither I am going, yet you are not aware whence I am coming <sup>15</sup> or whither I am going. You are judging according to the flesh: I <sup>16</sup> am not judging any one. And yet if I should be judging, My judgment is true, seeing that I am not alone, but I and the Father Who <sup>17</sup> sends Me. Yet in this law also of yours it is written, that 'The testi-<sup>18</sup> mony of two men is true.' I am the One testifying about Myself, and the Father Who sends Me is testifying about Me."
<sup>19</sup> They said, then, to Him, "Where is your father?" Jesus answered and said, "You are not acquainted with either Me or My Father. If you were acquainted with Me, you should be acquainted with My Fa-<sup>20</sup> ther also." These declarations He speaks in the treasury, teaching in the sanctuary, and no one arrests Him, seeing that His hour had not as yet come.
<sup>21</sup> He said, then, again to them, "I am going and you will be seeking Me, and you shall be dying in your sin. Where I am going you cannot <sup>22</sup> be coming." The Jews, then, said, "He will not be killing himself, seeing that he is saying, 'Where I am going, you cannot be coming'?"
<sup>23</sup> He said, then, to them, "You are of that which is below, I am of that which is above: you are of this

 8 Now Jesus went to the mount of Olives.

Now Jesus, stooping down, wrote with a finger in the earth. <sup>7</sup> Now as they persisted asking Him, He unbends and said to them, "Let the sinless one of you first be casting a stone at her." And, stooping again, He wrote in the earth. <sup>8</sup> Now those hearing it came out one by one, beginning with the elders, to the last.

And Jesus was left alone, the woman also being in the midst. <sup>10</sup> Unbending, Jesus said to her, "Woman, where are they? Does no one condemn you?" <sup>11</sup> Now she said, "No one, Lord!" Now Jesus said, "Neither am I condemning you! Go! From now on be sinning no longer!"

<sup>53-11</sup> As this passage is not contained in any of the three manuscripts on which the CONCORDANT VERSION is based, it could not be included in our text. Two leaves of Alexandrinus are lost at this point, but a careful calculation of the number of lines shows that the lost leaves did not contain this story. Besides, the evidence of ancient versions and other manuscripts is so much against its retention in the text that no editor gives it a place, unless within brackets.

Nevertheless, the story is so fully in harmony with the grace of Christ that we question whether it could have any other source. Hence we are constrained to class it among the many things which He did of which there is no inspired record, and give the Greek and sublinear, as well as a version, so that no one may have cause to complain of its omission.

said, then, to you, that you shall be dying in your sins. For if you should not be believing Me that I am, you shall be dying in your sins."

<sup>25</sup> They said, then, to Him, "Who are you?" Jesus, then, said to them, "What I am speaking also to <sup>26</sup> you from the beginning. I have much to be speaking and judging concerning you, but the Father Who sends Me is true, and what I hear from Him, these things I am <sup>27</sup> speaking to the world." They know not that He said this to them of the Father.

<sup>28</sup> Jesus, then, said to them again that "Whenever you should exalt the Son of Mankind, then you will know that I am, and from Myself I am doing nothing, but, according as My Father teaches Me, thus I am <sup>29</sup> speaking. And He Who sends Me is with Me. He does not leave Me alone, seeing that I am always doing what is pleasing to Him." At <sup>30</sup> His speaking these things, many believe into Him.

<sup>31</sup> Jesus, then, said to the Jews who have believed in Him, "If you should be remaining in My word, <sup>32</sup> you are truly My disciples, and you will know the truth, and the truth will be making you free."

<sup>33</sup> They answered Him, "We are Abraham's seed, and we have never been slaves of anyone. How are you saying that 'You shall be becoming free'?"

<sup>34</sup> Jesus answered them, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you that everyone who is doing sin, is a <sup>35</sup> slave of sin. Now the slave is not remaining in the house for the eon. The son is remaining for the eon. <sup>36</sup> If, then, the Son should be making you free, you will be really free.

<sup>29</sup> Nothing would so swiftly and surely prove the undoing of an impostor as the claim that he always pleases God. Of all living, only One has been able to stand such a severe test. In the mouth of any one else the claim to perfect obedience would sound preposterous. The very assumption itself would be displeasing to God and derided by men. It would be a proof of spiritual pride. But in His mouth it was perfectly natural. Instead of taking exception to it they seemed struck by the fact and what it involved, and, as a result, believed on Him.

This is one of the glories of Christ which makes Him a solitary figure in the annals of mankind. There have been philosophers and good men, but the best have not been flawless. Indeed, they do not dare to claim absolute perfection. Yet we see this apparently humble peasant of Palestine challenging a hostile world to discover in His acts a single word or work which does not glorify God and benefit man. Whoever should dare to criticise Him condemns himself.

<sup>44</sup> All sin, in the Scriptures, seems to be traced back to the Slanderer or Satan. Adam sinned at his suggestion. He is the father of all that is false. Being a creature of God, it has been a perplexing problem to account for him without incriminating God Himself. It is usual to insist that he was created perfect and, at a later stage, fell into sin. But this is no real relief. The impulse to sin, in that case, came from without instead of within, and it, in turn, demands an explanation. The Slanderer sinned from the beginning. He was a murderer from the beginning. The Scriptures plainly teach that he was created a Slanderer and a Satan.

The solution of the ultimate source of sin lies in its nature. Sin is essentially a mistake. It means to miss the mark, to fall short of a given standard. With this definition in mind, it is easy to see how God could create a creature to sin, if that were necessary to the fulfillment of His purpose. He would not be making any mistake in doing this. He would not sin. On the contrary, if He created Satan perfect, and had no intention or desire that he

<sup>37</sup> I am aware that you are Abraham's seed. But you are seeking to kill Me, seeing that there is no
<sup>38</sup> room for My word in you. I am speaking of what I have seen with My Father. You also, then, are doing what you hear from your father."

<sup>39</sup> They answered and said to Him, "Our father is Abraham." Jesus answered them, "If you are children of Abraham, you would be doing the works of Abraham. Yet
<sup>40</sup> now you are seeking to kill Me, a Man Who has spoken to you the truth which I hear from God. This

They say to Him, "We were not begotten of prostitution! We have one Father, God!"

<sup>42</sup> Then Jesus said to them, "If God were your Father, you should have loved Me, for I came forth and am arriving out of God. For neither have I come of Myself, but <sup>43</sup> He commissions Me. Wherefore you know not My speech, seeing that you cannot hear My word.

<sup>44</sup> You are of your father the Slanderer, and the desires of your father you are wanting to do. He was a man-killer from the beginning, and has not stood in the truth, seeing that truth is not in him. Whenever he should be talking of that which is false, he is talking of his own, seeing that he is a

<sup>45</sup> liar, and the father of it. Yet I—seeing that I am speaking the truth,

<sup>46</sup> you are not believing in Me. Is anyone of you exposing Me concerning sin? If I am telling the truth, wherefore are you not be-should sin, then God did make a mistake. The sinfulness of Satan is the strongest evidence of the sinlessness of God.

The essence of God is love. It demands exercise. God must be made known. He will be a Saviour; His purpose demands the presence of sin. He makes a medium—the Slanderer—to inject the virus into creation. He rescues His creatures and gains their affection. He banishes sin. Sin is His servant. He will justify all sin when He has made it a means of bringing His creatures into heart intimacy with Himself.

<sup>46</sup> What a challenge to the self-righteous Jews! They claimed a sinless God for a father, yet hated His sinless Son. Without any pretentious effort whatever, He calmly went His way without making a single misstep!

<sup>57</sup> The Jews seemed to be utterly unconscious of the great spiritual truths connected with Abraham's family. They claimed physical descent from him, without realizing that Ishmael had the same right. He was the son of Abram's flesh—and unbelief. They were Ishmaelites, slaves of sin in spite of their noble father. They knew nothing of the faith of Abraham which produced Isaac, after the flesh was as good as dead. They failed to see the significance of Abraham's harsh measures with Ishmael. Were he to visit them he would cast them out, just as he had the slave girl Hagar and her son.

<sup>58</sup> The Jehovah Who appeared to Abraham was none other than the Word, which now, having become flesh, was speaking to his apostate descendants. God Himself is invisible. The One that Abraham saw was in the form of God before He descended into the likeness of man (Phil.2<sup>6</sup>). It is important to note that the Logos became flesh. It had an existence previous to this apart from flesh. It had a form, human in appearance, because humanity was created in its likeness. As Elohim, He appears to Adam in the garden, and even after his expulsion. As El Shaddai He appeared to Abraham, and gave him the promises. As Adonai He appeared in Isaiah's vision, pronouncing Israel's doom.

fore you are not hearing, seeing that you are not of God."

<sup>48</sup> The Jews answered and say to Him, "Are we not saying ideally that you are a Samaritan and have a demon?"

<sup>49</sup> Jesus answered and said, "I have no demon, but I am honoring My Father and you are dishonoring Me. Now I am not seeking My glory. There is One Who is seeking and judging. Verily, verily, I am saying to you, if anyone should be keeping My word, he should under no circumstances be beholding death for the eon."

<sup>52</sup> The Jews said to Him, "Now we know that you have a demon. Abraham died, and the prophets, and you are saying, 'If anyone should be keeping My word, he should under no circumstances be tasting death for the eon.' Are you greater than our father Abraham, who died? And the prophets died. What are you making yourself?"

<sup>54</sup> Jesus answered, "If I should be glorifying Myself, My glory is nothing. It is My Father Who is glorifying Me, of Whom you are saying that He is your God. And you know Him not, yet I am acquainted with Him, and if I should be saying that I am not acquainted with Him, I shall be a liar like you. But I am acquainted with Him and

<sup>55</sup> I am keeping His word. Your father Abraham exults that he may become acquainted with My day, and he was acquainted with it and rejoiced."

<sup>57</sup> The Jews, then, said to Him, "You are not yet fifty years, and

<sup>58</sup> you have seen Abraham!" Jesus said to them, "Verily, verily, I am saying to you, ere Abraham came into being, I am." They

<sup>1</sup> The sixth sign brings before us Israel's blindness, and the opening of their eyes when they recognize Him as the One Whom God has commissioned, at His return. It anticipates the crisis of His ministry, which was fast approaching, when He quoted the words of Isaiah, "He hath blinded their eyes, . . . that they should not see with their eyes . . ." (12<sup>40</sup>). The interest is centered in two distinct thoughts, the reason for his blindness, and the means of its removal.

Why was this man born blind? The Jews took it for granted, as many do today, that all evil comes from sin, and that every one is responsible for his own condition. This is absolutely false. Evil and sin are not outside of God's plan. They are essential to the highest happiness of the creature and the greatest glory of the Creator. This man's case was a concrete example. His healing was not because he was blind, but he was blind in order that he might recover sight, and thus God's acts may be manifested and God Himself may become known. This is true of all evil and all sin. God has introduced it into the world in order that He may display His attributes in coping with it and in removing it when its mission has been accomplished. The experience of evil and sin is transient; the memory of it will never pass away, but will always remain as the essential background apart from which God's goodness and grace never could be revealed. God's heart would always remain hidden apart from evil and sin.

If this man's blindness had never been removed it would have revealed God's impotence and hate. So, if evil and sin are eternal, they will throw their darkest shadow upon the character and feelings of God, and thus defeat the very object for which they exist. But they are not eternal. Sin will be repudiated at the conclusion of the eons (Heb. 9<sup>26</sup>). Only in this way can the works of God be manifested. It is useless for us to blame our parents for our sin, for they also inherited it. Even Adam could point to Eve and Eve to the serpent. We should rather thank God for it, and rejoice in the glory that it brings to God.

pick up stones, then, that they should be casting them at Him. Yet Jesus was hid and came out of the sanctuary. And coming through the midst of them, He went and thus passed by.

<sup>2</sup> And His disciples ask Him, saying, "Rabbi, who sinned, this man or his parents, that he should be born
<sup>3</sup> blind?" Jesus answered, "Neither this man nor his parents sinned, but it is that the works of God may <sup>4</sup> be manifested by it. I must be working the works of Him Who sends Me while it is day. Night is coming, when no one can be work-<sup>5</sup> ing. Whenever I may be in the world, I am the light of the
<sup>6</sup> world." Saying these things, He spits on the ground and makes mud of the spittle, and anoints the eyes <sup>7</sup> of the blind with the mud, and said to him, "Go, wash in the pool of Siloam" (which is, being translated, "commissioned"). He came away, then, and washes, and came, observing.

<sup>8</sup> The neighbors, then, and those beholding him formerly (seeing that he was a beggar) said, "Is not this the one who is sitting and beg-<sup>9</sup> ging?" Others said that "This is he." Yet others said, "No, but he is like him." Yet he said that "I am."

<sup>10</sup> They said, then, to him, "How,
<sup>11</sup> then, were your eyes opened?" He answered and said, "The Man Who is termed 'Jesus' makes mud and anoints my eyes, and said to me, 'Go to Siloam pool and wash.' Coming away, then, and washing,

<sup>4</sup> Adam in innocence knew no good. He could not appreciate what God had done for him. The only way he could know of good was to eat of the tree, which, however, also gave the knowledge of evil. The knowledge of good and of evil are inseparable.

The blind man represents Israel. Why were they blind? Paul tells us in the eleventh of Romans. God locks all up together in stubbornness, that He may be merciful to all (Ro.11<sup>32</sup>). Because they were blinded they refused their Messiah and thus made it possible for God to pour out the riches of His grace on the nations. Their blindness makes it possible for Him to save them with a great salvation when He once again takes them to Himself, and thus He engages their affections. Those who see, revile Him. The blind man worships Him.

<sup>6</sup> Before healing the blind man He increases his blindness by covering his eyes with mud. What does this mean? It corresponds with His treatment of Israel. He finds the nation blind, but instead of healing them then, He fulfills the saying of Isaiah, "He has blinded their eyes and callouses their heart, lest they may be perceiving with their eyes, and should be apprehending with their heart, and turn about, and I should be healing them" (12<sup>40</sup>). Siloam means "commissioned". He continually referred to Himself as the One Whom God had sent. When the Lord appears in glory, then they will wash in Siloam and see Him Who has been commissioned by God for their blessing. The blind man's spiritual recovery corresponded to his physical healing, for he said "Except this Man were from God, He could be doing nothing" (<sup>33</sup>).

<sup>13</sup> The Pharisees were the blindest of the blind. Though the most zealous and religious of all the Jewish sects, their self confidence and hypocrisy made them the bitterest enemies of Christ and the truth. They claimed to be the spiritual leaders of the nation, hence receive the greater judgment. They boasted that they were not blind like the rest so that their sin remained. The disciples were confident that either the blind man or his parents had sinned; the Lord shows them that to him "Where is that one?" He is saying, "I am not aware."

<sup>14</sup> was blind, to the Pharisees. Now it was on a sabbath day that Jesus makes mud and opens up his eyes.
<sup>15</sup> Again, then, the Pharisees also asked him how he recovers sight. Now he said to them, "He places mud on my eyes, and I wash, and <sup>16</sup> I am observing." Some of the Pharisees, then, said, "This man is not from God, seeing that he is not keeping the sabbath." Yet others said, "How can a man who is a sinner be doing such signs?" And there was a schism among them.

<sup>17</sup> They are saying, then, again to him who once was blind, "What are you saying about him, that he opens your eyes?" Now he said
<sup>18</sup> that "He is a prophet." The Jews, then, do not believe about him, that he was blind and recovers sight, till they summon the parents
<sup>19</sup> of him who recovers sight. And they ask them, saying, "Is this your son, of whom you say that he was born blind? How, then, is he at present observing?"

<sup>20</sup> His parents, then, answered and say, "We are aware that this is our son and that he was born blind.

<sup>21</sup> Yet how he is now observing, we are not aware, or who opens his eyes we are not aware. Ask him. He is of age. He will be speaking

<sup>22</sup> about himself." His parents said these things seeing that they feared the Jews, for the Jews had already agreed that if anyone should be avowing Him to be Christ, he should be put out of the the Pharisees are the real sinners. This they soon demonstrate by their attempt to prove that His gracious act was not in accord with God's holy law. They had corrupted the law by their tradition.

<sup>16</sup> It is notable how many of our Lord's recorded signs were done on the sabbath. Doubtless this indicates the fact that their antitype is to be found in the sabbatism which comes at His epiphany. When man ceases work, then is the time for God to act. Man's struggles hinder His operations and obscure the glory which invests His deeds. How blind the Pharisees were to this great truth is apparent from the fact that some of them actually insisted that the Lord Himself was the sinner! How far astray are all of man's perceptions! The disciples supposed it must be the blind man or his parents, the Pharisees fasten guilt on the Lord, but only He sees the truth, that the religious, self-righteous Pharisees are blind sinners above all the rest.

<sup>24</sup> The double testimony given to the Pharisees may be a premonition of the second witness to the truth which was given to the nation, as recorded in the book of Acts. There also they give Moses and the law a place above our Lord and His apostles, who were "illiterate and ordinary men" (Ac.4<sup>13</sup>), not fit to teach scholars like themselves! But what the blind man lacked in scholarship he more than made up in common sense and spiritual discernment. He is amazed at their ignorance!

<sup>34</sup> "They cast him out." This was most dreaded among the Jews, for it meant social as well as religious ostracism. How painful it is, even now, to be cast out of religious organizations, for it has all the semblance of being cast off by God Himself. But today, even as it was then, it usually is a token of divine favor such as the Philipians enjoyed (Phil.1<sup>29</sup>), and leads to a more intimate and precious acquaintance with our Saviour. Indeed, we should deem it an exalted privilege to suffer for and with Christ and His truth. There is no higher token of His regard or surer way to His reward than association with Him in His rejection.

say that "He is of age. Inquire of him."

<sup>24</sup> A second [time], then, they summon the man who was blind and they say to him, "Give the glory to God. We are aware that this man is a sinner."

<sup>25</sup> He, then, answered "I am not aware if He is a sinner: one thing I am aware of, that, being blind, at present I am observing."

<sup>26</sup> They said, then, to him, again, "What does he do to you? How does he open your eyes?"

<sup>27</sup> He answered them, "I told you already, and you do not hear. Why, then, are you wanting to be hearing again? Are you also wanting to become His disciples?"

<sup>28</sup> Now they revile him and said, "You are a disciple of that one, yet we are disciples of Moses. We are aware that God has spoken to Moses, yet this man—we are not aware whence he is."

<sup>30</sup> The man answered and said to them, "For in this is a marvelous thing, that you are not aware whence He is, and He opens my <sup>31</sup> eyes! We are aware that God is not hearing sinners, but if anyone should be a reverer of God and doing His will, him He is hearing.

<sup>32</sup> From out of the eon it is not heard that anyone opens the eyes of one

<sup>34</sup> They answered and say to him, "You were wholly born in sins, and are you teaching us?" And they cast him out.

<sup>35</sup> Jesus hears that they cast him out, and, finding him, said to him, "Are you believing into the Son of Mankind?"

<sup>36</sup> Salvation, whether from physical or spiritual blindness, or lameness or any disability, is not an end in itself. It is largely futile if it fails to lead to a close acquaintance with God through His Christ. His grace captivates our hearts. The harsh measures of men only show His love in a better light. So, when the man who had been blind was cast out he was immediately taken in and was introduced to the One Who had restored his sight. Nor is this all. Once he knows Him, his heart goes out in adoration, and God gets the worship He craves. This is the true end and consummation of all evil and all blessing. How blessed that he had been born blind! What a pity that the Pharisees had not also been blind! Yet when they are recovered from their spiritual blindness, they also will bow their hearts and worship the One Who opens their blind eyes.

The sheep runs were usually in wild, unfrequented spots, infested by bold Bedouin robbers and by wild beasts, such as the jackal, the hyena, the bear, the leopard, and the lion. David battled with a lion and a bear while he kept the sheep of his father (1 Sa. 17<sup>36</sup>). For this purpose the shepherd had a stout oak club (A. V. "rod") about two feet long, with a large knob on one end studded with heavy iron nails. The other end had a noose for his wrist to help him hold it, or for fastening to his leather girdle when not in use. The shepherd had this club and a crook (rod and staff), one for the sheep's enemies, the other for the sheep themselves. With one he led them, with the other he defended them, even at the risk of his life.

<sup>36</sup> He answered and said, "And Who is He, Lord, that I should be believing into Him?"

<sup>37</sup> Now Jesus said to him, "You have also seen Him, and He Who is speaking with you is He."

<sup>39</sup> And Jesus said, "For judgment came I into this world, that those who are not observing may be observing, and those observing should <sup>40</sup> be becoming blind." And those of the Pharisees who are with Him hear these things and they said to <sup>41</sup> Him "Are we also blind?" Jesus said to them, "If you were blind, you would have had no sin. Yet now you are saying that 'We are observing.' Your sin, then, is remaining.

<sup>10</sup> Verily, verily, I am saying to you, he who is not entering through the door into the sheepfold, but is climbing up elsewhere, that one is a

own, he is going in front of them and the sheep are following him, seeing that they are acquainted

fleeing from him, seeing that they are not acquainted with the voice

<sup>6</sup> of outsiders." Jesus told them this proverb, yet they know not what it was that He spoke to them.

This figure is carried through the Circumcision epistles. Peter is especially commissioned to feed His sheep (21<sup>16</sup>) and exhorts his readers to do the same. This figure is never used of the nations in the present economy of grace, except in the faded metaphor "pastors". It is a figure peculiarly adapted to the kingdom, for the true King is a shepherd, as David was. Instead of His people guarding and gorging Him, He feeds and defends them. Our translators have actually rendered the verb "rule" on four occasions (Mt. 26; Un. 22<sup>7</sup>; 12<sup>5</sup>; 19<sup>15</sup>). The nations, as such, are figured by wild beasts, such as a lion, a leopard, or a bear. Our relation to Christ is far more intimate than even the tender Eastern shepherd toward His sheep, for He is our Head, and we are members of His body. The actual body of Christ is the only living form from earth in the heavens and it is the picture of our celestial place and dignity, as well as our vital contact with our Head.

<sup>3</sup> John the baptist was the door keeper who opened the door to the true Shepherd. Many another has come claiming to be Israel's shepherd, but they did not come in God's appointed way.

<sup>9</sup> sheep hear them not. I am the Door. If anyone should be entering through Me, he shall be saved, and will be entering and coming out and will be finding pasture.
<sup>10</sup> The thief is not coming except that he should be stealing and sacrificing and destroying. I came that they may be having eonian life, and having it superabundantly.

<sup>12</sup> soul for the sake of the sheep. Now the hireling, not being the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, is beholding the wolf coming, and is deserting the sheep and fleeing. And the wolf is snatching them
<sup>13</sup> and is scattering the sheep. Yet the hireling is fleeing, seeing that he is a hireling and is not caring about the sheep.

<sup>14</sup> I am the ideal Shepherd, and I know Mine and Mine know Me.
<sup>15</sup> According as the Father knows Me, I also know the Father, and I am laying down My soul for the sake of the sheep.

<sup>16</sup> And other sheep I have which are not of this fold. Those also I must be leading, and they will be hearing My voice, and they will be becoming one flock, one Shepherd.

<sup>17</sup> Therefore the Father is loving Me, seeing that I am laying down My soul that I may be getting it again. No one is taking it away from Me, but I am laying it down of Myself. I have the right to lay it down and I have the right to take it again. This precept I got from My Father."

<sup>22</sup> The Dedications must refer to the rededication of the temple, after three years' profanation by Antiochus Epiphanes, in the days of Judas Maccabeus, for Solomon's temple was dedicated in the seventh month, which was about the autumnal equinox, Zerubbabel's temple was dedicated in the twelfth month, the beginning of spring, but Judas Maccabeus held his dedication for eight days, beginning on the twenty-fifth day of the seventh month—in the midst of winter. Besides, neither Solomon nor Zerubbabel made it an annual celebration. Josephus tells about it in his Antiquities, book XII, chapter 7. He takes his account from the first book of Maccabees, IV, 36-59, and the second book, X, 5-8.

This festival was not of divine appointment, and mars the great series of seven festivals which are a prophetic forecast of Israel's history. These are in two groups, one of which has been fulfilled, and one still future. The Passover, Unleavened, Firstfruit, and Pentecost are history now. Trumpets, Propitiation, and Tabernacles will be fulfilled when Israel is again in God's reckoning. After the millennium, which is the antitype of Tabernacles, there will not be a rededication of the temple. On the contrary, the temple and its worship will be superseded by reconciliation where no ritual is needed.

The Dedications was a sentimental, human anniversary, which never would have been instituted had the people not been blind to the marvelous meaning of Jehovah's perfect series of festivals. It is usually called the feast of Lights. Such it was to the blind man! But to the Jews as a nation, this light—human amendment of the law and the ritual—was darkness, and how great was their darkness! If our faith is in man and his works, how futile it is!

The many church festivals of today are like the Dedications, without foundation in truth, however they may appeal to religious sentiment. God's festivals were filled with spiritual significance and force, which now demands the non-observance of days and set seasons.

<sup>19</sup> Again there came to be a schism among the Jews because of these words. Now many of them said, "He has a demon and is mad."
<sup>20</sup> "He has a demon and is mad."
<sup>21</sup> Why are you hearing Him?" Yet others said, "These declarations are not of demons. Can a demon open the eyes of the blind?"

<sup>22</sup> Now there came to be the Dedications in Jerusalem, and it was winter. And Jesus walked in the sanctuary in the portico of Solomon. The Jews, then, surround Him, and they said to Him, "Till when are you lifting our soul? if you are the Christ tell us boldly."

<sup>25</sup> Jesus answered them, "I told you, and you are not believing. The works which I am doing in the name of My Father, these are testifying concerning Me. But you are not believing, seeing that you are not of My sheep, according as I said to you."

<sup>27</sup> My sheep are hearing My voice, and I know them, and they are following Me. And I am giving them eonian life, and they should by no means be destroyed for the eon, and no one shall be snatching them out of My hand. My Father, Who has given them to Me, is greater than all and no one is able to be snatching them out of My Father's hand. I and the Father are one."

<sup>31</sup> Again, then, the Jews bear stones that they should be stoning Him. Jesus answered them, "Many ideal acts I show you from My Father. Because of which act of them are you stoning Me?" The Jews answered Him, "For an ideal act we are not stoning you, but for blasphemy, and that you,

<sup>34</sup> The term "gods" is translated "judges" in Ex. 21<sup>6</sup>; 22<sup>8,9,9</sup>, where it refers to men. But our Lord does not appeal to this, but to Psalm 82<sup>6</sup> where the context clearly excludes men. The mighty spiritual powers of wickedness who overrule the affairs of mankind are called sons by God Himself. Even Satan is called a son of God (Job 1<sup>6</sup>). He is called the god of this eon (2 Co. 4<sup>4</sup>). Now if God said to him and his hosts, "Ye are gods", notwithstanding the fact that they failed to right the wrongs of earth, how much rather shall He have called Him God Who shall dispossess them? To Him God says (Psa. 82<sup>6</sup>):

Rise, O God! Judge the earth,
For Thou shalt be allotted all nations.

He had been undoing the deeds of these sons of God and doing all that was foretold of Him before their very eyes. And yet they thought they were not blind!

<sup>1</sup> The rousing of Lazarus from among the dead is the seventh and last sign in John's account. Each succeeding sign finds the nation on a lower level. At the marriage feast of Cana they lacked the joy and gladness of the kingdom; the infirm man at Bethesda's pool lacked power; the disciples on the sea, tossed by the tempest, lacked peace; the blind man lacked sight; but Lazarus lacked life. The apostasy of the nation had developed to such a degree that death was the fittest symbol to describe them.

This is the condition of Israel in the latter days, as the prophet Ezekiel saw them in the valley of dry bones (Eze. 37<sup>3</sup>). The question is asked, "Shall these bones live?" And the bones are roused from death, and enter the land of Israel.

<sup>4</sup> The cause of Lazarus' infirmity was not sin, as in the case of the man at Bethesda. It was the necessary prelude to the manifestation of His glory. Indeed, the Lord deliberately delayed His departure in order that he should die. So He deals with Israel. Their great cry is "Till when?" (Isa. 61<sup>1</sup>). Their restoration to life is postponed until they are beyond all hope, until their resurrection, spiritually as well as physically, is manifestly the work of the Lord.

being a man, are making yourself God."

<sup>34</sup> Jesus answered them, "Is it not written in your law, that 'I said you are gods'? If He said those were gods to whom the word of God came (and the scripture cannot be annulled), are you saying to Him Whom the Father hallows and dispatches into the world that 'You are blaspheming,' seeing that <sup>37</sup> I said, 'I am the Son of God'? If I am not doing My Father's <sup>38</sup> works, do not be believing Me. Yet if I am doing them, and if you are not believing Me, be believing in the works, that you may be knowing and believing that the Father is in Me and I am in the Father."
<sup>39</sup> Then again they sought to arrest Him, and He came out of their hand.

<sup>40</sup> And He came away again to the other side of the Jordan into the place where John was formerly baptizing, and He remains there.
<sup>41</sup> And many came to Him, and they said that "John, indeed, does not one sign, yet all, whatever John said concerning this One was <sup>42</sup> true." And many believe into Him there.

<sup>4</sup> Yet Jesus, hearing it, said, "This infirmity is not to death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God should be glorified through <sup>5</sup> it." Now Jesus loved Martha and

Of his experience in death we are told nothing, for this figure precludes the thought. Normal sleep is itself without sensation, and "the repose of sleep" is unbroken oblivion until the awakening.

<sup>15</sup> We know that the Lord was fond of Lazarus (<sup>3</sup>). How strange, then, to hear Him say "Lazarus died. And I am rejoicing . . .!" We might have said, "I am sorrowing." It is our privilege, also, to look about us on all the distress and disaster and death and rejoice, not in the calamities themselves, but in the glory which will accrue to God when He deals with them. It is only as we see God's beneficent purpose in our trials that we can really endure them with joyfulness.

<sup>17</sup> The four days may suggest the time during which the nation lies lifeless, before the resurrection of the day of the Lord. First they were under the law, and this dealt out death. Then came the personal ministry of Messiah which showed them to be but a corrupt corpse. The rejection of the apostolic testimony in the Acts leaves them still worse. They become most offensive in the day of wrath.

<sup>6</sup> her sister and Lazarus. As, then, He hears that he is infirm, then, indeed, He remains two days in the place where He was.

<sup>7</sup> Thereupon, after this, He is saying to His disciples, "We may be going into Judea again." The disciples are saying to Him, "Rabbi, the Jews now sought to stone Thee, and art Thou going there again?"

<sup>9</sup> Jesus answered, "Are there not twelve hours in the day? If anyone should be walking in the day he is not stumbling, seeing that he is observing the light of this world."

<sup>10</sup> Yet if anyone should be walking in the night, he is stumbling, seeing that the light is not in him."

<sup>11</sup> He said these things, and after this He is saying to them, "Lazarus, our friend, has found repose, but I am going that I should be awakening him out of sleep."

<sup>12</sup> The disciples, then, said to Him, "Lord, if he has repose, he shall be saved." Now Jesus had made a declaration concerning his death,

<sup>13</sup> yet they suppose that He is saying it of the repose of sleep. Jesus, then, said to them boldly, then,

<sup>15</sup> "Lazarus died. And I am rejoicing because of you, that you should be believing, seeing that I was not there. But we may be going to

<sup>16</sup> him." Thomas, then, who is termed "Didymus", said to his fellow disciples, "We also may be going, that we may be dying with Him."

<sup>19</sup> stadia [1.72 miles] off. Now many of the Jews had come to Martha and Mary that they should be comforting them concerning their brother.

<sup>25</sup> The striking phrase "and the Life" is the clue to the great truth here unfolded by our Lord. To His assertion that "Your brother will be rising" Martha assents, for she knew that all would rise "at the last day". But this falls far short of the truth. There are two resurrections. One He called "the resurrection of life", the other "the resurrection of judgment" (<sup>529</sup>). As resurrection necessarily implies life, it will be seen that the word "life" is used in an intensified sense. The "resurrection of life" imparts eonian life, while the resurrection of judgment leads to eonian death.

Our Lord is seeking to comfort Martha by that best of all consolations, the vivification of all His own at His presence, long before "the last day", at the very commencement of the millennial eon. Seventy-five days after His glorious epiphany He will rouse the saints in Israel and commence their righteous reign over the earth. "Happy and holy is he who has a part in the former resurrection: over these the second death has no jurisdiction, but they will be priests of God and of Christ, and they will be reigning with Him the thousand years" (Un.<sup>206</sup>).

The saints of this present economy of transcendent grace will be given life even before this, as explained in 1 Th. <sup>4</sup> 13-18; 1 Co. <sup>15</sup> 51-55; Eph. <sup>1</sup> 12; Phil. <sup>3</sup> 20. The presence, or parousia, of Christ spreads over a period of time, in which all His own are called out of death to eonian life.

Only three resurrections lead to immortality. First, that of Christ Himself, second, that at His future "presence" including those who are His, and, lastly, all mankind, at the consummation, when all will be made alive (1 Co. <sup>15</sup> 22-28). This great truth is the only real comfort in the presence of bereavement. Christ never stood in the presence of death without vanquishing it. He is the Life! Since this life beyond the reach of death is imparted only on these three occasions, it follows that every other resurrection is not a "resurrection of life". Those raised in the past and those at the great white throne are still subject to death. They are not made immortal until the consummation, when death is abolished, and life is the portion of all.

<sup>20</sup> Martha, then, as she hears that Jesus is coming, meets Him. Yet Mary was seated in the house.
<sup>21</sup> Martha, then, said to Jesus, "Lord, if Thou wert here, my <sup>22</sup> brother would not have died. But even now I am aware that whatever Thou shouldst be requesting of God, God will be giving to Thee."

<sup>23</sup> Jesus is saying to her, "Your brother will be rising."

<sup>24</sup> Martha is saying to Him, "I am aware that he will be rising in the resurrection in the last day."

<sup>25</sup> Jesus said to her, "I am the Resurrection and the Life. He who is believing into Me, even if he should <sup>26</sup> be dying, will be living. And everyone who is living and believing into Me should by no means be dying for the eon. Are you believing this?"

<sup>27</sup> She is saying to Him, "Yes, Lord, I have believed that Thou art the Christ, the Son of God, Who is <sup>28</sup> coming into the world." And saying this she came away and summons Miriam, her sister, covertly, saying, "The Teacher is present and is summoning you."

<sup>29</sup> Now as she hears, she was roused swiftly and came to Him.

<sup>30</sup> Now Jesus had not as yet come into the village, but was still in the place where Martha meets Him.
<sup>31</sup> The Jews, then, who are with her in the house and are comforting her, perceiving Mary, that she rose quickly and came out, follow her, supposing that she is going into the tomb that she should be lamenting there.

<sup>32</sup> Mary, then, as she came where Jesus was, perceiving Him, falls at His feet, saying to Him, "Lord, if Thou wert here, my brother would not have died!"

<sup>35</sup> What tender compassion His tears reveal! He could deliberately remain away so that Lazarus should die and by his death prepare for the revelation of God's glory in his resurrection. He could comfort the sisters with the great truth that He is the Life. But with Him truth was not the stern, heartless dogma that overrides all natural feelings and condemns all sorrow as unbelief. His heart was moved with pity and compassion and He stops to mingle His tears with theirs ere He wipes them away by His marvelous miracle. So we, too, are not charged by the apostle to refrain from all sorrow as sinful, but not to sorrow as others who have no blessed expectation to anticipate (1 Th. 4<sup>13</sup>).

We have here a touching example of the experience recorded by the apostle Paul: "as sorrowful, yet ever rejoicing" (2 Co. 6<sup>10</sup>). Or, in our Lord's case, we should reverse it, for He rejoiced first of all, yet felt for His friends who had not His faith. It is a mistake to suppose that confidence in the ultimate benefits of sorrow will put us out of sympathy with it. It is intended to stir our emotions. It is designed to touch us to tears. Otherwise, it would fail to accomplish the object for which it exists. Our sorrows and heartaches are none the less real because we know their glorious outcome. All their ultimate value lies in their contrast with the tearless felicity for which they are a preparation.

<sup>39</sup> Of the three who were raised from the dead by our Lord, Jairus' daughter had scarcely started to go to corruption (Mk. 5<sup>35-42</sup>), the widow of Nain's son was on the way to his burial (Lu. 7<sup>11-16</sup>), but Lazarus had been dead long enough to be offensive to smell and to sight. No wonder Martha objected. Who wishes to see the gruesome spectacle of a corrupting corpse? How their hearts must have marveled at His words "you should be viewing the glory of God."

The glory of God in such ghastly association! Yet such is the only place its full effulgence can be manifested. This is one of many examples which are given us in the Scriptures, which illustrate the essential and beneficial function of evil in the universe. It reveals God. All those deepest and most

<sup>33</sup> Jesus, then, as He perceived her lamenting and the Jews coming with her lamenting, mutters in <sup>34</sup> spirit, and disturbs Himself. And He said, "Where have you placed him?"

They are saying to Him, "Lord, come and see."

<sup>36</sup> The Jews, then, said, "Lo! how <sup>37</sup> fond of him He was!" Yet some of them said, "Could not this One, Who opens the eyes of the blind, make it that this man also should not be dying?"

<sup>38</sup> Jesus, then, again muttering in Himself, is coming into the tomb. Now there was a cave and a stone was laid on it. Jesus is saying, "Take away the stone."

<sup>39</sup> Martha, the sister of him who is deceased, is saying to Him, "Lord, he is already stinking, for it is the fourth day."

<sup>40</sup> Jesus is saying to her, "Said I not to you that, if you should be believing, you shall be viewing the <sup>41</sup> glory of God?" They, then, take away the stone. Yet Jesus lifts up His eyes and said, "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hearest Me.

<sup>42</sup> Now I was aware that Thou art hearing Me always, but because of the throng standing about I said it, that they should be believing that <sup>43</sup> Thou dost commission Me." And, saying these things, He clamors with a loud voice, "Lazarus! Come out hither!" And he who has died came out, bound feet and hands with winding sheets, and his countenance had been bound about with a handkerchief. Jesus is saying to them, "Loose him and let him <sup>44</sup> go!"

precious excellences which spring from love would be buried within His breast, unknown and unappreciated, if evil did not force it to the front. If Lazarus had not died, we would not have known of Christ's compassion and His tears. Even Mary had not learned this lesson yet, though she had sat at His feet and listened to His teachings. His heart was most touched by her complaint "Lord, if Thou wert here, my brother would not have died!" Did she know that He had delayed His coming?

It is the great problem that baffles men today put into a simple simile. Why does God allow evil? Why does He not hasten to remove it? All that is needed is His presence. But He delays. His delay confirms the great truth that evil as well as good is from Him. It is the necessary foil for the display of His glory. It is the essential ingredient of future bliss. Good cannot be known and appreciated except in the presence of evil. It needs a dead, loathsome, fetid corpse to flash forth the effulgent love of God.

<sup>49</sup> The high priest's prophesy is another clear indication of the overruling and sovereign power of God. His enemies fulfill His will even when they are most opposed to His plans and purpose, as they see it. The very arrogance of the chief priest reacts on himself. Not only the Sanhedrin, whom he accused of crass ignorance, but he also was unaware of the great truth which his lips uttered. How pitiable is man's "free will" in the hands of such a God! Man is utterly at the mercy of his heredity and environment, and these are beyond his control. God alone decides the factors of which our lives are composed and hence He is the final Arbiter of our deeds and destiny. Once we know Him we would not have it otherwise.

<sup>53</sup> How vivid are the contrasts in this account! Christ has proclaimed Himself as the Life, both by word and by deed. From that day, then, they plan that they may kill Him. They deliberately decide to murder the One Who not only has life in Himself, but Who is to give life to all mankind!

some of them came away to the Pharisees, and told them what Jesus does.

<sup>47</sup> The chief priests and the Pharisees, then, assembled the Sanhedrin and said, "What are we doing, seeing that this man is doing many signs? If we should be leaving him thus, all will be believing into him, and the Romans will come and take away our place as well as nation."

<sup>49</sup> Now a certain one of them, Caiaphas, being the chief priest of that year, said to them, "You are aware of nothing, neither account that it is expedient for us that one man should be dying for the sake of the people, and the whole nation should not be destroyed." Now this he said, not from himself, but, being the chief priest of that year, he prophesies that Jesus was about to die for the sake of the nation, and not for the sake of the nation only, but that He may be assembling the scattered children of God also into one. From that day, then, they plan that they may kill Him.

<sup>54</sup> Jesus, then, no longer walked boldly among the Jews, but came away thence into the country near the wilderness, to a city termed Ephraim, and there He remains with His disciples. Now the Passover of the Jews was near, and many ascended into Jerusalem out of the country, before the Passover, that they should be purifying themselves. They sought Jesus, then, and said to one another, standing in the sanctuary, "What do you suppose? That He may not come to the festival at all?" Yet

<sup>1</sup> We are now treated to a beautifully symbolic picture of the three-fold phase of resurrection life. The saints shall serve Him as Martha did. They shall share with Him, as Lazarus. They shall worship Him, like Mary. In these degenerate days we have forgotten that there is need of one thing, and that is not service or sacrifice, but of sitting at the feet of our Lord and hearing His Word. Service has its place, but it is not, as Martha thought, the great need. God can get servants. He has many much more powerful than we are. He can make the very elements do His bidding. He is looking for worship, and true worship comes only from the heart attuned to His grace. Martha served, as she always did, though she had learned not to be worried by its details. Mary no longer sits at His feet but worships there, and "wastes" a woman's prized possession on them, and wipes them with a woman's glory. It is the most exalted act of any of His disciples. Like us, they were usually after blessing for themselves, instead of seeking to give Him what His heart craves. It is not what we get but what we give to God that fulfills the purpose for which He formed and favored us. Let us become so enamored of His excellences that we, too, shall waste our most precious possessions in worship at His feet. Nothing is too good for Him! Nothing is lost that serves to express our adoration, nothing is wasted that conveys our love.

But worshipful response is impossible apart from the preparation of heart which comes only to those who search the treasures of His Word. The discoveries of His wisdom and grace alone can constrain the heart to the impulsive and uncalculated displays of lavish affection which are His delight. One heart, responding to His love, is better than all the service and ceremony of a myriad of slaves driven by fear or favor.

<sup>3</sup> The term "ointment" is now used especially for fatty or fixed oils, of heavy consistency, but the perfumes used in the Orient are essential oils, or attars. This seems the only satisfactory English term for the precious perfume used by Mary.

the chief priests and the Pharisees had given directions that if anyone should know where He is, he should be divulging it, so that they should be arresting Him.

<sup>12</sup> Jesus, then, six days before the Passover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was who had died, whom Jesus rouses from among the dead.

<sup>6</sup> poor?" Now this he said, not that he cared about the poor, but that he was a thief and bore the coffer, having also what was cast into it.

<sup>7</sup> Then, said Jesus, "Let her be, that she should be keeping it for the day of My burial. For you have the poor with yourselves always, yet Me you have not always."

<sup>9</sup> The vast throng, then, from among the Jews, knew that He is there. And they came, not because of Jesus only, but that they might become acquainted with Lazarus also, whom Jesus rouses from among the dead. Yet the chief priests also plan that they may be killing Lazarus also, seeing that, because of him, many of the Jews went, and believed into Jesus.

12 INTO THE JESUS to-THE ON-MOR-

7 While facing the terrible ordeal of death our Lord found no fellowship with His disciples in the sorrows before Him. Like Peter, they could not entertain such a thought. But it seems that Mary alone, of all His friends, had learned to believe His words. She looked forward to His death and the tomb. Is it any wonder that she is first at the tomb on the resurrection morning and first to speak to the risen Christ?

12-19 Compare Mt. 21:4-11; Mk. 11:7-19; Lu. 19:35-40.

13 See Ps. 118:25, 26.

15 See Zech. 9:9.

21 Perhaps the surest index of the spiritual state and experience of believers is the way in which they use the name and titles of our Lord. The prevalent use of His personal name is shocking to the spiritual ear. Only His enemies and those unacquainted with Him, as these Greeks, addressed Him or spoke of Him familiarly by the name given Him at His birth. Those who knew Him and had learned to love Him always gave Him a title suited to the occasion. He was Teacher to His disciples, Adept, or Doctor, in reference to His wisdom, Lord or Master to His slaves, and Christ or Messiah to His loyal subjects. To them He was Jesus the Christ, in humiliation. To us He is Christ Jesus, in glory. Surely it is a small thing for us to speak of Him as He deserves! Let us not degrade His high dignity by using His human name without at least one of the titles of His glory.

23 It seems that here we have a preview of the coming kingdom. He enters Jerusalem in triumph exactly, to a day, as foretold by Daniel the prophet (Dan. 9:25). The indignant Pharisees acknowledge that the world went after Him, and even the Greeks seek His acquaintance, as the nations will come up to Jerusalem in the millennial kingdom.

There is no intimation that the curiosity of the Greeks was satisfied. In the kingdom they will have their place, but before that, immediately athwart His path, is the death that will open the way for the blessing of all. The Greeks must wait until the grain of wheat has died.

hearing that Jesus is coming into Jerusalem, got fronds of palms and came out to meet Him. And they clamored, saying, "Hosanna! Blessed is He Who is coming in the name of the Lord!" and "the King of Israel!"

14 Now Jesus, finding a little ass, is seated on it, according as it is written,

15 "Fear not, daughter of Zion!

Lo! Your King is coming sitting on an ass's colt."

16 Now His disciples do not know these things, at first, but when Jesus is glorified, then they remember that these things were written of Him and they do these things to Him.

17 The throng, then, which was with Him when He summons Lazarus out of the tomb, and rouses him from among the dead, testified.

18 Therefore, also, the vast throng meets Him, seeing that they hear

19 that He has done this sign. Then the Pharisees say among themselves, "You are beholding that you are benefiting nothing. Lo! the world went away after Him!"

20 Now there were some Greeks among those going up that they should be worshiping in the festival.

21 These, then, approached Philip from Bethsaida of Galilee, and they asked him, saying, "Lord, we want to become acquainted with Jesus."

22 Philip is coming and telling Andrew, and again Andrew and Philip are coming and telling 23 Jesus. Yet Jesus is answering them, saying, "The hour has come that the Son of Mankind should be glorified.

24 Verily, verily, I am saying to you, except a kernel of wheat, falling into the earth, should be dying, it is remaining alone, yet if it

<sup>24</sup> The millennial vision fades away and gives place to the black shadows of Golgotha. The King has come, but they do not know Him. The kingdom proclamation is withdrawn. Death looms large ahead. The Wheat kernel must die. Only in resurrection can be realized the close unity with His own which He craved.

<sup>25</sup> We fail to feel the force of this if we confound the soul with life. We could hardly say, in verse 27, "Now is My life troubled", yet it is the very same word. The soul has to do with sensation. Some forms of life, as plants, have no soul, or sensation. He who is fond of his soul will shrink from discomfort and suffering. He will not endure the affliction which precedes the kingdom. He will lose the joy and blessedness of the reward. He who hates his soul will not allow any sorrow to stand between him and faithfulness to God.

<sup>27</sup> The Lord Himself is the first to hate His own soul. His darkest hour has come. Shall He shrink from its horrors? No! Let God's name be glorified whatever the bitter cost! The rendering "life", in place of "soul", fails to give the true thought. A man may love life, yet hate his soul. Those who fear persecution and distress for Christ's sake are fond of their souls, and they will forfeit the very ease and delight which they crave, when the kingdom comes.

<sup>31</sup> "Now is the judgment of this world" suggests that God was, at that time, about to judge mankind. But He did not. Judgment still waits. It is the world that was doing the judging. This is confirmed by the same form of the word in "the judgment of gehenna" (Mt. 23<sup>33</sup>), "the judgment of God" (2 Th. 1<sup>5</sup>). See also Un. 14<sup>7</sup>; 16<sup>7</sup>; 18<sup>10</sup>; 19<sup>2</sup>. The world would hardly judge Satan, so the Chief here spoken of must be Christ Himself. This title is used again in 14<sup>30</sup> and 16<sup>11</sup>, where further evidence is given that our Lord is speaking of Himself. The judgment is His exaltation on the cross, for it was a reference to the manner of His death. So it was that the throng understood the term. We should not give one of His titles to Satan. Christ is the world's Chief.

should be dying, it is bringing forth much fruit. He who is fond of his soul is destroying it, and he who is hating his soul, in this world, shall be guarding it for eonian life.

<sup>26</sup> If anyone should be serving Me let him be following Me, and where I am, there My servant also shall be. And if anyone should be serving Me, the Father shall be honoring him. Now is My soul disturbed. And what may I be saying? 'Father, save Me out of this hour'? But because of this I came into this hour. Father, glorify Thy name!" A voice, then, came out of heaven, "I glorify it and shall also be glorifying it again!"

<sup>29</sup> The throng, then, which stands and hears it, said, "It thunders!" Others said, "A messenger has spoken to Him!"

<sup>30</sup> Jesus answered and said, "Not because of Me has come this voice, but because of you. Now is this world's judging. Now shall the Chief of this world be cast out. And I, if I should be exalted out of the earth, shall be drawing all to Myself." Now this He said, signifying what death He was about to be dying.

<sup>34</sup> The throng, then, answered Him, "We hear out of the law that the Christ is remaining for the eon, and how are you saying that the Son of Mankind must be exalted? Who is this Son of Mankind?"

<sup>35</sup> Jesus, then, said to them, "Still a little time the light is among you. Be walking while you have the light lest the darkness should be overtaking you. And he who is walking in the darkness is not aware whither he is going. As you have the light, be believing into

<sup>37</sup> What better proof could be found that they were walking in darkness than their rejection of the Man of Sorrows? The prophets plainly foretold their action and yet they are too much in the dark to see.

<sup>38</sup> Our Lord has now come to that stage of His ministry which was so graphically described by His namesake, Isaiah. His public ministry is at its close. He hides Himself. As the prophet continues (Isa. 53<sup>2-3</sup>):

He has no shapeliness or honor,
And, seen by us, He is no sight to be coveted.

He is despised and shunned by men,
A Man of pains and knowing illness,
And, as One concealing His face from us,

He is despised, and we take no account of Him.

<sup>39</sup> Outside the Scriptures we hear much of human responsibility, and that those who reject the light deserve the judgment they have invited. This passage makes us pause. These men had heard the most powerful of all preachers and seen the most marvelous of all miracle workers, yet we are distinctly told that they could not believe. The reason given is that the Scriptures must be fulfilled. God's purpose demands a measure of unbelief as well as of faith. He locks up all in stubbornness that He may have mercy on all (Ro.11<sup>32</sup>). To damn these men who could not believe with irretrievable and irrecoverable ruin is unthinkable of God.

<sup>40</sup> Isaiah's message of doom to Israel is always quoted when their apostasy has passed repair. It divides our Lord's ministry and the accounts given of it into two distinct and different epochs. He begins His proclamation of the kingdom and continues until its rejection. Then, after quoting the sixth of Isaiah, He speaks to His own of His suffering and death. See Mt. 13<sup>13-15</sup>. In the Pentecostal era we see the same. The kingdom is proclaimed to the whole nation once again, but when their rejection is irrevocable, Paul quotes from Isaiah and seals their doom for the eon. This rejection is the basis on which the present secret economy of transcendent grace has been established.

the light, that you may be becoming sons of light."

These things speaks Jesus, and, coming away, He was hid from them. Yet, having done so many signs in front of them, they believed not into Him, that the word of Isaiah, the prophet, may be fulfilled which he said,

"Lord, who believes our tidings?

And to whom was the arm of the Lord revealed?"

<sup>39</sup> Therefore they could not be believing, seeing that Isaiah said again, <sup>40</sup> "He has blinded their eyes

And callouses their heart,
Lest they may be perceiving with their eyes,
And should be apprehending with their heart,
And turn about, and I shall be healing them."

<sup>42</sup> Howbeit, likewise, of the chiefs also many believe into Him, but because of the Pharisees they avowed it not, lest they should be put out of the synagogue, for they love the glory of men rather than even the glory of God.

<sup>44</sup> Now Jesus cries and said, "He who is believing into Me is not believing into Me, but into Him Who sends Me. And he who is beholding Me is beholding Him Who sends Me. I have come into the world a Light, that every one who is believing into Me should not be remaining in darkness.

<sup>47</sup> And if anyone should be hearing My declarations and not be maintaining them, I am not judging him, for I came not that I should be judging the world, but that I should be saving the world. He who is repudiating Me and not get-

 said ISAIAH that he-PER- NO GETTING-UP THE declarations OF-ME

<sup>3</sup> The majesty of humility is seldom so splendidly set forth as in this passage. First we have His high place in reference to the world. All is in His hands. Then we are told of His relation to God. Did not such dignity and power entitle Him to the highest esteem? Yet, as such, He stoops to the meanest humility.

<sup>5</sup> Many features of oriental life are very different from our customs. We remove our hats on entering a house, as a token of respect. In the East they keep on their turbans, but remove their footgear, leaving it in the small, lower entrance to the reception room (See Ex. 35; Josh. 5<sup>15</sup>; Ac. 7<sup>33</sup>). It is then the duty of the humblest slave in the establishment to wash the feet of the guest, by pouring water over them, and wiping them off with the towel with which he is girded.

ting My declarations, has that which is judging him: the word which I speak, that will be judging <sup>49</sup> him in the last day, seeing that I speak not from Myself, but the Father Who sends Me, He has given Me the precept, what I may be saying and what I should be speaking. <sup>50</sup> And I am aware that His precept is eonian life; which, then, I am speaking, according as the Father has declared to Me—thus am I speaking."

<sup>13</sup> Now before the festival of the Passover, Jesus, being aware that His hour came that He may be proceeding out of this world to the Father, loving His own who are in the world, He loves them to the <sup>2</sup> consummation. And at the coming of dinner, the Slanderer having already cast into the heart of Judas, of Simon Iscariot, that he may be <sup>3</sup> betraying Him, Jesus, being aware that the Father has given all into His hands, and that He came out <sup>4</sup> from God and is going to God, is rising from dinner and is laying down His garments, and, getting a cloth, He girds Himself.

<sup>5</sup> Thereafter He is draining water into a basin, and begins washing the feet of the disciples and wiping them off with the cloth with which <sup>6</sup> He was girded. He is coming, then, to Simon Peter. And he is saying to Him, "Lord, art Thou washing my feet?" Jesus answered <sup>7</sup> and said to him, "What I am doing you are not aware at present, yet you will know after these things."

<sup>8</sup> Peter is saying to Him, "Under no circumstances should you be washing my feet for the eon!"

Jesus answered him, "If I should not be washing you, you are having no part with Me."

<sup>6</sup> The most menial service the Lord could perform for them was the washing of their feet. No wonder Peter protested! He has not fully learned the lesson that the Lord is abasing Himself even to death, before His exaltation. He is giving them an example which has had very few followers among His disciples. Those who have aspired to be teachers and masters have not stooped to lowly service, but have held to high honors and dignities. The true slave of Christ, in this day of grace, will emulate the example of our Lord as set forth by Paul in his Philippiian epistle. There he traces His descent from the form of God down to the death of the cross. God will see to His exaltation.

It was not only a lesson in humility but a condition of fellowship. Not being under pure grace or having been justified as we are, but having only a probationary pardon, fellowship with Christ depended on continual confession and cleansing (1 Jn. 1<sup>9</sup>). The daily washing of the priest at the laver (Ex. 30<sup>19-21</sup>) was absolutely essential to continued communion, but it was not necessary that they be bathed as at their consecration (Ex. 29<sup>4</sup>).

18 It is very evident that the Lord chose Judas—he was one of “the elect”—for the purpose of betraying Him. He knew him from the beginning, and now He quotes the prophecy which foretold his act and sets forth most vividly the extreme treachery of it. According to the custom of the orient, those who partake of food together are enjoined by the most sacred obligations from doing harm to one another. The great depth of Judas’ degradation is not in the betrayal alone so much as in his previous privileges and position of trust. It is one of the marvels of our Lord’s life that He never “betrayed” Judas to the other disciples. He treated him as the rest, and so successfully concealed his true character from them that, at the very last, they did not guess why he went out, neither did they understand what our Lord said concerning him. His treatment of Judas is worth copying.

“Lord, not my feet only, but the hands also and the head!”

10 Jesus is saying to Him, “He who is bathed has no need except to be washing the feet, but is wholly clean. And you are clean, but not all.” For He was aware who is betraying Him. Therefore He said that “You are not all clean.”

12 When, then, He washes their feet, and took His garments and leans back again, He said to them, “Do you know what I have done to you? You are shouting to Me ‘Teacher!’ and ‘Lord!’ and you are saying ideally, for I am. 14 If, then, I, the Lord and Teacher, wash your feet, you also ought to be washing one another’s feet. For I have given you an example, that, according as I do to you, you also may be doing.

16 Verily, verily, I am saying to you, a slave is not greater than his lord, neither an apostle greater than He Who sends him. If you are aware of these things, happy are you if you should be doing them! Not concerning all of you am I speaking, for I am aware whom I choose. But that the scripture may be fulfilled,

“He who is masticating bread with Me
Lifts up his heel against Me.”

19 Henceforth I am speaking to you before it is occurring, that you should be believing, whenever it should be occurring, that I am.

20 Verily, verily, I am saying to you, whoever is taking any one I shall be sending, is taking Me, yet he who is taking Me is taking Him Who sends Me.”

21 Saying these things, Jesus was disturbed in spirit, and testifies and said, “Verily, verily, I am saying to you that one from among 22 you will be betraying Me.” The

<sup>26</sup> In the East all eating was done with the fingers, no knives or forks or spoons being used at a meal. In their place a small three-cornered piece of the thin, hard biscuit, like pancake, which is always served, is used to convey the food to the mouth. This is eaten with the morsel. How surpassingly kind and delicate was this method of indicating His betrayer! Only one would understand. The others would look upon it as a special mark of His favor, for the giving of the morsel was considered the highest mark of respect and honor which a host can show his guest. It is evident that not one of the disciples except John knew what it meant. It was the last loving act of the Lord for Judas, before His betrayal. Who can doubt that His grace will save him yet?

<sup>27</sup> Satan entered into Judas. This statement lifts the veil of the invisible powers of darkness and greatly modifies our judgment of Judas. It is evident that the Adversary did not think him capable of committing the capital crime, so forces him forward by actually obsessing him, and controlling his mind and his actions until it had been accomplished. He was not himself when he did it. But later, when he realized what he had done, his heart was filled with bitter regret and he did not hesitate to fling the money he had received into the faces of the chief priests, and acknowledged his terrible trespass.

<sup>30</sup> The day of Christ's ministry was done. Now it was night, the time when man does no work, but when the authority of darkness is most active. Not Judas, or the chief priests, or the scribes or Pharisees were the most malignant opponents of Christ. They, like Judas, were but puppets in the hands of His unseen spiritual adversaries. He was the One Who would crush the serpent's head; but He was also the One Whose heel the serpent would bruise. And now was the time. Satan uses all his arts and exerts all his power to crush Him. The cross is not merely the crisis of man's enmity to God. It is the culmination of the enmity of the spirit world as well. It is not confined to earth. It is the moral center of the universe.

disciples, then, looked at one another, perplexed about which one <sup>23</sup> He is saying it. Now one of His disciples, whom Jesus loved, was lying back in the bosom of Jesus.
<sup>24</sup> Simon Peter, then, is nodding to this one to ascertain whoever he may be of whom He spoke, and is saying to him, "Whatever did He say? About whom is He saying it?"
<sup>25</sup> That one, then, leaning back thus on the chest of Jesus, is saying to Him, "Lord, who is it?"
<sup>26</sup> Then Jesus is answering and saying, "It is that one to whom I, dipping in the morsel, shall be giving it to him." Dipping in the morsel, then, He is taking it and giving it to Judas of Simon Iscariot.
<sup>27</sup> And after the morsel, then Satan entered into that one. Jesus, then, is saying to him, "What you
<sup>29</sup> knew why He said this to him. For some supposed, since Judas had the coffer, that Jesus is saying to him "Buy what we have need of for the festival," or that he may be giving something to the poor.
<sup>30</sup> Then, on getting the morsel, he straightway came out. Now it was night.
<sup>31</sup> When, then, he came out, Jesus is saying, "Now is the Son of Man-kind glorified, and God is glorified
<sup>32</sup> in Him. If God is glorified in Him, God also shall be glorifying Him in Himself and shall straightway be glorifying Him.
<sup>33</sup> Little children, I am still with you for a little time. You shall be seeking Me, and, according as I said to the Jews that 'Where I am going you cannot be coming,' at present I am saying it to you also.
<sup>34</sup> A new precept am I giving to you, that you be loving one an-

<sup>34</sup> As our Lord is about to leave His beloved disciples, He compresses His ministry into one new precept—love. That was to be their law and their life and make them a light in the world. This should characterize His saints in this gracious economy in an even greater degree, for we have quaffed far deeper draughts of grace than His disciples ever tasted.

<sup>2</sup> The temple in Jerusalem was the Father's house. In the walls were many abodes for the priests and Levites who officiated in its precincts. There is no hint anywhere in the Scriptures that the disciples go to heaven. A celestial destiny was not revealed until the apostle Paul was in his Roman prison. Then he first made it known in his Ephesian epistle. But it is not for the saints of the Circumcision. All their blessings are heavenly in character and, like the new Jerusalem, come down out of heaven, but they are all enjoyed on earth. Only those in the present secret economy of God's grace are blessed with all spiritual blessings among the celestials. The Circumcision enjoy the days of heaven on earth. Hence Christ comes again and is with them in the kingdom.

<sup>7</sup> Christ's usual character in this evangel is the Word of God. Here, however, He gives us a glimpse of Himself as the Image of the Father. No man can see the invisible God. But surely the disciples had seen all the attributes of the Father manifested in Him, as He loved them and led them, taught them and fed them, giving them all the care and keeping of little other, according as I love you, that <sup>35</sup> you also be loving one another. By this all shall be knowing that you are My disciples, if you should be having love for one another."

Jesus answered him, "Where I am going you cannot follow Me now, yet you shall be following subsequently."

<sup>37</sup> Peter is saying to Him "Lord, wherefore cannot I follow Thee at present? I will lay down my soul for Thy sake."

<sup>38</sup> Jesus is answering "You will be laying down your soul for My sake? Verily, verily, I am saying to you, under no circumstances should the cock be crowing till you will be renouncing Me thrice.

<sup>14</sup> Let not your heart be disturbed. Be believing into God, and be be-

<sup>2</sup> lieving into Me. In My Father's house are many abodes, otherwise I should have told you, seeing that I am going to make ready a place <sup>3</sup> for you. And if I should be going and making ready a place for you, I am coming again and I will be taking you to Myself, that where I <sup>4</sup> am, you also may be. And you are aware where I am going, and you are aware of the way."

<sup>5</sup> Thomas is saying to Him, "Lord, we are not aware whither you are going, and how can we be aware of the way?"

<sup>6</sup> Jesus is saying to him, "I am the Way and the Truth and the Life. No one is coming to the Father except through Me. If you had known Me you would have known My Father also. And henceforth you <sup>7</sup> know Him and have seen Him."

children. He was not the Father, but the Father was in Him, and could be seen nowhere else. But this glimpse of the Father is (as is fitting in this account) most evident in His words and works. These were not His own, but the Father's.

12 We have here an intimation of the marvelous miracles accomplished by the apostles and others in the Pentecostal period, following His ascension, and also of the still greater marvels which will inaugurate the kingdom in the future. The spiritual blessings of the present are in reality far greater than any of these, but they were not in view at this time, for they were a secret, hidden in God, and could not be even hinted at until Israel's final failure was assured.

14 These words have proved a snare to many. They have requested much in His name which has not come to pass. This seems to reflect on His faithfulness. The difficulty vanishes when we see that this is not for the Uncircumcision (Ro.15<sup>8</sup>). Far higher truth is ours. It is set forth in Phil.4<sup>6</sup>. We make our requests known to God with thanksgiving, and leave them with Him to act upon as His love determines, not as we dictate.

16 The Lord Himself was the Consoler of the apostles while He was with them. Now that He was about to leave they would not only need the consolation He had given them, but a special measure to make up for His absence as well. It is most touching to see, as the dark shadows of the cross are crowding His soul, that He is not concerned for His own relief, but for the sorrows of His beloved disciples. The spirit He had promised after His glorification (7<sup>39</sup>) was to be a living spring, but, in view of the sorrow so soon to engulf them, it is now called a consoler, for this would be its first function.

It is called "the spirit of truth" in contrast to "the spirit of deception" (1 Jn. 4<sup>6</sup>). The world seeks comfort in its false philosophy but God's saints find consolation in the truth. The spirit of deception is that false flood of spirit force which is sweeping the world on to the worship of the anti-christ. The spirit of truth is its opposite.

9 Jesus is saying to him, "I am so much time with you and you do not know Me, Philip! He who has seen Me has seen the Father, and how are you saying, 'Show us the Father'?" Are you not believing that I am in the Father and the Father is in Me? The declarations which I am speaking to you, I am not speaking from Myself. Now the Father remaining in Me, He is doing His works.

11 Believe Me that I am in the Father and the Father in Me, otherwise be believing Me because of the works themselves. Verily, verily, I am saying to you, he who is believing into Me, the works which I am doing, he also will be doing, and greater than these will he be doing, seeing that I am going to the Father. And whatever you should be requesting in My name, this I shall be doing, that the Father should be glorified in the Son. If you should be requesting anything in My name, this I shall be doing. If you should be loving Me, you will be keeping My precepts.

16 And I shall be asking the Father, and He will be giving you another consoler, that it, indeed, may be with you for the eon; the spirit of truth, which the world cannot get, seeing that it is not beholding it, neither is knowing it. Yet you know it, seeing that it is remaining with you and will be in you.

18 I will not leave you bereaved: I am coming to you. Still a little and the world is beholding Me no longer, yet you are beholding Me. Seeing that I am living, you also are to live. In that day you shall know that I am in My Father, and you in Me, and I in you. He who has My precepts and is keeping them, he it is who is loving Me.

He told them that the declarations which He spoke are spirit and are life. It is the spirit that vivifies (6<sup>83</sup>). Hence we may take it that the impartation of the spirit, after His vivification, when He inflated and said "get holy spirit!" (20<sup>22</sup>), corresponds to the impartation of the breath of the living to Adam (Gen. 27), so that he became a living soul. In this way the last Adam showed Himself a life imparting Spirit (1 Co.15<sup>45</sup>).

Pentecost was not the reception of holy spirit to give life, but its baptism for cleansing, its filling for utterance, and its coming on for power.

The reception of holy spirit was dependent on repentance and baptism in the evangel of the kingdom (Ac.2<sup>38</sup>). In Samaria, the gift waited on the prayer and imposition of the hands of the apostles (Ac.8<sup>15-17</sup>) according to the authority which the Lord conferred on them when it was first given (20<sup>23</sup>). In the present economy of transcendent grace it is the portion of all who believe (Eph.1<sup>13</sup>). It is an earnest of all the spiritual possessions which are ours in Christ Jesus, among the celestials.

<sup>28</sup> In the East they do not say, as we do, "I am going", but rather "I am going and returning" when speaking of an ordinary journey. So the Lord assures them that He was not about to leave them permanently, but only for a while.

<sup>30</sup> When our Lord spoke of Himself in relation to the world He often used the third person. Witness the Son of Man (9<sup>37</sup>). See also 7<sup>18</sup>; 9<sup>37</sup>. He is the Coming One, for Whom all creation waits. Yet, when He came, the world had nothing at all in Him. It rejected His chieftainship just as Israel also rejected His messiahship and "there is nothing for Him" (Dan. 9<sup>26</sup>). None of the glories pertaining to Him were allowed by Israel and He will not assume them until He comes again in power and glory as revealed in the Unveiling, when He appears as the White Horse Rider, crowned with many diadems, the King of kings and Lord of lords (Un.19<sup>11-16</sup>). He, and not Satan, is the Chief of the world. This title occurs only in this account. See 12<sup>31</sup> and 16<sup>11</sup>.

Now he who is loving Me will be loved by My Father, and I shall be loving him and shall be disclosing Myself to him."

<sup>22</sup> Judas (not Iscariot) is saying to Him, "Lord, and what has occurred that Thou art about to be disclosing Thyself to us and not to the world?"

<sup>23</sup> Jesus answered and said to him, "If anyone should be loving Me, he will be keeping My word, and My Father will be loving him, and We shall be coming to him and making an abode with him. He who is not loving Me is not keeping My words. And the word which you are hearing is not Mine, but the Father's Who sends Me.

<sup>25</sup> These things have I spoken to you remaining with you. Now the consoler, the holy spirit which the Father will be sending in My name, that will be teaching you all, and reminding you of all that I said to you.

<sup>27</sup> Peace I am leaving with you. My peace I am giving to you. Not according as the world is giving to you am I giving to you. Let not your heart be disturbed, neither let it be timid. You hear that I said to you, 'I am going and I am coming to you.' If you loved Me, you rejoiced that I am going to the Father, seeing that the Father is greater than I. And now I have declared it to you ere it is occurring, that, whenever it should be occurring you should be believing.

<sup>30</sup> No longer shall I be speaking much with you, for the Chief of the world is coming, and in Me it has nothing at all. But that the world may know that I am loving the Father, and according as the Father directs Me, thus I am doing.

<sup>31</sup> What grace is there here! The world judges Him and casts Him out, so He immediately uses their hatred to reveal the love of God to Him and to them. Indeed, here we have love's greatest triumph. Men could not do worse or God better. His love needed their hatred for a foil and makes good use of it to emerge into the open where all the world can see.

<sup>1</sup> The fig, the olive, and the vine are used by God to picture the political, the spiritual, and the social blessedness of Israel as a nation. He brought a vine out of Egypt, cast out the nations, and planted it. It filled the land, but was destroyed (Ps. 80<sup>8-16</sup>). The vineyard of the Lord of Hosts is the house of Israel (Is. 57). Jeremiah laments that Jehovah had planted them an excellent local variety, yet they had turned into a foreign vine by their unfaithfulness and their joylessness (Jer. 22<sup>1</sup>). Jotham, in his parable of the trees, tells us that grape juice gladdens both God and mortals (Jud. 9<sup>13</sup>). But Hosea cries "Israel is a vacant vine. The fruit is equivalent to it" (Hos. 10<sup>1</sup>). Israel failed to gladden either God or mortals. Christ came and did both. He is the true Vine. The fruitless branches, those who remained not in Him, are taken away. His own are cleansed by the belief of the truth. All gladness for God or mortals must now come through the Messiah.

<sup>5</sup> He now restates the truth as to the vine. Only those with Him are the branches. Israel as a nation has no part in Him.

<sup>6</sup> The salvation proclaimed by our Lord and the twelve apostles was probational. There was always the danger of "drifting by" (Heb. 2<sup>1</sup>). They were His house if they retained the boldness and glorying of the expectation confirmed unto the consummation (Heb. 3<sup>6</sup>). They could withdraw from the living God (Heb. 3<sup>12</sup>). Many of those once enlightened fell aside (Heb. 6<sup>4-6</sup>). Such are those who did not remain in the vine, but withered and were destroyed. We, however, are not in the vine, but members of the body of Christ. and the members of a body cannot be lopped off like the branches of a vine. We are saved by grace, and do not depend on our own abiding, but

<sup>15</sup> I am the true grapevine, and My Father is the Farmer. Every branch in Me bringing forth no fruit, He is taking it away, and every one bringing forth fruit, He is cleansing it, that it may be bringing forth more fruit.

<sup>3</sup> Already you are clean because of the word which I have spoken to you. Remain in Me, and I in you. According as the branch cannot be carrying fruit from itself, if it should not be remaining in the grapevine, thus neither you, if you should not be remaining in Me.

<sup>5</sup> I am the grapevine. You are the branches. He who is remaining in Me, and I in him, this one is bringing forth much fruit, seeing that, apart from Me you can do nothing.

<sup>6</sup> If anyone should not be remaining in Me, he was cast out as a branch and is withered. And they are gathering them, and casting them into the fire, and he is being burned. If you should be remaining in Me and My declarations should be remaining in you, whatever you should be wanting, request and it will come to pass to you. In this is My Father glorified, that you may be bringing forth much fruit, and become My disciples.

<sup>9</sup> According as the Father loves Me, I, also, love you. Remain in My love. If you should be keeping My precepts, you will be remaining in My love, according as I have kept the precepts of My Father and am remaining in His love. I have spoken these things to you that My joy should be remaining in you and your joy may be filled.

<sup>12</sup> This is My precept, that you be loving one another, according as I love you. Greater love has no man than this, that any one may be laying down his soul for the sake of on His power and love. We are vitally and organically a part of Christ Himself. He would be maimed by the excision of members of His body. How thankful we should be that we are not branches in that vine!

<sup>12</sup> As the Lord had explained in His kingdom proclamation, the whole law was included in the one word, love. Love to God and love to man is far more than all the precepts of the law. So, in His final charge, as He is about to give them the greatest example of love the universe has seen or ever will see, in the offering of His soul to God for the sin of the world, He presses home to their hearts the excellent way of love.

Paul, in his appeal to us, the Uncircumcision, lays even greater stress on love. We have no law, no precepts. But love remains, and conduct in accord with love needs no law, but soars far above all its righteous demands.

<sup>16</sup> Too often is salvation made a matter of the sinner's choice. This sadly mars the full and clear apprehension of God's love which it is intended to reveal. All active effort in redemption is the outflow of divine love, and is entirely on God's side. All the sinner's activity is a hindrance. He would choose any one but God. His part is a passive or a negative one.

This basic truth is much more forcibly revealed later on in connection with the call of the nations. We were chosen by God in Christ before the disruption. Sin itself was subsequent to His choice of us. Hence, sin, either past or present, cannot affect God's purpose for us, or our acceptance of His grace. He chooses, He calls, He glorifies. He does not give man his choice or a chance. He has the wisdom and the power to impel men to fall into line with His purpose no matter what their natural inclination may be. All human experience confirms the divine declaration that He it is Who is operating in us to will as well as to work for the sake of His delight (Phil.2:15). Man can carry out his own will only so far as it accords with the purpose of God. When men rage against God, He uses their wrath as far as it is useful to His plans. The remainder of their wrath He restrains.

<sup>14</sup> his friends. You are My friends, if you should be doing whatever I am directing you.

<sup>15</sup> No longer am I terming you slaves, seeing that the slave is not aware what his lord is doing. Yet I have declared that you are friends, seeing that all that I hear from My

<sup>16</sup> Father I make known to you. You do not choose Me, but I choose you, and I appoint you, that you may be going away and be bringing forth much fruit, and your fruit should be remaining, that whatever you should be requesting the Father in My name, He will be giving it to you.

<sup>17</sup> I am directing you in these things that you may be loving one

<sup>18</sup> another. If the world is hating you, you know that it has hated Me

<sup>19</sup> before you. If you were of the world, the world would be fond of its own. Now, seeing that you are not of the world, but I choose you out of the world, therefore the world is hating you.

<sup>20</sup> Remember the word which I said to you, 'A slave is not greater than his lord.' If they persecute Me, they will be persecuting you also. If they keep My word, they will be <sup>21</sup> keeping yours also. But all these things will they be doing to you because of My name, seeing that they are not acquainted with Him Who sends Me.

<sup>22</sup> If I came not and speak to them, they had no sin. Yet now they have no pretense concerning their

<sup>23</sup> sin. He who is hating Me is hating My Father also. If I do not

<sup>24</sup> the works among them which no other one does, they had no sin. Yet now they have seen also, and they have hated Me and My Father

<sup>25</sup> also, but that the word written in their law may be fulfilled, that 'They hate Me gratuitously.'

<sup>1</sup> There is no hatred like religious hatred, no persecution so fierce as that fired by a mistaken zeal for God. Not only were the apostles persecuted in their day, but the truth of God is just as offensive to the recognized heads of Christendom now as it was to the chief priests of Judaism then. Those who boldly defend some doctrine, will just as boldly do their best to denounce and destroy the testimony to a truth of which they are ignorant, or which conflicts with their accepted creed. Happy is that servant of God who bares his brow to the storm in the consciousness that God not only knew and knows of all the opposition to His truth by the religious world, but who realizes that this also is a part of His purpose. Lack of success will not sadden, apparent failure will not make him faint. His only real defeat will follow any attempt to retaliate. Let us never be found on the side of those who persecute. Blessed (not happy!) are the persecuted! Their reward is sure. May His grace enable us to enjoy suffering for Him!

<sup>8</sup> The world is to be convicted on three counts by the spirit, now that Christ is absent. His sinless life, His righteousness, His proclamation of the kingdom all cease with His return to His Father. But all are used by the spirit to convict the world. Even the unbeliever is convinced that all have sinned except the Christ of the scriptures. No other man is acknowledged to have been perfectly just. They assent to the injustice of His judgment.

If we make "the Chief of this world" a title of Satan we involve ourselves in a maze of difficulties. If the world or God had judged Satan, how would that convict the world? And he certainly has not been judged yet. Christ is the great Chief of the world. He was judged and crucified by it. We question whether any sane man, today, will justify its action. The world has been convicted or convinced by the spirit of truth even though it knows it not.

<sup>26</sup> Now whenever the consoler which I shall be sending you from the Father should be coming, the spirit of truth which is going out from the Father, that will be testifying concerning Me. Now you, also, are testifying, seeing that you are with Me from the beginning.

<sup>16</sup> I have spoken these things to you that you may not be snared, <sup>2</sup> for they will be putting you out of the synagogues; but the hour is coming that every one who is killing you shall suppose he is offering divine service to God. And they will be doing these things to you seeing that they know not the Father nor <sup>4</sup> yet Me. But these things have I spoken to you that whenever their hour should be coming you may be remembering them, seeing that I told you.

Now I did not tell you these things from the beginning, seeing <sup>5</sup> that I was with you. Yet now I am going away to Him Who sends Me, and not one of you is asking Me, 'Whither art Thou going?' <sup>6</sup> But, seeing that I have spoken these things to you, sorrow has filled your heart.

<sup>7</sup> But I am telling you the truth. It is expedient for you that I am coming away, for if I should not be coming away, the consoler will not be coming to you. Now if I should be gone, I shall be sending him to you. And coming, that will be exposing the world concerning sin and concerning righteousness and <sup>9</sup> concerning judgment: concerning sin, indeed, seeing that they are <sup>10</sup> not believing into Me; yet concerning righteousness, seeing that I am going to My Father and you are no <sup>11</sup> longer beholding Me; yet concerning judgment, seeing that the Chief of this world has been judged.

<sup>12</sup> The words of our Lord preserved for us in the four accounts of His life come very far from giving us all that He had to say. They were sadly limited by the incapacity of His hearers. Even His closest disciples could not understand some of the simplest facts, simply told. They would not listen to the story of His supreme sacrifice. His temporary departure was a puzzle to them. As the great galaxy of truth subsequently revealed depends on His shameful death and glorious exaltation for its very foundation, how could they begin to understand?

Hence it will be seen that the transcendent truths of scripture should not be sought in the words of our Lord, but in the subsequent utterances of the spirit of truth. Furthermore, much could not be revealed until Israel had once more definitely refused the proclamation of the kingdom by the apostles, as recorded in the book of Acts. This, and the fact that the spirit is given a much larger place in Paul's ministry than ever before, leads us to look in his epistles for the supreme revelation. And a thorough study will convince us that this is so, for he it is who reveals those secrets which enabled him to "complete the word of God" (Col. 1<sup>25</sup>). He takes us back before Genesis (Eph. 1<sup>4</sup>), and brings us far beyond the Unveiling (1 Co. 15<sup>24</sup>).

Any system of theology which plays our Lord's words against Paul's, or does not recognize the predominant place of Paul's epistles for the present, is in practical opposition to the plain statement made by our Lord Himself. Much of what our Lord wished to say He has spoken through His apostles, by means of that spirit of truth which would enable them to apprehend what would otherwise be beyond them.

The great apostasy of the present time is largely fortified by the refusal to heed these clear declarations of the Lord Himself. The truth especially given for the nations is ignored and the truth intended only for the Circumcision, more especially that taught by our Lord, is wrested from its place and forced into a position for which it was never intended.

<sup>12</sup> I have much to say to you still, but you are not able to bear it at present. Yet whenever that may be coming, the spirit of truth, it will be guiding you into all the truth, for it will not be speaking from itself, but whatever it should be hearing will it be speaking, and it will be informing you of what is coming. That will be glorifying Me, seeing that it will be getting of Mine and informing you. All, whatever the Father has, is Mine. Therefore I said to you that it will be getting of Mine and informing you.

<sup>16</sup> A little, and you are beholding Me no longer; and again, a little, and you shall be seeing Me."

<sup>17</sup> Some, then, among His disciples said to one another, "What is this that He is saying to us, 'A little, and you are not beholding Me, and again, a little, and you shall be seeing Me?' and that 'I am going away to the Father'?" They said, then, "What is this 'little' of which He is speaking? We are not aware of what He is speaking."

<sup>19</sup> Jesus, then, knew that they wanted to ask Him, and He said to them, "Are you seeking with one another concerning this that I said, 'A little, and you are not beholding Me, and again, a little, and you shall be seeing Me'?" Verily, verily, I am saying to you that you shall be lamenting and wailing, yet the world will be rejoicing: yet you shall be sorrowing, but your sorrow shall become joy. A woman, whenever she may be bringing forth, has sorrow, seeing that her hour has come, yet whenever she should be bearing the little child, she no longer is remembering the affliction because of the joy that a human being was born into the world. You, then, also, now, in-

 25 these IN proverbs

<sup>27</sup> There is a common but false feeling that God is a stern Judge but Christ a lenient Saviour. This is very wrong, for Christ is but a reflection of the Father. Christ Himself in His time will be a Judge and deal out justice. But let us not imagine that He came to appease God's wrath entirely of His own volition. All that He did was in obedience to the will of God and in order to display the heart of God. It is a sure sign of true spiritual progress when we are enabled to look through Christ to the God that He portrays.

<sup>28</sup> His miraculous entry into the world is more than matched by His marvelous exit. He alone knew what His childlike words implied: "I am leaving the world and going to the Father." Little did His disciples dream of the shame and suffering, distress and death that lay upon that appalling path to the Father!

<sup>33</sup> "I have conquered the world." Who thinks of the lowly Nazarene as a world conqueror? Who would include Him in such a list? The world would mention Nebuchadnezzar, Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne, Napoleon. These have written their names in blood on the bar sinister of the world's escutcheon. No one gives them homage now. The sober and sane shudder at their sinful excesses. Christ is the real world conqueror! He has held the homage of men's hearts and will bend them into perfect acquiescence with the will of God.

<sup>8</sup> The knowledge of God is not given as the definition of eonian life, but eonian life is imparted that they may be knowing Him. Eonian life is life during the eons of Christ's reign and glory. Two methods are used by Him to acquaint His saints with Himself. First, they are left to taste the sorrows of sin at a distance from Him. Then, in the eons of the eons, in glorious fellowship with His Son, each high tide of bliss will mark some new discovery of His love, some fresh token of His affection.

deed, will be having sorrow, yet I shall be seeing you again, and your heart shall be rejoicing, and your joy no one shall be taking away from you. And in that day you will not be asking Me one thing.

Verily, verily, I am saying to you that anything you should be requesting the Father in My name, He will be giving it to you. Hitherto you request nothing in My name. Request and you shall obtain, that your joy may be filled full.

<sup>25</sup> These things have I spoken to you in proverbs. The hour is coming when I shall no longer be speaking to you in proverbs, but shall be reporting to you boldly concerning the Father. In that day you will be requesting in My name, and I am not telling you that I shall be asking the Father concerning you, for the Father Himself is fond of you, seeing that you have been fond of Me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came out from the Father and have come into the world. Again, I am leaving the world and going to the Father."

<sup>29</sup> His disciples are saying to Him, "Lo! now Thou art speaking boldly, and Thou art speaking no proverb. Now we are aware that Thou art aware of all and hast no need that any one may be asking Thee. By this we are believing that Thou camest out from God."

<sup>31</sup> Jesus answered them, "At present you are believing. Lo! the hour is coming and has come that you should be scattered, each to his own and you may be leaving Me alone. And I am not alone, seeing that the Father is with Me. These things have I spoken to you that you may have peace in Me. In the world you have affliction. But, courage! I have conquered the world."

<sup>4</sup> The charge against all mankind is that all sin and are wanting of the glory of God (Ro. 3<sup>23</sup>). God guarantees to give glory and honor and incorruption to all who endure in good acts. Our Lord is the only one who can claim the reward. He is the only one who glorified God on the earth. He is the only one who accomplished the work God gave Him. Hence it seems perfectly natural for Him to demand glorification. Yet He does not ask for the glory His work deserves, but the glory which He had before the world is. He leaves His reward with God Himself. The saints will be a precious part of it.

<sup>6</sup> Hebrew names were usually most expressive of character, life or ministry. Even we speak of a good or a bad "name", referring rather to character than sound or significance. Among the Jews the name of their God was given the honor due to the deity, hence it was never pronounced. Christ manifested God's name by displaying His attributes in His life and conduct.

It is a precious thought to consider the disciples as a gift from the Father to His Son. As such, He valued them, not for their own sakes alone, but because of the Giver. It is this interweaving of human lives into the affections of God and His Christ which should give us the greatest cause for confidence and comfort. Our little lives are bound up with the love of God for His Son and the Son's response to the Father. As He says (<sup>10</sup>), all His belong to God, and all God's are His. It is a great thing to have a God. But it is a much greater to know ourselves as the valued possession of God and His Beloved.

<sup>10</sup> Glory consists in the esteem in which we are held by others. In the world Christ had no glory then, but in His own He was esteemed more than ever was the lot of man, and it has come to pass that, even in the world that rejects Him and repudiates His teaching, His name is placed upon the pinnacle of moral glory.

<sup>11</sup> It seems evident that, in spirit, the Lord is beyond the cross. There it was that He finished His work (<sup>4</sup>), and until then He was still in the world.

<sup>17</sup> These things speaks Jesus, and lifting His eyes to heaven, He said, "Father, the hour has come. Glorify Thy Son, that Thy Son should <sup>2</sup> be glorifying Thee, according as Thou givest Him authority over all flesh, that every one whom Thou hast given to Him, to them He <sup>3</sup> should be giving eonian life. Now this eonian life is that they may be knowing Thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ, Whom Thou dost commission.

<sup>4</sup> I glorify Thee on the earth, finishing the work which Thou hast given Me, that I should be doing it.

<sup>5</sup> And now glorify Thou Me, Father, with Thyself, with the glory which I had with Thee before the <sup>6</sup> world is. I make manifest Thy name to the men whom Thou givest Me out of the world. Thine they were and Thou givest them to Me, <sup>7</sup> and they have kept Thy word. Now they know that all, whatever Thou <sup>8</sup> hast given Me is from Thee, seeing that the declarations which Thou hast given Me I have given them, and they took them, and know truly that I came out from Thee, and they believe that Thou dost commission Me.

<sup>9</sup> I am asking concerning them. Not concerning the world am I asking, but concerning those whom Thou hast given Me, seeing that <sup>10</sup> they are Thine. And all Mine are Thine, and Thine Mine. And I <sup>11</sup> have been glorified in them. And I am no longer in the world, and they are in the world, and I am coming to Thee. Holy Father, keep them in Thy name in which Thou hast given them to Me, that they may be one, according as We <sup>12</sup> are. When I was with them in the world I kept those whom Thou hast given Me in Thy name, and I

<sup>19</sup> That holiness, or sanctification, is not essentially a cleansing from sin is evident from this statement, for our Lord would not cleanse Himself from His own sin, for He had none, and He was not cleansed from, but bore, the sins of others. When the priest was consecrated, his hands were filled with the sacrifice. Real holiness consists in a positive occupation with the things of God, rather than a negative absence of sin.

<sup>22</sup> The unity existing between the Son and the Father is here defined, for He desires the same oneness for His disciples. It is a unity of spirit and a community of interests which characterized the early disciples. This is the unity which exists between the Son and the Father. There is no thought of identity. How distinct they were in will, which is the vital element in personality, was to be seen a little later, in the garden of Gethsemane, where the will of Christ was not in line with God's. The cross was not His will, but the subordination of it to His Father.

<sup>23</sup> It is with awed hearts and unshod feet that we enter into the pure precincts of God's love to His Son. We feel most unworthy to listen to such sacred secrets. Before the disruption, before sin or sorrow or a single sigh had sent its shadows across this scene, God's love for His Son had its birth. He came into the world, not to win God's love, but in response to it. His whole ministry was an exhibition of it, and an appeal for a suitable response. Now He reveals its fullest force, when He declares that God loves them as He loved Him. Few of His followers at that time, or even after the enlightening aid of the spirit that He had promised, entered into the fullness of this marvelous manifestation of God's affections.

guard them, and not one of them was destroyed except the son of destruction, that the scripture may be fulfilled. Yet now I am coming to Thee, and these things am I speaking in the world that they may be having My joy fulfilled in themselves.

<sup>14</sup> I have given them Thy word. And the world hates them, seeing that they are not of the world, according as I am not of the world. I am not asking that Thou shouldst be taking them away out of the world, but that Thou shouldst be keeping them out of the wickedness. They are not of the world, according as I am not of the world. <sup>17</sup> Hallow them by Thy truth. Thy word is truth.

<sup>18</sup> According as Thou dost dispatch Me into the world, I also dispatch <sup>19</sup> them into the world. And for their sakes I am hallowing Myself, that they also may be hallowed by the truth. Yet not concerning these only am I asking, but also concerning those who are believing into Me through their word, that they may all be one, according as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be in Us, that the world should be believing that Thou dost commission Me.

<sup>22</sup> And I have given them the glory which Thou hast given Me, that they may be one, according as We are One. I in them and Thou in Me, that they may be perfected in one, and that the world may be knowing that Thou dost commission Me and dost love them according as Thou dost love Me.

<sup>24</sup> Father, whom Thou hast given Me, I will that where I am they also may be with Me, that they may be beholding My glory, which Thou hast given Me, seeing that

<sup>8</sup> Darkness is the day, for evil doers. The Lord worked in the day. Satan fears the light. Even in the night they need a squad of soldiers and armed deputies to take a gentle, unarmed Man and His timid disciples. His simple words cast them to the earth. He calmly orders them to leave His disciples alone. It would seem that He was in authority, rather than they.

<sup>4</sup> We must look behind the scenes to appreciate the tremendous issues involved in this betrayal. The cohorts of darkness were in command of Satan. The one who had deluded Eve in the garden of Eden was bruising the heel of the woman's Seed. He had managed to enlist mankind against Him. Christ Himself had called the Jews children of their father the Slanderer. Satan had actually obsessed Judas, and in him was present as chief actor and spectator. The Prince of light and the Prince of darkness meet in the treacherous kiss of Judas.

<sup>10</sup> Impulsive Peter has not yet learned the lesson of the cross, and so he does the very worst possible thing. The difficulty with the Lord's enemies was that they had no ears that heard. What use is it to strike off the very thing they lacked? But the Lord has a heart for His enemies even in this time of His sorest distress. Elsewhere we read that He healed the hurt of the one who came to take His life. What a marvelous hint of the blessings to which His sorrows would give birth!

<sup>11</sup> The Lord was aware of His enemies' thoughts. He perceived the opposition of Satan, yet He saw behind it all the will of His Father. The cup He was to drain was a bitter one. He had no wish to drink it. He knew what men would do, but did not blame them for it. He prayed for their forgiveness. He knew the craft of Satan, but He also knew that behind all these was, not only the iron will of a sovereign God, but the loving affection of a Father. He received it all from His hands. He not only bends beneath the stroke, but He leaves it all to the Father's love. He could trust, though He slay Him. His was the faith that never failed.

Thou lovest Me before the disruption of the world. Just Father, the world, also, knew Thee not, yet I knew Thee. And these know that Thou dost commission Me. And I make known to them Thy name, and I shall make it known, that the love with which Thou lovest Me may be in them and I in them."

<sup>18</sup> Saying these things, Jesus came out with His disciples to the other side of the Kedron winter brook, where there was a garden, into which He entered, He and His disciples. Now Judas also, who is betraying Him, is acquainted with the place, seeing that Jesus was often assembled there with His disciples.

<sup>3</sup> Judas, then, getting a squad and deputies of the chief priests and Pharisees, is coming there with lanterns and torches and weapons.

<sup>4</sup> Jesus, then, being aware of all that is coming upon Him, coming out, said to them, "Whom are you seeking?" They answered Him, "Jesus, the Nazarene." Jesus is saying to them, "I am." Now Judas, also, who is betraying Him, stood with them.

<sup>6</sup> As, then, He said to them, "I am," they drop behind and fall on the ground. Again, then, He inquires of them, "Whom are you seeking?" Now they said, "Jesus, the Nazarene." Jesus answered, "I said to you that I am. If, then, you are seeking Me, let these go away," that the saying may be fulfilled which He said, that "Of those whom Thou hast given Me, of them I lose not one."

17 We can imagine what a tumult was in the heart of the impetuous, warm-hearted, self-confident Peter. He would never disown His Lord! He would suffer anything for His sake! He would not believe the Lord's plain prediction of his faithlessness. He was ready to face torture and death—some great thing which would bring him applause—but he was not ready for a simple question from a mere maid. Perhaps he prided himself on following the Lord into the house, but his pride must have suffered severely as he pondered his craven conduct. He was having a practical experience of what the apostle records concerning those who seek to please God in the flesh—"What I am hating, this am I doing" (Ro. 7<sup>15</sup>). How many since have found that they, too, were like Peter, strong to will, but unable to carry out the desires of their heart. And the best part of such an experience is that it destroys confidence in the flesh and drives us to the ground of grace, where we receive power and ability to carry out the mind of the spirit.

18 Houses in the cities of Palestine are heated by means of a charcoal brazier. It is a copper stand about two feet high, with a chafing dish on top. This pan is filled with ashes and on this the charcoal is placed. It is taken outside and lighted and kindled by the breeze or a fan. Then it is brought into the house.

19 Contrast Peter's craven course with the firm fortitude of his Master. The chief priest, the symbol of holiness and truth, masks his diabolical design by a hypocritical inquiry into the Lord's teachings. But the Lord reads his heart and tears off his mask. There was not the slightest weakness or compromise. It never occurred to Him to deny aught of His teaching or to evade the sufferings which threw their gloomy shadows across His path.

24 Annas was made chief priest by Cyrenius, but was deposed seven years later. After three others had held the office, his son-in-law, Caiaphas, became chief priest, and he always seems to be reckoned as holding the office with him. Luke tells us that both were the scabbard. The cup which the Father has given Me, should I not drink it at all?"

12 The squad, then, and the captain, and the deputies of the Jews apprehended Jesus and they bind Him, and led Him away to Annas first, for he was the father-in-law of Caiaphas, who was the chief priest of that year. Now it was Caiaphas who advises the Jews that it is expedient for one man to be dying for the sake of the people.

15 Now Simon Peter and another disciple followed Jesus. Now that disciple was known to the chief priest, and he entered together with Jesus into the courtyard of the chief priest. Yet Peter stood at the door outside.

The other disciple, then, who was known to the chief priest, came out and told the door keeper and he led Peter in. The maid, then, who kept the door, is saying to Peter, "Are not you also of this man's disciples?" He is saying, "I am not!"

18 Now the slaves and deputies also stood by, having made a charcoal fire, seeing that it was cold, and they warmed themselves. Now Peter, also, was standing with them, and warming himself.

19 The chief priest, then, asks Jesus concerning His disciples and concerning His teaching. And Jesus answered him, "I have spoken boldly to the world. I always teach in a synagogue and in the sanctuary where all the Jews are coming together, and I speak nothing in hiding. Why are you asking Me? Inquire of those who have heard what I talk to them. Lo! they are aware what I said."

22 Now at His saying these things, one of the deputies standing by gives Jesus a slap, saying "Are you chief priests (Lu. 3<sup>2</sup>). This alone shows how little regard they had for God's law, which prescribed a single succession absolutely independent of human interference. They were false, chosen by ungodly alien enemies, He was the true Priest about to offer up the true Lamb. They were supposed to put away the sin of the people. Instead, they are the instigators of the sin of sins.

28 What insufferable hypocrites they were! Plotting the death of God's holy One, and afraid their bloody feet would be defiled by entering where He was! The law said, "You shall not murder." And their greatest regret was that they could not kill Him themselves! The only accusation they could bring was that they demanded His death.

29 In marked contrast with the high priest is the conduct of Pilate. They were enlightened by the law, but their light had become darkness. He had nothing but the feeble flicker of natural conscience, but he wished to follow it. His first thought, however, was for himself. If possible, he would get out of this dilemma by turning Him over to them. In so doing he would not invite their displeasure and would avoid the immediate responsibility of doing what was undoubtedly an unjust act. But they did not want to try Him. They wanted to murder Him.

36 Scripture knows of five "worlds", which correspond to the five eons. Before Christ's kingdom will be set up there must be the great judgments which usher in a new eon and a new world. Had the Jews received Him, humanly speaking, the kingdom would have come, but, since they reject Him, He could say "Now is My kingdom not hence." Ever since the crisis in His ministry when it became evident that the nation would not hear, He had put off the kingdom to a distant time. For some time He had not been proclaiming the kingdom, so that Pilate had no fault to find.

23 Jesus answered him, "If I speak evilly, testify concerning the evil, yet if ideally, why are you lashing Me?" Annas, then dispatches Him bound to Caiaphas the chief priest.

25 Now Simon Peter was standing and warming himself. They said, then, to him, "Are not you also of his disciples?" He disowns and said "I am not." One of the chief priest's slaves, being a relative of the one whose ear Peter strikes off, is saying "Did I not perceive you in the garden with him?" Again, then, Peter disowns. And immediately a cock crows.

28 They are, then, leading Jesus from Caiaphas to the pretorium. Now it was morning and they did not enter the pretorium lest they may be defiled, but may be eating the passover.

29 Then Pilate came out to them and is averring, "What accusation are you bringing against this man?"

30 They answered and said to him, "If this man was doing no evil, we should not give him up to you."

31 Pilate then, said to them, "You take him and judge him according to your law."

The Jews, then, said to him, "It is not allowed us to kill any one," that the word of Jesus may be fulfilled which He said, signifying what death He was about to die.

33 Again, then, Pilate entered into the pretorium and summons Jesus and said to Him, "Are you the king of the Jews?"

34 Jesus answered him, "Are you saying this of yourself, or did others tell you concerning Me?"

35 Pilate answered, "Am I a Jew? Your nation and the chief priests give you up to me. What do you do?"

 OUT OF-THE SYSTEM this

<sup>37</sup> Pilate, like many others who have mistaken the Lord's meaning, thought that He denied being a King. Perhaps he thought that He was founding a "spiritual kingdom". But the Lord corrects this false supposition. He solemnly asseverates that He is in very truth a King. This was a very serious matter for Pilate to pass upon, for he was the political head of the people. It is this charge alone that appeals to him, hence he gives our Lord the private investigation noted only in this account. Many zealous impostors arose from time to time among the Jews, proclaiming themselves to be the Messiah, and inciting the Jews to insurrection against the Romans. The real issue between Pilate and our Lord was to settle the question whether He intended to lead an armed resistance to the rule of Rome. In case He did, Pilate perforce must act to suppress the incipient rebellion and to execute the leader. But, as the Lord had no thought of establishing His kingdom in this manner, He convinces Pilate of His innocence in that regard. The other charges were religious and did not interest Pilate. Hence he desired to set Him free.

<sup>40</sup> The people choose Bar-Abbas, which signifies Son-Father. They preferred a son of their own father, the Slanderer, a man who was a robber and a murderer, to the Son of the Father, Who not only brought them an untold wealth of blessing but actually brought the dead to life again. What a contrast between these two, whose names are so similar! The Saviour suffers: the sinner is set free! Bar-Abbas is a type of the great mass who will eventually be saved without faith.

<sup>1</sup> The Roman soldiers mock the Messianic hope of Israel by making Him a mimic monarch. The royal purple and the thorny wreath are accompanied by mocking adulation of His imaginary majesty. Some day that bleeding brow will wear its many diadems. But all the regal rank that these reveal will not endear Him to our hearts like the cruel wreath of thorns. It is the symbol of a power and a glory that compels a willing homage and an adoring loyalty.

<sup>36</sup> Jesus answered, "My kingdom is not of this world. If My kingdom were of this world, My deputies, also, would have contended, lest I should be given up to the Jews. Yet now is My kingdom not hence."

<sup>37</sup> Pilate, then, said to Him, "Are you not a king, then?"

Jesus answered, "You are saying that I am a King. For this also have I been born, and for this have I come into the world, that I should be testifying to the truth. Every one who is of the truth is hearing My voice."

<sup>38</sup> Pilate is saying to Him, "What is truth!" And, saying this, he came out again to the Jews and is saying to them, "I am finding <sup>29</sup> nothing to charge him with. Now it is your usage that I should be releasing one to you in the Passover. Are you intending, then, that I should be releasing to you the king of the Jews?"

<sup>3</sup> And they came to Him and said, "Rejoice! O king of the Jews!"

<sup>4</sup> and give Him slaps. And Pilate came outside again and is saying to them, "Lo! I am leading him out to you, that you may know that I am finding nothing to charge him with."

<sup>5</sup> Jesus, then, came out, wearing the thorny wreath and the purple cloak. And he is saying to them,

<sup>7</sup> It appears on the surface, that Pilate's question, when he heard that the Lord claimed to be the Son of God, was ignored. Not so. Since the Lord was the Son of God it was far beneath His dignity to reply in words. His conduct was far more convincing. Pilate understood His silence far better than any words.

<sup>8</sup> The magnificent bearing of Christ before Pilate is without a parallel in the annals of justice. He should have been afraid of the cruel and unscrupulous Roman minion, but it is Pilate who fears. And when the haughty Roman threatens Him He calmly tells him that there is a higher authority. What a triumphant trust in God sustained Him in all this terrific and heart rending ordeal! Can we not picture to ourselves the furious, blood-thirsty mob, keeping its distance for hypocritical fear of contamination, yet fouling the very atmosphere with their false and fiendish accusations; the disdainful governor, who has no wish to become involved in their religious controversies, arrogant, yet fearful, strong, yet weakly catering to their unjust demands; and the solitary, self-composed, lowly Man. He was meekly bowing to the will of God; they were ignorantly fulfilling the behest of Satan.

<sup>12</sup> Pilate was submitting to what he deemed a political necessity. We must concede that he did all any Roman governor would have done under the circumstances. The Jews could easily have caused trouble at Rome if he should fail to deal summarily with one who was popularly hailed as a political opponent of Cæsar.

<sup>14</sup> The reading "third" (instead of the usual "sixth") is used on the evidence of the editor of Sinaiticus. Many ingenious explanations have been offered in order to harmonize the sixth hour in this passage with the third hour in Mk. 15<sup>25</sup>, but none of them are satisfactory. The darkness did not fall until the sixth hour, which is midday, but that came not only after His own crucifixion, and that of the malefactors, but also after the robbers had been impaled.

And Pilate is saying to them, "You take him and crucify him, for I am finding nothing to charge him with."

<sup>7</sup> The Jews answered him, "We have a law, and according to our law he ought to die, seeing that he makes himself the son of God."

<sup>8</sup> When, then, Pilate hears this saying he was the more afraid. And he entered the pretorium again and is saying to Jesus, "Whence are you?" Yet Jesus gives him no answer. Pilate, then, is saying to Him, "You are not talking to me!" Are you not aware that I have authority to release you and have authority to crucify you?"

<sup>11</sup> Jesus answered him, "You have no authority against Me in a single thing except it were given you from above. Therefore he who is betraying Me to you has the greater sin."

<sup>12</sup> At this, Pilate sought to release Him, yet the Jews clamored, saying, "If you should be releasing this man, you are not a friend of Cæsar! Every one who is making himself king is contradicting Cæsar!" Pilate, then, hearing these words, led Jesus outside, and he is seated on the dais in a place termed the "Pavement"; yet in Hebrew "Gabbatha".

<sup>14</sup> Now it was the preparation of the Passover. It was about the third hour. And he is saying to the Jews, "Lo! your king!" Yet they clamor then, "Away! Away! Crucify him!" Pilate is saying to 17 Stoning was the mode prescribed by the law of Moses for the death penalty. It was a comparatively swift and painless death, as a single blow on the head would stun the victim into unconsciousness. The Roman cross or stake was far more painful and shameful. The victim was nailed to a single upright stake and left to die, a lingering and humiliating spectacle to all who beheld.

The glamour with which religion seeks to surround the cross is false and misleading. Its only halo is dense darkness, its power weakness, its glory shame.

The shamefulness of crucifixion is the fitting climax to the descent of Christ from the highest glory to the lowest humiliation. Even as He had been far above all, so now it was meet that He should come down to the lowest depths of degradation. It is this aspect of His death which is intended by the term "cross" or "pale". This registers, not the fact of His death, but the manner of it. This, in turn, throws a lurid light on the world that had so little respect for the One Who had the highest place in heaven.

But, besides this, the cross is the place of the curse. It was necessary for the sinless One to become sin. It was needful for Him to forsake the place of the blessing for the place of the curse. "Accursed is every one being hanged on a pole" was a portion of the law which He had never fulfilled. This form of death—crucifixion—robbed Him of His last refuge. God Himself became His enemy, and forsook Him.

23 As our Lord belonged to the lower class, He would doubtless dress accordingly. They wore only five articles of clothing, a long cotton shirt, a girdle, usually of leather or worsted, a turban, sandals, and a tunic over all made of goat's or camel's hair or worsted. The four soldiers could readily divide the first four among themselves, but the fifth, being specially made without a seam, was probably of more value than all the rest together. It would spoil it to divide it, so it was that they were compelled to cast lots and fulfill the Scriptures.

them, "Shall I be crucifying your king?" The chief priests answered, "We have no king except Cæsar!"

16 He, then, gives Him up to them, then, that He may be crucified.

They took Jesus along, then, and led Him away. And, bearing the cross Himself, He came out into the place termed the "Skull", which is termed, in Hebrew, "Golgotha", where they crucify Him, and with Him two others, hence and hence, yet Jesus in the midst.

19 Now Pilate writes a title also, and places it on the cross. Now it was written,

JESUS THE NAZARENE,
THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title, then, many of the Jews read, seeing that the place where Jesus was crucified was near the city, and it was written in Hebrew, Latin, Greek.

21 The chiefs priests of the Jews, then, said to Pilate, "Do not be writing 'The king of the Jews' but that that one said 'I am king of the Jews'."

22 Pilate answered, "What I have written, I have written!"

23 The soldiers, then, when they crucify Jesus, took His garments and make four parts, to each soldier a part, and the tunic. Now the tunic was seamless, woven from above throughout the whole.

24 Then they said to one another, "We should not be rending it, but take chances on it, whose it shall be," that the scripture may be fulfilled which is saying

"They divide My garments among themselves,
And on My vesture they cast the lot."

The soldiers, indeed, then, do these things.

25 Physical relationships are temporary, and will be superseded by spiritual ties. All lasting spiritual bonds are made at the foot of the cross.

28 Perhaps in no other circumstances could we realize the intense passion of Christ for the word of God. His work was accomplished. We may know a little of what He felt from the words of the Psalmist (22<sup>14-15</sup>):

I am poured out as water,
And all My bones are dissected.
My heart becomes as wax;
It is melted in the midst of My bowels.
My vigor is dry as earthenware,
And My tongue is clinging to My jaws,
And on the soil of death,
Thou art setting Me as the hearth stones.

Death, at the hands of God, not His enemies, was before Him. Yet one passage of scripture was not fulfilled. He had done His part, but men had not done theirs. The Psalmist had foretold (69<sup>21</sup>):

And they put poison in My repast;
And for My thirst they cause Me to drink vinegar.

So He prompts them, and they fill the sponge and fulfill the passage.

Truly, not one letter of the law shall fail till all is fulfilled! If He could drink that bitter draught in the moment of His greatest weakness and deepest despair, that the scripture may be perfected, what will He do in the day of His power and glory? He will surely see that not a single line of the scriptures will fail of fulfillment.

30 The death of Christ was not due to the failure of His faculties, or to exhaustion. It was a deliberate act of His will. After having accomplished the work the Father set for Him to do, there was no need of further suffering. So He laid down His soul of His own volition; He gave up His spirit to God.

31 There were many sabbaths in Israel beside the weekly one. This sabbath was the first day of the festival of Unleavened bread (Lev. 23<sup>7</sup>). As it introduced the seven day festival when all leaven was excluded from their houses, it was considered a far greater day than a weekly sabbath. It may be that the spirit of God is hinting also at 25 Now there had stood beside the cross of Jesus His mother and His mother's sister, Mary of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene. Jesus, then, perceiving His mother and the disciple whom He loved standing beside Him, is saying to His mother, 26 "Woman, lo! your son!" Thereafter He is saying to the disciple, "Lo! your mother!" And from that hour the disciple took her to his own.

28 After this, Jesus, being aware that all has already been accomplished, that the scripture may be perfected, is saying, "I am thirsting!" 29 Now a vessel lay there distended with vinegar. Then placing a sponge distended with vinegar on hyssop, they carry it to His mouth. When, then, Jesus took the vinegar, He said, "It has been accomplished!" And reclining His head, He gives up the spirit.

31 The Jews, then, since it was preparation, lest the bodies should be remaining on the cross on the sabbath (for that sabbath was a great day), ask Pilate that they might be fracturing their legs and 32 they may be taken away. The soldiers, then, came and fracture indeed the legs of the first and of the other who was crucified with Him. 33 Yet on coming to Jesus, as they perceived He had already died, they do not fracture His legs.

34 But one of the soldiers punctures His side with a lance head, and straightway blood and water 35 came out. And he who has seen has testified, and his testimony is true. And he is aware that he is telling the truth, that you, also, 36 should be believing. For these its real greatness. Leaven is a type of sin. Now the great Sin Offering had been slain, and sin was indeed put away! It was the greatest day in the Jewish calendar.

<sup>32</sup> The course of the narrative here clearly shows that there were four others crucified with Christ. There were two malefactors and two robbers. The soldiers crush the legs of two before they come to Christ, so there must have been two on each side. There were no "thieves". One of the malefactors believed on Him.

<sup>38</sup> What a notable change the crucifixion makes in two of the secret disciples of our Lord! Joseph of Arimathea was afraid of the Jews, but now he has the courage to go to Pilate and he takes the body away before the eyes of those he once feared. Nicodemus, also, does not wait till dark to bring the spices for embalming the body. He comes forth in the light of day. It is the cross, the suffering and shame, the agony and the degradation, of the One Who had won their hearts which took their timidity away. And it is still the inspiration for brave deeds and noble acts free from the fear of man.

things occurred that the scripture may be fulfilled,

"A bone of Him shall not be crushed."

<sup>37</sup> And again, a different scripture is saying,

"They shall see Him Whom they stab."

<sup>38</sup> Now after these things Joseph from Arimathea (who was a disciple of Jesus, yet hidden because of fear of the Jews) asks Pilate that he should be taking away the body of Jesus. And Pilate permits him. He came, then, and takes His body away.

<sup>39</sup> Now Nicodemus also came (who first came to Him at night) bringing a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pounds [75 lbs.].

<sup>40</sup> They got the body of Jesus, then, and they bind it in swathings with the spices, according as the custom of the Jews is to bury.

<sup>41</sup> Now in the place where He was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new tomb in which <sup>42</sup> no one was placed as yet. There, then, because of the Jews' preparation, seeing that the tomb was near, they place Jesus.

<sup>20</sup> Now on one of the sabbaths, Miriam Magdalene is coming to the tomb in the morning, it being still dark, and is observing the stone taken away from the door of the <sup>2</sup> tomb. She is racing, then, and coming to Simon Peter and to the other disciple of whom Jesus was fond, and she is saying to them, "They take away the Lord out of the tomb and we are not aware where they place Him!"

<sup>3</sup> Peter, then, and the other disciple, came out and they came to the <sup>4</sup> tomb. Now the two raced alike, and the other disciple runs more swiftly before Peter and came to

<sup>6</sup> There is a blessed contrast between the resurrection of Lazarus and the vivification of our Lord. Lazarus saw corruption. Christ saw none. Lazarus was raised bound foot and hand with grave clothes and his face was covered with a handkerchief. These are the signs of mortality and corruption. These are the symbols of weakness. Our Lord was raised in power. His feet were free, His hands untrammelled, His face uncovered. He had the power to take up His soul again. He had the strength to remove the grave clothes and roll aside the stone. He is not merely the Resurrection, but He is the Life!

<sup>8</sup> How tragic is unbelief! Peter and John, His closest companions, refuse to credit His word when He tells them of His sufferings and death and resurrection. Now they had witnessed His shameful death, they had seen His empty tomb, and still they doubt His word!

<sup>11</sup> Mary Magdalene, probably from the town of Magdala, had been possessed with seven demons. The Lord healed her and she became part of that elect company of women who dispensed to Him of their possessions (Lu. 8:2-3). She seems to have been among the last to leave the tomb, after witnessing where Joseph of Arimathea had laid Him. Along with some of the other women she seems to have been at the tomb very early, in order to complete the preparation of His body for burial.

Peter and John seem to have left her. She does not take a look and leave. She lingers, and her faith is rewarded by the unspeakable boon of being first to behold the risen Christ. Peter and John, when they looked, saw the grave clothes. She saw the messengers, but is not satisfied with any one but her Lord.

<sup>18</sup> What a world of pathos lies within the range of the human voice! There was no need to tell Who He was, once He had caressed her name as He only could intone it. "Miriam!" And immediately she recognizes the voice of her beloved Lord and Teacher. She alone is told of His victorious ascension to the Father, immediately after His resurrection. She carries the glorious news to the rest.

<sup>5</sup> the tomb first. And, stooping over, he is observing the swathings lying. Howbeit, he did not enter.

<sup>6</sup> Simon Peter, then, is also coming following him, and he entered the tomb and he is beholding the swathings lying, and the handkerchief which was on His head, not lying with the swathings, but folded up in one place apart. The other disciple also, then, who came first to the tomb, entered then, and he perceived and believes, for they not as yet were aware of the scripture that He must rise from among the dead. The disciples, then, came away again by themselves.

<sup>11</sup> Now Mary stood outside the tomb, lamenting. As, then, she lamented, she stoops over into the tomb and is beholding two messengers in white seated, one at the head and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus lay. And they are saying to her, "Woman, why are you lamenting?" And she is saying to them that "They take away my Lord, and I am not aware where they place Him!"

<sup>14</sup> Saying these things, she turned behind, and is beholding Jesus standing, and she was not aware that it is Jesus. Jesus is saying to her, "Woman, why are you lamenting? Whom are you seeking?" She, supposing that He is the gardener, is saying to Him, "Lord, if you bear Him off, tell me where you place Him, and I will take Him away." Jesus is saying to her, "Miriam!" Now she, being turned, is saying to Him in Hebrew, "Rabboni!" which is the term for "Teacher". Jesus is saying to her, "Touch Me not, for I

<sup>17</sup> In the scriptures, omissions are often of supreme significance. To accord with the character of the account, this ascension of our Lord is mentioned only here. The other narratives omit it entirely. But it is still more significant to note the silence as to the nature and object of this ascension. The reason is clear. John is not detailing the celestial glories of Christ. That belongs to Paul's later ministry.

The conquest of the cross of Christ is not confined to earth. It places Him at the head of the whole universe. Messengers and sovereignties and authorities and powers among the celestials are all made subject to the Crucified One. After His resurrection He was proclaimed throughout the universe as Lord of all. When was this proclamation made? When was His public investiture with the tokens of His universal sovereignty? Surely that could not wait for forty days, until after His public ascension. Doubtless it was done soon after He delegated Mary to carry the news to His disciples. Then He ascended, and the crucified King of the Jews is acclaimed the Conqueror over all the powers of evil and the universal Suzerain. How little did His disciples dream of His exalted honors!

<sup>22</sup> Here is where the disciples received the holy spirit. Pentecost was an endowment with power. Spirit is the vital force in the universe. Adam became a living soul as soon as the breath of God entered his body. So here the breath of Christ imparted the vital spirit which He had promised them after His glorification. Our breath is poisonous, death-dealing. His is vital, life-giving.

<sup>23</sup> In the proclamation of the kingdom the disciples certainly were given the right to forgive sins, or the opposite. Though the claims of priestcraft to this power at present are false, this should not blind us to the fact that such authority was given to His disciples by our Lord, and was exercised so long as the kingdom was proclaimed to Israel. This promise should make us hesitate in appropriating all in this account to ourselves, or to claim all its promises as our own.

have not as yet ascended to the Father. Now go to My brethren, and say to them, "Lo! I am ascending to My Father and your Father, and My God and your God."

<sup>18</sup> Miriam Magdalene is coming, reporting to the disciples that "I have seen the Lord!"—and these things He said to her.

<sup>19</sup> Then, being evening of that day, one of the sabbaths, and the doors where the disciples were gathered together having been locked because of fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and is saying to them, "Peace to you!" And saying this, He shows them the hands, and the side. The disciples, then, rejoiced at perceiving the Lord.

<sup>21</sup> Jesus, then, said to them again, "Peace to you! According as the Father has commissioned Me, I also
<sup>23</sup> them, "Get holy spirit! If you should be forgiving any one's sins, they have been forgiven them; if any one's you should be holding, they are held."

<sup>25</sup> them when Jesus came. The other disciples, then, said to him, "We have seen the Lord!" Yet he said to them, "Except I should perceive in His hands the print of the nails, and should put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into His side, I will by no means be believing."

<sup>26</sup> And after eight days His disciples were again within, and Thomas was with them. The doors having been locked, Jesus is coming

<sup>27</sup> While we hardly care to sympathize with doubting Thomas, yet we feel grateful for the unanswerable evidence his case called forth. The reality of our Lord's resurrection is put beyond all question by his lack of faith. The very body that was marred by the nails and the spear, which saw no corruption, was actually made alive and could be felt and handled, to the satisfaction of one who refused to believe on less evidence.

<sup>31</sup> It is evident that the signs in this account are a selection, chosen to give a complete picture of Israel's failure and Israel's Saviour. They are intended to signify to all who have ears to hear that the One Who speaks and acts is no other than the Messiah foretold by the prophets of old, and the further fact that He is also the Son of God. Eonian life is for all who receive this testimony. As we have seen, His present exaltation, while Israel is apostate, is carefully overlooked. Hence we must not expect to find present truth in John's account. He never had a commission for the nations, not even for proselytes, as Peter had. Because his ministry seems especially intended for millennial days, when the nations will be blessed through Israel, his allusions to world-wide blessing are often mistaken for that which has come to us while Israel is apostate.

<sup>3</sup> Peter had a commission to fish for men. But he returns to his old trade and takes his companions with him. They toil all night and net nothing. Undoubtedly there is a solemn lesson in obedience here. The path of self-will brings much labor but no results. The path of obedience is fraught with blessing. But there seems a deeper lesson here than this. Peter's failure is a dispensational forecast. Peter and the apostles labor much to proclaim the kingdom during the darkness which has fallen on Israel. But their efforts are unavailing. Israel is not recalled to repentance. But in the morning, when the Lord comes again, the kingdom will once more be proclaimed. Then the results will be miraculous. All Israel will be saved. The miracle will be repeated then, and the net will include the 144,000 as well as a throng innumerable.

and stood in the midst and said,
<sup>27</sup> "Peace to you!" Thereafter He is saying to Thomas, "Bring your finger here, and perceive My hands, and bring your hand and put it into My side, and do not become unbelieving but believing." And <sup>28</sup> Thomas answered and said to Him,
<sup>29</sup> "My Lord and my God!" Now Jesus is saying to him, "Seeing that you have seen Me, you have believed. Happy are those who are not perceiving and believe."

<sup>30</sup> Many and other signs, indeed, then, Jesus does before His disciples which are not written in this scroll. Yet these are written that you should be believing that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that, believing, you may have eonian life in His name.

<sup>2</sup> Simon Peter and Thomas who is termed Didymus, and Nathanael from Cana of Galilee, and those of Zebedee, and two others of His disciples.

<sup>3</sup> Simon Peter is saying to them, "I am going fishing!" They are saying to him, "We also are coming with you!" Then they came out and stepped into the ship straightway, and in that night they net nothing.

<sup>4</sup> Now as it already becomes morning, Jesus stood on the beach. Howbeit, the disciples had not perceived that it is Jesus. Jesus, then, <sup>5</sup> is saying to them, "Little children, have you any viands?" They <sup>6</sup> answered Him, "No!" Now He said to them, "Cast the net on the right parts of the ship and you will

<sup>6</sup> There are several methods of fishing from the shore in the day time. A baited hook was cast by Peter when he got the redemption money for himself and the Lord (Mt.17<sup>27</sup>). Simon and Andrew were using a purse net when they were called to become fishers of men (Mk.1<sup>16</sup>). A seine or drag net was also used (Mt.13<sup>47</sup>). The net here used was a large one let down from a ship. On one occasion, though the net broke, the haul filled two boats overfull (Lu.5<sup>4-6</sup>). Boat fishing was done at night. Seines were set and the fishermen, with flares and the beating of old metal pans, drove the fish toward the net. This cannot be done in the day time. After scouring the waters all night it must have seemed silly to lower the large net. It took faith to do that. And it was nothing less than a miracle that the net was not rent.

<sup>11</sup> The night of futile fishing seems to correspond to the time typified in Israel's yearly calendar by the period between the festival of Unleavened Bread and the festival of Trumpets, which was about one hundred and fifty-three days. It may be that the number of fish caught is an allusion to this. The past labors of the twelve apostles seem to have netted nothing, yet when He appears in the future, there will be a rich harvest. At present their ministry is not in force.

<sup>12</sup> A whole night of toil did not provide a breakfast for the faithless fishermen. Yet He makes manifest His care and provision by supplying their need. The meal is all ready and cooked. They do not do anything to provide it. This is the gracious rebuke of the Lord to Peter's fishing expedition. We never hear that he went back to fishing again.

<sup>15</sup> The rich pathos of this passage will be apparent only if we carefully keep the finer shades of meaning conveyed by the original, as "fond" and "love", "graze" and "shepherd", "lambkins" and "sheep". This is the special commission given to Peter which he fulfills in the writing of his epistles. His humiliating experiences, in disowning the Lord and doubting His care and provision (of which the other apostles were not guilty) has chastened his spirit, so that he no longer boasts of his loyalty, though all the rest prove find." Then they cast, and they no longer had the strength to draw it, for the multitude of fishes.

<sup>7</sup> Then that disciple whom Jesus loved is saying to Peter, "It is the Lord!" Simon Peter, then, hearing that it is the Lord, girds on his overcoat (for he was naked) and cast himself into the sea. Yet the other disciples came in the other boat (for they were not far from the land, but about two hundred cubits), dragging the net of fishes.

<sup>9</sup> As, then, they stepped off to the land, they are observing a charcoal fire laid and food fish lying on it, and bread. Jesus is saying to them, "Bring of the food fish which you now net."

<sup>11</sup> Simon Peter, then, ascended and draws the net to the land distended with a hundred and fifty-three large fishes. And, being so much, the net is not rent.

<sup>12</sup> Jesus is saying to them, "Come hither! Lunch!" Now no one of the disciples dared to inquire of Him, "Who art Thou?" being aware that it is the Lord. Jesus, then, is coming and taking the bread and is giving it to them, and the food fish likewise.

<sup>14</sup> Now this was already the third time Jesus was manifested to the disciples, being roused from among the dead.

<sup>15</sup> When, then, they lunch, Jesus is saying to Simon Peter, "Simon of John, are you loving Me more than these?" He is saying to Him, "Yes, Lord. Thou art aware that I am fond of Thee." He is saying to him, "Be grazing My lambkins." Again, a second time He is saying to him, "Simon of John, are you loving Me?" He is saying to Him, "Yes, Lord, Thou art aware that I am fond of Thee." He to be cowards. He knows that he loves his Lord, despite his craven heart, but he refuses to boast that he loves Him more than his fellows. He hides behind a weaker word, denoting the attractive force of friendship. But he does not put himself behind the assertion, but rather appeals to the Lord's omniscience. His humility is rewarded by the charge to provide sustenance for those weak in the faith.

The Lord repeats His question, but without any reference to Peter's boast or failure. Peter again refuses to vouch for himself, and is given charge of the Lord's flock.

The Lord now descends to Peter's profession of fondness, but questions even that. This touches Peter very sorely, but he refuses to vaunt. He feels full of love to the Lord but he is aware how dismally he had failed but a few days before. So he once more refers the Lord to his own omniscience. He has learned his lesson well. So the Lord commissions him to provide food for the mature saints.

<sup>18</sup> Peter had boasted that he would lay down his soul for Him (13<sup>37</sup>). It was this that led the Lord to predict that he would disown Him. Now He assures Peter that he will some day fulfill his boast. There is a tradition that Peter was crucified. See 2 Pe. 1<sup>14</sup>.

<sup>20</sup> Now we are given a hint of John's commission. In a veiled way we are given to understand that John was to remain alive until the Lord's return. This is fulfilled in his vision of the Unveiling. There, in spirit, he sees all the events leading up to the kingdom and the kingdom itself. Truly, in spirit, he remained until the Lord comes.

The thought that John's special ministry, as distinct from Peter's, finds its fullest expression in the future when the kingdom is set up, is further enforced by the fact that it was not written until after the close of the Pentecostal era. Had it been intended to be used in that day, or in connection with Paul's evangel to the nations, it certainly would have been written much earlier. Only in the light of Israel's glorious future, as a blessing to all nations, can we fully appreciate the special message it contains.

is saying to him, "Be shepherding
<sup>17</sup> My sheep." He is saying to him the third time, "Simon of John, are you fond of Me?" Peter was sorry that He said to him a third time "Are you fond of Me?" and he is saying to Him, "Lord, Thou art aware of all things. Thou knowest that I am fond of Thee." And Jesus is saying to him, "Be grazing
<sup>18</sup> My little sheep. Verily, verily, I am saying to you, when you were young, you girded yourself and walked whither you would, yet whenever you may be decrepit you will stretch out your hands, and another shall be girding you and carrying you whither you would not."
<sup>19</sup> Now this He said signifying by what death he will be glorifying God. And, saying this, He is saying to him, "Be following Me!"

<sup>20</sup> Now Peter, turning about, is observing the disciple whom Jesus loved, following, who leans back also on His chest at the dinner, and said to Him, "Lord, who is it
<sup>21</sup> who is betraying Thee?" Peter, then, perceiving this one, is saying to Jesus, "Lord, yet what of this one?" Jesus is saying to him, "If I should be wanting him to be remaining till I am coming, what is it to you? You be following
<sup>22</sup> Me!" This word, then, came out to the brethren, that that disciple is not dying. Now Jesus did not say to him that he is not dying, but "If I should be wanting him to be remaining till I am coming, what is it to you?"

<sup>24</sup> This is the disciple who is testifying also concerning these things, and who writes these things. And we are aware that his testimony is <sup>25</sup> true. Now there are many other things also, which Jesus does, which, if they should be written,

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES

THE ACTS is a continuation of the proclamation of the kingdom of God, no longer by the King Himself, but by the spirit of God through His apostles. He prayed, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do!" In answer to this petition the unbelieving nation once more hears the evangel of the kingdom, enforced by His resurrection from the dead. Israel had rejected Jehovah under the law. They rejected their Messiah when He came in mercy. Acts is a record of their rejection of the spirit of grace which lingers over them until blindness overtakes them for the eon. It begins with the descent of the spirit. It traces the rejection of the spirit. It ends with the spirit's repudiation of Israel. In the beginning, Peter unlocks the door of the kingdom for the Jews; at the close, Paul, in Rome, shuts the door of the kingdom and locks up Israel in obstinacy.

This treatise is transitional. From the first extreme where the nations seem to have no place at all, it leads us on until we arrive at the opposite, where the Jew loses his priority.

It is a record of Israel's response to the renewed proclamation of pardon, and chronicles their apostasy and their gradual rejection. But it also records God's answer to their defection, so that He, instead of being balked in His purpose to bless the other nations, makes their apostasy the basis of a much greater and grander grace than the nations could have experienced if Israel had not apostatized. There is no definite statement of this, for the subject of the book forbids it, yet all the symtoms of the present grace will be found, and each symptom follows a crisis in the apostasy of the chosen nation. In reading Acts let us remember that God is concerned with the kingdom to Israel, yet all the while He is making room for that distinct display of grace which we enjoy and which is fully expounded in Paul's epistles, most of which were written during this interregnum.

This account is a series of acts and counter acts. Jerusalem's stoning of Stephen is followed by the introduction of Saul of Tarsus. The persecution in Judea and Samaria is followed by his call on the Damascus road. The murder of James is succeeded by the severance of Saul. When the Jerusalem believers try to kill Paul, he is sent to Rome, where the nation of Israel is set aside and the salvation of God is sent to the other nations.

Peter appears prominently in the first part of Acts, but Paul replaces him in the latter portion. All that Peter did was more than matched by Paul. Every miracle the chief of the Circumcision apostles wrought was eclipsed by a similar sign, greater in glory and grace.

No truth characteristic of the present actually appears on the pages of Acts. Yet the distinctive doctrines we enjoy did not fall from heaven like a meteor; they gradually rose to view like the sun. In Acts we see their early refracted light before they appear above the horizon. Justification of a kind is preached at Pisidian Antioch, conciliation becomes clear as the evangel reaches the nations through Jewish opposition, and the way is opened for the celestial secret of Paul's prison epistles by the public repudiation of Israel in Rome. The ministries of Paul, as recorded in Acts, bring us up to, but never into, present truth. That is found alone in his epistles.

This transitional era, from our Lord's crucifixion to the full establishment of the present secret economy, was marked by a series of changes in dispensation and administration. It is of prime importance that we understand the trend and character of these dispensational divisions, so that we may intelligently follow the inauguration of the economy or administration which is in force today.

These changes may be viewed from two entirely different standpoints. In the book of Acts they mark the steps which led to the rejection of the kingdom by Israel and of Israel by God. In Paul's epistles the same crises are seen as they prepare for the introduction of the present administration. The trend of truth is continually away from the earthly and physical to the celestial and spiritual.

The accompanying outline suggests the steps in Israel's defection and the gradual reception of the nations into blessing. One line is associated with the ministries of the twelve, the other with the apostle Paul. The two lines overlap. Paul is introduced immediately after the murder of Stephen by Jerusalem and each successive lapse of Israel is followed by adding another step in the course which culminated in the revelation of the present secret economy when he became a prisoner in Rome.

Paul's ministries keep pace with each phase of Israel's apostasy. Their unrighteousness is offset by faith righteousness as proclaimed at Pisidian Antioch. When their folly and poverty are manifest, he proclaims God's wisdom and wealth in Corinth, the commercial capital of the day. When their priestly functions fail, he goes to Ephesus, the religious center of the gentile world, and reveals the conciliation. Finally, when the promise of political supremacy is taken from them, Paul is in Rome, the world's political capital, and there he proclaims a new economy based on their political repudiation.

According to the prophets of old, all blessing for the nations is through and with the nation of Israel. So it will be in the kingdom. The distinctive truths of the present secret economy are based on the opposite of this. They follow Israel's failure and apostasy. So far as revealed in the Hebrew scriptures, in the accounts of our Lord, and in the Circumcision epistles, there is no basis for blessing at all now, for Israel is the only channel that they know. The book of Acts fills the chasm between the kingdom economy and the present and traces the many steps which lead up to the blessing of the nations during this period, while Israel is thrust aside. It prepares the devout student of previous revelation for the astounding declaration with which it closes, that the salvation of God is to be sent directly to the nations, apart from Israel's mediacy, and that the nations will hear it.

Throughout the Acts the nations are treated as subjects of the kingdom and subordinate to the Jewish nation. This is the case even in Paul's early epistles. The nations were debtors to Israel (Ro.15<sup>27</sup>). But Israel's blessing waits until the fullness of the nations has come in (Ro. 11), and when the apostle reveals the great secret that those under Paul's ministry are to be joint enjoyers of a heavenly allotment, and a joint body and joint partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus (Eph.3<sup>6</sup>), the entire kingdom economy vanishes and a new, secret economy takes its place. The great confusion among the saints today will vanish to a large extent if they will recognize the transitional, kingdom character of Acts, and draw their doctrine from Paul's epistles, especially those written at its close, before which the present secret administration was not revealed, and its doctrines were undeveloped, while God lingered over His ancient and beloved people Israel.

<sup>3</sup> The interval between His resurrection and ascension was used by our Lord to present indisputable proofs of His resurrection and to instruct His disciples concerning the kingdom of God. This was the preparation He deemed necessary for the ministry recorded in this book. These two subjects dominate it to the very end.

<sup>6</sup> He had been telling them about the kingdom of Israel, but did not tell them when it would be restored to them. He does not correct their ideas as to the character of the kingdom, but keeps them in suspense as to the time. That would depend on the reception accorded their testimony, hence could not be foretold without unfavorably affecting its proclamation. Indeed, we are kept in suspense throughout the book, till the very close, when the kingdom is rejected by the Jews in Rome, and even then we are referred to Isaiah's question, "Till when?" God alone knows when, though in these days there are many signs that the longed-for time is near.

<sup>8</sup> The ministry of the twelve apostles was confined to three spheres—Jerusalem, Samaria, and the rest of the land. Beyond this they had no commission. Paul was called outside the land and commissioned for the regions beyond. The first seven chapters deal with their ministry in Jerusalem, the eighth and ninth with Samaria, and the tenth, eleventh and twelfth with the proselytes and Jews in the land. The balance of the book leads us outside the sphere of the ministry of the Twelve.

THE first account, indeed, I make, O Theophilus, concerning all which Jesus begins to do as well as <sup>2</sup> to teach, until the day on which He was taken up; directing the apostles whom He chooses, through <sup>3</sup> holy spirit; to whom He presents Himself alive also, after His suffering, with many tokens, during forty days, being visualized to them and telling them that which concerns the kingdom of God. And,
<sup>4</sup> being foregathered, He charges them not to be departing from Jerusalem, but to be remaining about for the promise of the Father,
<sup>5</sup> "which you hear of Me, seeing that John, indeed, baptizes in water, yet you shall be baptized in holy spirit after not many of these days."

<sup>6</sup> Those, indeed, then, who are coming together, asked Him, saying, "Lord, art Thou at this time restoring the kingdom to Israel?"
<sup>7</sup> Yet He said to them, "It is not for you to know the times or the eras which the Father placed in His <sup>8</sup> own jurisdiction. But you shall be obtaining power at the coming of the holy spirit on you, and you shall be My witnesses in Jerusalem, as well as in entire Judea and Samaria, and to the limits of the land."

<sup>9</sup> And, saying these things, while they are looking, He was lifted up, and a cloud took Him up from
<sup>10</sup> their eyes. And, as they were looking intently into heaven at His going, lo! two men stand beside them

<sup>9</sup> The resurrection and ascension of Christ are the two dominating factors in the kingdom testimony in this book. The kingdom had been proclaimed by the King in meekness and humiliation. Now it was about to be proclaimed in power by His apostles while He is glorified in heaven. They rejected Him when He spoke on earth. Will they refuse when He speaks from heaven? They scorned Him before His death. Will they hear One Who had risen from the dead?

And Jehovah shall go forth and fight against those nations,
As the day He fought in the day of the attack.

And His feet stand in that day upon the mount of Olives
Which faces Jerusalem from the east.

He will come with the clouds of heaven (Dan.7<sup>13</sup>, Un.17) with power and great glory (Mt.24<sup>30</sup>) as the Son of Mankind to a handful of faithful Israelites, just as He left. But for the church, the body of Christ, He comes, not to Olivet, but to the air, not to judge and make war, but to save us and take to Himself in glory all the members of His body, long before He returns to the mount of Olives.

<sup>12</sup> The apostles seem to have had permanent quarters in Jerusalem. The list is probably arranged according to rank, for Peter and John, the "pillars", come first, followed by James. Simon the Zealot, so named from a class in the nation which arose at the time of the Maccabees, who were excessively zealous for the Mosaic law, is called a Cananite, the Hebrew equivalent of zealot, in Matthew (10<sup>4</sup>) and Mark (3<sup>18</sup>). Judas James was surnamed Thaddeus (Mt.10<sup>3</sup>) and Lebbeus.

<sup>16</sup> The buying of a freehold was typical of Judas' loss of his allotment and going to his "own" place. Almost all land in Israel was held in common and allotted each year. But there were a few parcels of ground, such as the garden of Gethsemane, the titles of which were held by individuals. Judas bought one of these. This shows that he had no faith in the coming kingdom, when lands would be re-distributed. Contrast the course of the believing disciples (4<sup>34</sup>).

Jesus Who is being taken up from you into heaven shall come in the same manner as you gaze upon Him going into heaven."

<sup>12</sup> Then they return into Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is near Jerusalem a sabbath's journey. And when they entered it, they ascended into the upper chamber where they were residing —Peter as well as John, and James, and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James of Alpheus and Simon the Zealot, and Judas of James. These all were persevering with one accord in prayer, together with the women and Miriam, the mother of Jesus, and His brothers.

<sup>15</sup> And in these days Peter, rising in the midst of the brethren, said (there was besides a throng in the same place of about a hundred and twenty names): "Men! Brethren! The scripture must be fulfilled in which the holy spirit predicted through the mouth of David, concerning Judas, who becomes the guide of those apprehending Jesus, seeing that he was numbered among us, and chanced upon the allotment of this dispensation."

<sup>18</sup> (This man, indeed, then, acquires a freehold with the wages of injustice, and falling prone, ruptures in the middle, and all his intestines were poured out. And it became known to all who are dwelling in Jerusalem, so that the freehold is called, in their own vernacular, "Acheldamach," that is, "Freehold of blood.") "For it is written in the scroll of the Psalms,

<sup>21</sup> These qualifications shut out the apostle Paul. He could never be one of the twelve, for he had not known the Lord at all during His earthly ministry. That the kingdom to Israel is in view is apparent from the very necessity of twelve apostles. Why would not the eleven be enough? Paul was associated with an indefinite number of apostles, but there must always be exactly twelve kingdom apostles, one for each of the tribes of Israel (Mt. 19<sup>28</sup>).

The lot is cast forth in a bosom,
And from Jehovah is all its judgment.

Matthias was duly and lawfully chosen and will have his place in the kingdom ruling over a tribe of Israel. That his name is not again mentioned does not disprove this, for several of the lesser apostles are never heard of afterward.

<sup>1</sup> Pentecost is simply the Greek word "Fiftieth", because it was fifty days after the Passover. There were three feasts in Israel each year (Ex.23<sup>14</sup>). The first was the feast of unleavened bread, after the Passover; the second, the feast of harvest, or firstfruits (which is here called Pentecost because it was held seven weeks after the Passover), and the feast of ingathering. As the latter is a type of the time when all Israel shall be saved, so Pentecost is a picture of the salvation of a firstfruit of the nation. This is what occurred, both on the day of Pentecost and during the entire period covered by this book (Jas.1<sup>18</sup>).

'Let his domicile become desolate,
And let no one be dwelling in it', and

'His supervision let a different one take.'

<sup>21</sup> Then of the men coming together with us in all the time in which the Lord Jesus came in and out with <sup>22</sup> us, beginning from the baptism of John until the day on which He was taken up from us, of these one must become a witness of His resurrection together with us."

<sup>23</sup> And they nominate two, Joseph, called Bar-Sabbas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. And praying, they say, "Thou, Lord, Knower of all hearts, indicate one whom Thou choosest, out of these
<sup>25</sup> two, to take the place of this dispensation and apostleship, from which Judas transgressed, to be gone into <sup>26</sup> his own place." And they give lots to them, and the lot falls on Matthias, and he is enumerated with the eleven apostles.

<sup>2</sup> And in the fulfillment of the day of Pentecost they were all alike in <sup>2</sup> the same place. And suddenly there came out of heaven a blare even as a violent carrying blast, and it fills the whole house where they
<sup>3</sup> were sitting. And dividing tongues were seen by them as if of fire, and they are seated on each one of <sup>4</sup> them. And they are all filled with holy spirit, and they begin to speak in different languages, according as the spirit gave them to declaim.

<sup>5</sup> To this day it has been the hope of the pious among the dispersion to return to Jerusalem. Many aged Jews have spent their last days there. So, on the day of Pentecost, there were many in the city who had been born abroad, but who had returned to dwell near the temple. They were typical of that return to the land of their fathers which will precede the setting up of the kingdom. Then salvation and deliverance will be in mount Zion and in Jerusalem (Joel 2<sup>32</sup>). To be in that remnant is the highest privilege open to the pious repatriate of the dispersion.

<sup>12</sup> The object of this manifestation, as found in Joel, was to make them know that God was in the midst of Israel. (Joel 2<sup>27</sup>). Afterward the signs which usher in the day of the Lord were due. In other words, Pentecost was the prelude to the era of judgment which precedes the setting up of the kingdom. This shows that it was not intended to be the commencement of the present economy of grace which was later introduced through Paul's ministries. In that future judgment period the signs foretold by Peter will take place. The salvation offered at Pentecost was principally concerned with these judgment scenes through which they hoped to be saved for a place in the kingdom when Christ would return to the Mount of Olives.

<sup>14</sup> Peter declaims. He does not address them in common words, but uses choice and rare expressions in making this oration. Perhaps this was done partly to meet and refute the charge of drunkenness. His immediate appeal is to their own scriptures, which he brought home to them with power.

<sup>7</sup> Now they are all amazed, and marveled, saying, "Lo! are not all these who are speaking, Gali-

<sup>8</sup> leans? And how are we hearing, each in our own vernacular in

<sup>9</sup> which we were born? Parthians and Medes and Elamites and those dwelling in Mesopotamia, Judea as well as Cappadocia, Pontus and the

<sup>10</sup> [province of] Asia, Phrygia as well as Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and Roman

<sup>11</sup> repatriates, Jews as well as proselytes, Cretans and Arabs—we are hearing them speaking in these languages of ours of the great things of God!"

<sup>12</sup> Now they are all amazed and bewildered, saying to one another, "What does this want to be?"

<sup>14</sup> wine!" Now Peter, standing with the eleven, lifts up his voice and declaims to them: "Men! Judeans! and all who are dwelling at Jerusalem! Be this known to you, and fulfillment of ancient prophecy. God was in their midst as foretold in Joel (2<sup>27</sup>). This, however, was introductory to the terrible celestial convulsions and earthly upheavals which prepare for the dreadful day of the Lord. It promised a time of trial and affliction unparalleled by any that earth has suffered hitherto. It introduced God in the character of an Avenger of His people, Who is about to gather the nations to battle and Who will destroy them in His fury. Had the nation of Israel repented, and the Pentecostal economy continued without interruption, there would never have been a parenthetic period like the present of which none of the prophets ever spoke, which was a secret hid in God (Eph. 3<sup>9</sup>) and which presents God as a Supplicant, petitioning for conciliation, and preserving peace at all costs (2Co. 5<sup>20</sup>), Who showers His richest blessings on the nations and gives them a celestial allotment immeasurably beyond the highest thought of Pentecost.

<sup>15</sup> give ear to my declarations, for these are not drunk, as you take it, for it is the third hour of the day.

18 Peter, not Joel, speaks of prophesying. It is an inspired break between that part of Joel's prophecy which was fulfilled at Pentecost and that which is yet future.

22 In the evangel of the kingdom the appeal is to the life of our Lord during His earthly ministry. Paul never knew Him in this character. He did not meet Him until after His ascension, and the present economy, based on Paul's experience and revelations, does not recognize Christ after the flesh. Peter's appeal, in proclaiming the kingdom, is no model for us now. Our relationship to Christ begins with His death, burial, resurrection and ascension.

23 The Jews knew that Christ should suffer. Their sacred scrolls were explicit. This was the counsel which determined His death beforehand.

24 The resurrection is the central and essential theme of every evangel. As Peter is proclaiming the kingdom, he proves His resurrection by referring his hearers to king David and his throne. David is the one with whom the throne covenant had been made (2Sam. 23<sup>5</sup>). It is as David's Heir that Christ will sit on the throne, ruling the nation of Israel, during the thousand years.

'I shall be pouring out from My spirit on all flesh,
And your sons and your daughters shall be prophesying,
And your youths shall be seeing visions,
And your elders shall be dreaming dreams,
18 And surely on My men slaves and on My women slaves in those days Shall I be pouring out from My spirit.'

And they shall be prophesying.

19 'And I will be giving miracles in heaven above,
And signs on the earth below,
Blood and fire and exhalation of smoke,
20 The sun shall be converted into darkness,
And the moon into blood
Ere the coming of the great advent day of the Lord.
21 And it shall be that everyone, whoever should be invoking the name of the Lord, shall be saved.'

22 Men! Israelites! Hear these words: Jesus, the Nazarene, a Man demonstrated to be from God for you by powers and miracles and signs, which God does through Him in the midst of you, according as 23 you yourselves are aware, This One, given up by the specific counsel and foreknowledge of God, you, gibbetting with lawless hands, assassinate, 24 Whom God raises, loosing the pangs of death, forasmuch as He could not be held by it.

25 For David is saying to Him,

'I saw the Lord before me continually,
Seeing that He is at my right hand, that I may not be shaken.
26 Therefore my heart was gladdened and my tongue exults.
Now, further, my flesh also shall be tenting in expectation,

<sup>30</sup> God's covenants are of two kinds, conditional and unconditional. All those conditioned on human effort, such as the covenant at Sinai, end in failure. All dependent entirely on God, as the covenant with Abraham concerning the land, and with David, concerning the throne, are sure of fulfillment. Moreover, God interposes with an oath, so that there is nothing more sure than that One shall sit on David's throne ruling the sons of Israel.

<sup>34</sup> The whole passage shows that Peter is proclaiming a literal king and a literal kingdom for Israel. The descent of the spirit had nothing to do with the formation of the body of Christ, but was a well known sign which indicated the approach of the judgment era which precedes Messiah's advent. In accordance with the burden of his message Peter chooses to bring before them king David and the covenant God made with him, because, if they accept his words, it is this covenant which would be fulfilled. They had crucified Him as the King of Israel. His resurrection proves Him to be the One Whom David foretold. All that remains to be done, should Israel, as a nation, repent, would be the judging of His enemies. This will occur in the judgment era. Here is no hint of, or preparation for, the present interval of undiluted grace, in which God is raising up His enemies, like Saul of Tarsus, to sit with Christ on His celestial throne.

Thou wilt be filling me with gladness with Thy face.'

<sup>29</sup> Men! Brethren! Allow me to say to you with boldness concerning the patriarch David, that he is deceased also, and was entombed, and his tomb is among us until this day.

<sup>30</sup> Belonging, then, to the prophets, and having perceived that God swears to him with an oath, out of the fruit of his loins to seat One on his throne, foreseeing this, he speaks concerning the resurrection of Christ, that He was neither abandoned in the unseen, nor was His flesh acquainted with decay.

<sup>32</sup> This Jesus God raises, Whose witnesses we all are. Being, then, exalted to God's right hand, besides obtaining the promise of the holy spirit from the Father, He pours out this which you are observing and hearing.

<sup>34</sup> For David did not ascend into the heavens, yet he is saying,

'The Lord said to my Lord,
"Be sitting at My right hand

<sup>35</sup> Till I should be placing your enemies
As a footstool for your feet."'

<sup>36</sup> Let all the house of Israel know certainly, then, that God makes Him Lord as well as Christ—this Jesus Whom you crucify!"

<sup>37</sup> Now as they hear, their heart was pricked with compunction. Besides, they said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Men, brethren, what should we be doing?"
<sup>38</sup> Now Peter is averring to them, "Repent and be baptized each of you in the name

<sup>38</sup> Repentance and baptism lead to a probationary pardon, which may be withdrawn. This pardon is extended by Christ as the King. Its operation is illustrated by the parable of the ten thousand talent debtor (see Mt.18<sup>27-34</sup>) whose debt was remitted, but who refused to remit the smaller sum which his fellow slave owed to him. Hence the remission of his debt was canceled. So it is with Israel in this chronicle. Many of those who, in the beginning, received the pardon of their sins, refused to share their pardon with the other nations, objecting to proselytes like Cornelius, raising a riot on the supposition that an alien has entered the sanctuary, seeking to kill Paul even though he brought alms to Jerusalem. They finally fall away (Heb.6<sup>8,10</sup><sup>27</sup>) where there is no longer any room for repentance, but a fearful prospect of judgment. This pardon, however, is in sharp contrast to our justification, or acquittal, which comes from the Judge on the sole grounds of grace and faith, and from which there can be no fall, as it places us beyond the sphere of judgment. Conciliation (Ro.5<sup>11</sup>) is immeasurably beyond any pardon, as it places us in the unclouded favor of God's grace.

<sup>39</sup> The promise was to Israel, both in the land and in the dispersion (Dan. 9<sup>7</sup>). Those "afar" were Jews in the lands where God had driven them, and not Gentiles or the church.

<sup>42</sup> The "breaking of bread" is an idiomatic Hebrew expression like our "taking tea" or the Arab's "eating salt", and denoted an ordinary meal. The bread, or flat cakes, which they used, were broken into convenient bits by each person and used as a spoon to convey the liquid portions of the meal to the mouth.

<sup>45</sup> Each Israelite had an allotment according to the law, which could not be permanently disposed of, but came back to him at the jubilee. Those who had bought such allotments would lose them when the kingdom would be set up, for then there will be the great jubilee, when each allotment will be returned to its true tenant. These believers did not sell their own allot-of Jesus Christ for the pardon of your sins, and you shall be obtaining the gratuity of the holy spirit.

<sup>39</sup> For the promise is to you and to your children, and to all those afar, as many as ever the Lord our God <sup>DAN 9:7</sup> should be calling." Besides, with <sup>40</sup> more and different words, he conjures and entreated them, saying, "Be saved from this crooked generation!"

<sup>41</sup> Those indeed, then, who welcome his word are baptized, and in that day about three thousand souls <sup>42</sup> were added. Now they were persevering in the teaching of the apostles, and in fellowship, and in the breaking of bread, and in prayers.

<sup>43</sup> Now fear came on every soul, yet many miracles and signs came to pass through the apostles in Jerusalem. Besides, great fear was on <sup>44</sup> all, and all those who believe were in the same place and had all things <sup>45</sup> in common. And they disposed of the acquisitions and property, and divided them to all, as much as ever <sup>46</sup> any had need. Persevering daily with one accord in the sanctuary, as well as breaking bread at home, they partook of nourishment with exultation and simplicity of heart, <sup>47</sup> praising God and having favor with the whole people. Now the Lord daily added those being saved in the same place.

3 Now Peter and John went up into the sanctuary at the hour of <sup>2</sup> prayer, the ninth. And a certain man, inherently lame from his mother's womb, was borne, whom ments, but those which they had acquired, which they would forfeit in the jubilee. This showed their faith in the coming of the kingdom.

1 It is evident that, at this time, there was no thought among the disciples of severing from the customs and worship of the nation. The sanctuary was their principal place of resort until persecution drove them from it.

2 Can we not see, in the man lame from his birth, a close likeness to the people of Israel? They had a beautiful way of approach to God, but it availed them little, for they were unable to walk through it, into the divine presence. The healing of the lame man was a sign (4<sup>16</sup>). As a miracle it was full of significance. To those who read its message it proclaimed the advent of One Who could heal Israel's impotence and bring them, like the lame man, into God's house and fill them with joy and praise. But above all, it was a sign of that day when the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the narcissus, for then shall the lame man leap as a fallow deer (Isa.35<sup>9</sup>). The powers of the age to come are present in Israel! No wonder the devout and reverent worshipers in the sanctuary are filled with awe and amazement! To them it was no mere prodigy, no unmeaning exhibition of supernatural power, but the key to that kingdom which was the goal of all their hopes and aspirations. It meant the end of the Gentile yoke, the sovereignty of Israel over the nations, the coming of Messiah and a thousand blessings for a thousand years.

5 How like are we to the lame man! We look to God for a bare alms, and He pours upon us the true riches and adds the joy of His presence. It was worth while to be lame for forty years to become the object of God's mercy and a signal instance of His power for the blessing of His people. So we, too, will one day bless the impotence and the trials which afford Him a field for the display of His favor. This is the "beautiful gate" which leads us into the sanctuary where the Divine Presence assures us of joy unending and unalloyed. Let us ask, expecting to receive.

5 God gives more and better than we seek, or hope to obtain.

they placed daily at the door of the sanctuary which is termed "Beautiful", requesting alms from those
3 entering into the sanctuary, who, perceiving Peter and John being about to pass into the sanctuary,
4 asked to obtain alms. Now Peter, looking at him intently together with John, said, "Look at us!"
5 And he attended to them, hoping to 6 get something from them. Yet Peter said, "Silver and gold I do not possess: yet what I have, this I am giving to you. In the name of Jesus
7 Christ, the Nazarene, walk!" And, taking his right hand, he raises him up. Now instantly his insteps
8 and ankles were given stability, and, leaping up, he stood and walked and entered with them into the sanctuary, walking and leaping and praising God.

9 And the entire people perceived
10 him walking and praising God. Now they recognized him, that this was the one sitting for alms at the Beautiful Gate of the sanctuary. And they are filled with awe and amazement at that which has befallen him.

11 Now, while he is holding Peter and John, the entire people ran together to them at the portico which is called Solomon's, overawed.
12 Now Peter, perceiving it, answers the people: "Men! Israelites! Why are you marveling at this! Or why are you staring at us as if our own power or devoutness has 13 made him walk! The God of Abra-

<sup>13</sup> The word "Boy" is here used because it, like its Greek equivalent, may be used both of a child and a servant. The common version renders it servant, child and son. Each of these, however, better represents another Greek word, and all fail to give the dual meaning which this word seems to have. It is usually restricted to a boy or girl between seven and fourteen years of age. It is used of our Lord when He was twelve years old and remained behind when they went home from the festival (Lu.2<sup>43</sup>).

<sup>14</sup> The complete restoration of Peter to divine favor is nowhere more clearly seen than when he charges them, "You disown the holy and just One!" None of them were as guilty as he himself had been, yet he does not allow his personal failure to hinder his faithful proclamation of the evangel. In order to get them to repent, or change their minds regarding the Messiah, it was necessary to press home their awful guilt. Yet the most important point is the witness he bears to the resurrection of Christ. This it is which proves His Messiahship. The healing of the lame man is but one more proof that He is alive and able to do all that the prophets foretold of Him.

<sup>21</sup> The times of restoration include the terrific judgments of the Unveiling, when by means of seals, trumpets and bowls, the earth is restored to the sovereignty of Christ as Son of Mankind. It has no reference to individual destiny, but to redemption of the enslaved and the disinherited by their Kinsman Redeemer (Lev.25).

ham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, glorifies His Boy Jesus, Whom you, indeed, betray and disown before the face of Pilate, when <sup>14</sup> he decides to release Him. Now you disown the holy and just One, and request a man, a murderer, to be <sup>15</sup> surrendered to you. Yet you kill the Inaugurator of Life, Whom God rouses from among the dead, <sup>16</sup> Whose witnesses we are. And in the faith of His name, His name gives stability to him whom you are beholding, with whom, also, you are acquainted, and the faith which is through Him gives him this unimpaired soundness in front of you all.

<sup>17</sup> And now, brethren, I am aware that you commit it in ignorance, <sup>18</sup> even as your chiefs also. Yet what God announces before through the mouth of all the prophets—the suffering of His Christ—He thus fulfills. Repent, then, and turn about <sup>19</sup> for the erasure of your sins, so that the seasons of refreshing should be coming from the face of the Lord, <sup>20</sup> and He may dispatch the One selected before for you, Christ Jesus; <sup>21</sup> Whom heaven must indeed receive until the times of the restoration of all which God speaks through the mouth of His holy prophets from the eon.

<sup>22</sup> Moses, indeed, said that 'The Lord, your God, will be raising up to you a Prophet from among your brethren, as me. Him you shall hear, according to all whatever He <sup>23</sup> should be speaking to you. Yet it shall be, every soul which should <sup>23</sup> Christ is the Prophet like Moses sent to lead Jehovah's people out of Egypt, through the wilderness, into the kingdom. The whole period of the book of Acts is typified by Israel's wilderness journey. Because the people did not hearken to Moses they were strewn along in the wilderness and never entered the holy land. Likewise, because the nation did not hearken to One Who was more than Moses, they did not enter the kingdom.

The threat of extermination is an inspired alteration. In Deut. 18<sup>19</sup> the Hebrew is, literally, "I will inquire," or, as we say "I will require it of him." The LXX renders this "I will take vengeance on him."

<sup>26</sup> The term "Boy" is used here with all reverence, for want of a better. The difficulties encountered in its translation are apparent from the variety of renderings in the common version, all of which are better fitted to some other Greek word. They use child, son, servant, young man, maid, etc. It is used of the boys under two years of age in Bethlehem (Mt. 2<sup>16</sup>). It is used of Jesus when He was twelve years old (Lu. 2<sup>43</sup>). It is quoted from Isaiah when he spoke of Him (Mt. 12<sup>18</sup>). It is applied to Him four times in this book (3<sup>13</sup>, 4<sup>27-30</sup>). It is a word like our "boy" or "girl" which may be applied either to a child or a young servant.

<sup>1</sup> The apostles offended both the priests and the Sadducees by their action. It was the privilege of the priests to teach the people. They should have been the chief support of the apostles in heralding the proclamation of the kingdom. But they are jealous because these common men command a hearing and usurp their authority in matters of doctrine. The Sadducees are especially offended, inasmuch as they denied the doctrine of the resurrection, which was the principal point in the proclamation of the apostles. Apart from the resurrection Messiah was dead and all hope of His kingdom was crucified with Him. But, given the power of His resurrection, all the promises of the kingdom are confirmed. The officer of the sanctuary was in command of the Levitical guard which had the military oversight of the sacred precincts, where the Gentiles could not enter.

not be hearing that Prophet shall be utterly exterminated from among <sup>24</sup> the people.' Now all the prophets also, from Samuel, and those succeeding him, as many as speak, also <sup>25</sup> announce these days. You are the sons of the prophets and of the covenant which God covenanted with your fathers, saying to Abraham, 'And in your seed all the kindreds
<sup>26</sup> of the earth shall be blessed.' To you first God, raising His Boy, commissions Him to bless you by turning each of you from your wickednesses."

<sup>4</sup> Now, at their speaking to the people, the priests and officer of the sanctuary and the Sadducees stand
<sup>2</sup> by them, being exasperated because of their teaching the people and announcing in Jesus the resurrection
<sup>3</sup> from among the dead. And they laid hands on them and they were placed in custody for the morrow, for it was already dusk.

<sup>4</sup> Now many of those who hear the word believe, and the number of men became about five thousand.

<sup>5</sup> Now it occurred on the morrow that their chiefs and the elders and the scribes assembled in Jerusalem, <sup>6</sup> and Annas, the chief priest, and Caiaphas and John and Alexander and as many as were of the chief

<sup>8</sup> The evangel of the kingdom is now for the first time since the death of Christ, proclaimed to Israel as a nation, as represented by her chiefs and elders and scribes. Hitherto it has gone to individuals in the nation with considerable success. Now everything hinges on the attitude of the official heads of the people. They had rejected Messiah Himself and were responsible for His crucifixion. The chief priests and elders knew that He had foretold His resurrection (Mt.27<sup>63</sup>). They had the evidence of the Roman guard and had bribed them to tell a false story (Mt.28<sup>13</sup>). To this the apostles now add their testimony and confirm it by healing the lame man. When Peter speaks they are quite unable to answer him. Surely now they are convinced that Jesus is the Messiah! If He can save the lame man He can save the nation. Here was Israel's opportunity. They stood on the verge of the kingdom. If they accepted Him, He would soon rid them of their enemies and come to set up the sovereignty promised by the prophets. Should they refuse the testimony of the holy spirit as they had rejected Him it would involve the whole nation in an eonian sin, and the kingdom could not come.

The disciples' question concerning the restoration of the kingdom at this time, is here answered for us for the first time. Again and again, during the course of its proclamation, the Jews reject the King and the kingdom. Here, however, we have the first refusal. This is the supreme crisis in the book of Acts. Had they accepted the apostles' testimony, the nation would have followed their lead, and the success of the apostles' proclamation would have been assured. Now that they reject the testimony to His resurrection, it is clear that Israel's rightful sovereignty will not be restored to them at this time.

holy spirit, said to them, "Chiefs
<sup>9</sup> of the people and elders! If we to-day are being examined concerning the infirm man's benefaction, by
<sup>10</sup> what he has been saved, let it be known to you all and to the entire people of Israel, that in the name of Jesus Christ, the Nazarene, Whom you crucify, Whom God rouses from among the dead, by this One, this <sup>11</sup> man stands before you sound. This is the Stone which is being scorned by you builders, which is becoming <sup>12</sup> the head of the corner. And there is no salvation in any other, for neither has any other name been given under heaven among men in which we must be saved."

<sup>13</sup> Now, on beholding the boldness of Peter and John, and grasping that they are illiterate and ordinary men, they marveled. Besides, they recognized them, that they were <sup>14</sup> with Jesus. Besides, observing the man who has been cured standing with them, they had nothing to contradict.

<sup>15</sup> Now, ordering them to come out of the Sanhedrin, they parleyed <sup>16</sup> with one another, saying, "What should we be doing to these men? For, indeed, that a known sign has occurred through them, is apparent to all who are dwelling at Jerusa-
<sup>17</sup> lem, and we cannot deny it. But, lest it may disseminate more among the people, we should be threatening them no longer to be speaking
<sup>18</sup> in this Name to any man." And, calling them, they give them a sweeping charge not to utter aught, neither to be teaching, in the name of Jesus.

 CALLING them THEY-

13 Peter and John were not ignorant men by any means, though they lacked the culture and affectation which marked the learned class of that day. They had been in the school of Christ.

14 The attitude of the Sanhedrin had the immediate effect of abrogating their authority. They should have ruled for God, now they are arrayed against God. They should have been a terror to evil-doers; now they menace those who are carrying out His will. Peter, as an apostle of the Messiah, was one of the real rulers in Israel, and will one day sit upon a throne in the kingdom (Mt.19<sup>27</sup>). Hence he has the right to oppose the Sanhedrin and to carry out the commission which he has from his Master. This is no example for us to follow in this economy. We are to be subject to the superior authorities (Ro.13<sup>1</sup>).

22 The healing of the lame man is called a sign, hence has some typical significance, especially in regard to his age. May this not suggest the forty years which followed, during which Israel was not able to walk before God?

23 The threats of the Sanhedrin produced a powerful effect on the believers. They were accustomed to obey their religious rulers implicitly. In fact, they gave their own chiefs and elders a place which the Roman power never could obtain. They must have some divine direction for continuing in a course prohibited by the highest Jewish authority. This is found in the second part of the first Psalm (usually called the second Psalm). Here their own chiefs are associated with the nations in hostility to Messiah. The Psalm should be read to the end. The threats of the Sanhedrin are as nothing compared to Jehovah's threats against them. The judges of the land are exhorted to be instructed and serve the Lord, lest they perish when His anger is burning but a little (Ps.2 10-12). The fact that their chiefs are no longer under Jehovah's protection but the objects of His indignation emboldens them to go forth with the proclamation in spite of their opposition. Moreover, the Lord's hand had been with the apostles, for many had believed, and it was evident that the Sanhedrin itself was afraid to exercise its full power, or Peter and John would not have been released.

19 Yet Peter and John, answering, said to them, "If it is just before God to be hearing you rather than 20 God, judge you; for we cannot but be speaking of what we perceive and hear". Yet those who menace them release them, not finding how they should be chastening them because of the people, seeing that all glorified God for that which 22 has occurred, for the man was of more than forty years, on whom this sign of healing had occurred.

23 Now, being released, they came to their own and report whatever the chief priests and elders say to 24 them. Now those who hear lift up their voice to God with one accord, and say, "O Owner, Thou Who makest heaven and earth and the 25 sea and all that is in them, Who through holy spirit, by the mouth of our father, Thy boy David, art saying,

'Why do the nations rage,
And the people meditate empty things?

26 The kings of the land stand by,
And the chiefs were assembled for the same intent,
Against the Lord and against His Christ.'

27 For of a truth, in this city, were assembled against Thy holy Boy Jesus, Whom Thou dost anoint, Herod, as well as Pontius Pilate, together with the nations and the 28 peoples of Israel, to do whatever Thy hand and Thy counsel designates beforehand to occur.

29 And now, Lord, take notice of their threats, and be Thou en-

<sup>30</sup> The timid opposition of the Sanhedrin is in contrast to the boldness of those who proclaimed the evangel. God manifested Himself by miraculous interventions, and the powers of the kingdom abounded.

<sup>32</sup> The laws concerning property were so different in Israel from anything with which we are acquainted that it is difficult for us to understand this and similar passages. First of all, each Jew had his allotment, which could not be sold. Even if it was disposed of, it came back to him in the jubilee. This was his means of living. If the kingdom should come, the land would be re-distributed according to the prophets (Eze.47<sup>13</sup>). The action of the Pentecostal believers is all based on this fact. Whatever they had beyond their allotment would go back to its rightful allottee when the kingdom is set up. In view of this they sold the lands and houses they had acquired besides their allotment, and shared their possessions, or personal property such as money, among themselves.

dowing Thy slaves with all boldness
<sup>30</sup> to be speaking Thy word, by stretching out Thy hand for healing and signs and miracles, to occur through the Name of Thy holy Boy Jesus."

<sup>31</sup> And at their beseeching, the place in which they were assembled was shaken and they are all filled with holy spirit, and they spoke the word of God with boldness.

<sup>32</sup> Now the multitude of believers was of one heart and soul, and not one said that any of his possessions were his own, but it was all theirs

<sup>33</sup> in common. And with great power the apostles rendered testimony to the resurrection of Jesus Christ the Lord. Besides, great grace was on them all, for neither was there any indigent among them, for as many as had acquired freeholds or possessed houses, selling them, brought the price of that which is being disposed of, and placed it at the feet of the apostles. Now they distributed to each as much as ever any had need.

land. In this they did well. They brought a part to the apostles. This, too, was a commendable act. Their sin seems to have been, not in withholding a part, but in giving the impression that they had contributed all for the common good. Here we have a practical illustration of the righteous rule which will characterize the kingdom of God. The hidden motive is brought to light. An act appearing most praiseworthy on the surface is declared to be tainted with falsehood. No witnesses are needed. The Lord's apostle can detect evil though most skillfully concealed. Judgment is immediate and summary.

4 Ananias was under no compulsion to sell the freehold. Neither was he obliged to contribute the sum he obtained to the common fund. All this was voluntary. But such a course would have lowered him in the eyes of the disciples and he wished to be well thought of. But his avarice was too strong to allow him to part with the whole sum, so he, in effect, steals a part of the gift, and presents the rest as though it were the whole amount. This was hypocrisy in its most hateful form. In an administration of grace, such as we enjoy today, such sins are not followed by swift judgment. They wait until the tribunal of Christ (2Co. 5:10). But in the administration of the kingdom, righteousness will reign and sin will be suppressed.

11 The result of the sudden and severe judgment of Ananias and Sapphira was great fear, both among the believers and others who hear of it. The resultant conduct was not the free unforced desire to please God which is inspired by His love and grace, which should actuate us in this economy, but restraint from evil through dread of judgment. It is based on power from without rather than an impulse from within. We are not in danger of any judgment, hence have no such motive to mold our behavior. Our lives should be the fruit of love.

13 The awful atmosphere of inflexible righteousness which repelled the unbelieving was an adumbration of the day when a King shall reign in righteousness and through the greatness of His power His enemies shall yield a feigned obedience to Him (Ps.134;

Peter said, "Ananias, wherefore does Satan fill your heart for you to falsify the holy spirit and to embezzle from the price of the freehold?

4 While remaining, did it not remain yours? And, being disposed of, it belonged to you by right. Why is it that you placed this matter in your heart? You do not lie to men, but to God."

5 Now Ananias, hearing these words, falling down, gives up the soul. And great fear came on all

6 hearing these things. Now the young men, rising, enshroud him, and, carrying him out, they entomb him.

7 Now it occurred, after an interval of about three hours, and his wife, not being aware of what has occurred, entered. Now Peter answered her, "Tell me if you took so much pay for the freehold?"

8 Now she said, "Yes, so much."

9 Now Peter said to her "Why is it that you agreed to try the spirit of the Lord? Lo! the feet of those entombing your husband are at the door and they shall be carrying you out."

10 Now, instantly, she falls at his feet and gives up the soul. Now the youths, entering, found her dead, and carrying her out, entomb her with her husband. And great fear came on the whole ecclesia and on all hearing these things.

12 Now through the hands of the apostles many signs and miracles occurred among the people. And they were all, with one accord, in 81<sup>15</sup>; 66<sup>a</sup>). The fear of the drawn sword in the King's hand will repress evil and rebellion.

<sup>14</sup> The prayer of the disciples, after the threats of the Sanhedrin, seems to have been abundantly answered. Not only was the kingdom proclaimed with power but the word was confirmed by many signs and miracles. Multitudes joined the disciples and they met openly in the sanctuary.

<sup>18</sup> As before (4<sup>a</sup>), the apostles are confined during the night, that they may appear before the Sanhedrin in the morning. Then they were held until the Sanhedrin sends for them. Now, however, the Lord condescends to give the rebellious rulers a token of His power as well as their impotence. He will give a public exhibition of the futility of opposing Him. No evidence shall be lacking to convince them that God is behind Peter's proclamation.

<sup>21</sup> Once again all of Israel's rulers are gathered together and given an opportunity to hear the evangel. The fate of the nation depends on their action, for they are the responsible heads of the people. Their rejection involves all the rest.

<sup>14</sup> them, yet, rather, multitudes of men as well as women who are believing were added to the Lord, so that they are carrying out the infirm into the squares also, and placing them on cots and pallets, that, at Peter's coming, if even his shadow should be overshadowing some of them. Now a multitude also from the cities about Jerusalem came together, bringing the infirm and those molested by unclean spirits, all of whom were cured.

<sup>17</sup> Now when the chief priest and all those with him rise (being the sect of the Sadducees) they are filled with jealousy, and laid hands on the apostles and placed them in public custody. Yet a messenger of the Lord, during the night, opens the doors of the jail, and, leading them out, said, "Go, and, standing in the sanctuary, speak to the people all the declarations of this life." Now, hearing this, they entered into the sanctuary very early and taught.

Now the chief priest and those with him, coming along, call together the Sanhedrin and the entire senate of the sons of Israel, and they dispatch to the prison to have them led forth. Yet the deputies, coming along, did not find them in the jail. Now, returning, they report, saying that "The prison we found locked with all security and the guards standing at the doors. Yet, when opening them, we found no one within." Now, as they hear <sup>25</sup> The popular favor enjoyed by the apostles reached its culmination at this time. The increasing number of the disciples, the many benefits conferred on the sick, which would enlist friends, as well as the well-known fact that the apostles had been imprisoned without warrant and then delivered without human aid, by the messenger of God—all this would act very powerfully with the impressionable populace and give the apostles a prestige they had never before enjoyed. This, too, accounts for the mild attitude of the chief priest and the bold assurance of the apostles when called to account for their disobedience to the commands of the Sanhedrin. It is significant that the rulers ask no questions, and are silent before the disciples and the multitude as to the manner of their release. They did not wish to elicit further testimony to the supernatural deliverances, both of the Lord from the grave and His servants from the prison.

<sup>26</sup> It is evident that, had the apostles wished to do so, they could have started an insurrection even against the Sanhedrin, and this was what the officer of the sanctuary and the chief priest feared.

<sup>29</sup> Peter begins by reminding the Sanhedrin that they were going contrary to God and that, in such circumstances, he had no alternative but to ignore their commands. This is exactly what he had told them before (<sup>419</sup>). They cannot but infer that any further charge they may lay on the apostles would not be heeded. Peter does not stop to consider any answer to this ultimatum but goes right on and charges them with the murder of their Messiah, Whom God exalts to His right hand. He offers them a pardon. Instead of standing before them to be judged he brings them into judgment before God. The whole situation is reversed. The judges are pronounced guilty by the prisoner.

these words, the officer of the sanctuary as well as the chief priests were bewildered concerning them, as to whatever this may come to.

<sup>25</sup> Now some one, coming along, reports to them that "Lo! the men whom you placed in the jail are in the sanctuary, standing and teaching the people." Then the officer, together with the deputies, coming forth, led them without violence, for they feared the people, lest they should be stoned. Now, leading them, they stand them in the Sanhedrin. And the chief priest inquires of them, saying, "Do we not strictly charge you not to teach in this Name? And lo! you have filled Jerusalem with your teaching, and are intending to bring the blood of this Man on us."

<sup>29</sup> Yet Peter and the apostles, answering, say, "One ought to be yielding to God rather than to men." <sup>30</sup> Now the God of our fathers rouses Jesus, on Whom you lay hands, <sup>31</sup> hanging Him on a tree. This Instructor and Saviour God exalts to His right hand, to give repentance to Israel and the pardon of <sup>32</sup> sins. And we are witnesses to these declarations, and the holy spirit which God gives to those yielding to Him."

<sup>33</sup> Now those who hear were harrowed, and they intended to assassinate them. Yet a certain Pharisee rises in the Sanhedrin, named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law, honored by the entire people. He orders them to put the men outside a bit. Besides he said to them, <sup>35</sup> "Men! Israelites! Take heed to

<sup>36</sup> The fact that this Theudas is not mentioned in profane literature is no reason for doubting the truthfulness and accuracy of the narrative. Josephus, in his Antiquities, hints at many disturbances of this character at about the time indicated. He does, indeed, tell of another Theudas, about fifty years later, during the reign of the emperor Claudius, whose career corresponds closely to the one mentioned by Gamaliel, but it was plainly impossible for Gamaliel to speak of an insurrection which had not yet occurred. Such a statement would not have gone unchallenged during the early centuries of our era, if it had no foundation in fact.

<sup>37</sup> Judas, the Galilean, is often mentioned by Josephus (Antiquities 18, 1, 1; Wars of the Jews 2, 8, 1). He charges him with starting a new sect of Jewish philosophy from which sprang many misfortunes and wars. This sect agreed in the main with the Pharisees, but they had an inviolable attachment to liberty, and said that God is to be their only Ruler and Lord. They did not hesitate to die any kind of death, nor did they heed the death of their relatives and friends, nor could any fear make them call any man lord. In the book on the Wars of the Jews, Josephus characterizes him thus: "a certain Galilean, whose name was Judas, prevailed on his countrymen to revolt, and said that they were cowards if they would endure to pay a tax to the Romans, and would, after God, submit to mortal men as their lords. This man was a teacher of a peculiar sect of his own and was not at all like the rest of their leaders." His followers were dispersed, but the love of liberty was spread among the people and later led to many other uprisings.

<sup>38</sup> Gamaliel's cowardly evasion suited the Sanhedrin because they were afraid of the people. Though God used this speech for the apostles' salvation, his specious reasoning is not to be trusted. So Job's friends falsely argued. "Truth is mighty and will prevail"—yes, ultimately, but not necessarily here and now. Gamaliel left out faith, an omission which invalidates his conclusions and makes it impossible to accept as witnesses for God yourselves, as to these men, what you are about to be committing.

<sup>36</sup> For before these days Theudas rose, saying that he is somebody, to whom men numbering about four hundred inclined, who was assassinated, and as many as were persuaded by him were all disbanded, and nothing came of it.

<sup>37</sup> After this Judas, the Galilean, rose in the days of the registration, and draws away people after him, and he was destroyed, and as many as were persuaded by him

<sup>38</sup> are all scattered. And now I am saying to you, Withdraw from these men and let them alone, seeing that, if this counsel or this work should be of men, it will be demolished, yet if it is of God, you will not be able to demolish them—lest at some time you may be found fighters against God also."

<sup>40</sup> Now they are persuaded by him, and, calling the apostles, and lashing them, they charge them not to be speaking in the name of Jesus, and release them. They, indeed, then, went from the face of the Sanhedrin, rejoicing that they were deemed worthy to be dishonored for the sake of the Name. Besides, every day, in the sanctuary and at the homes, they ceased not teaching and preaching the evangel of Christ Jesus.

<sup>6</sup> Now in these days of multiplying disciples, there came to be a murmuring of the Hellenists against the Hebrews that their widows were overlooked in the daily dispensation. Now the twelve, calling for the multitude of the disciples, say, "It is not pleasing such as "the last apostles, death doomed, seeing that we became a gazing stock to the world and to messengers and to men" (1Co.4<sup>9-13</sup>).

<sup>1</sup> It is important to grasp clearly the distinction between the "Hebrews" and "Hellenists." The latter were not gentiles. They were Israelites just as really as the Hebrews. The Hellenists were those in the nation who had renounced the ancient customs and traditions to a large extent and had taken up Greek culture. All classes spoke Greek, but the Hebrews also used an Aramaic vernacular in familiar intercourse. The Hellenists were largely those Jews who had resided in foreign lands and had acquired the customs and manners of the Greeks. In one sense the Hellenists were Hebrews, but this term gradually came to be confined to those who were true to the old traditions. Thus, when Paul speaks of himself as a Hebrew of the Hebrews he means that he was not a Hellenist, but had clung closely to Judaism and had resisted the influence of foreign culture and customs. The usual definition of a Hellenist, "a Greek-speaking Jew," is not adequate, for all Jews spoke Greek. Our Lord and His apostles used it in their public discourses and the most illiterate could understand them. Only occasionally did they use Aramaic expressions. The Hebrews looked down on the Hellenists, hence they formed a separate class of disciples.

<sup>5</sup> Though these seven names are all Greek, the fact that one proselyte, Nicholas, was included, seems to indicate that all parties were represented. Only the first two are mentioned again in the Scriptures. They do not seem to have confined themselves to the serving of tables, but took a leading part in the evangel.

<sup>9</sup> There were hundreds of synagogues in Jerusalem, some of which were maintained by the various groups of Jews in foreign lands. About B. C. 63 Pompey carried a large number of Jews to Rome. When they were liberated and returned to Judea, they formed the synagogue of the Freedmen. These synagogues seem to have been composed mostly of Hellenists. In all probability Saul of Tarsus belonged to the synagogue of Cilicia.

for us, leaving the word of God, to <sup>3</sup> be serving at tables. Now, brethren, pick out seven reputable men from among you, full of the spirit and wisdom, whom we will place over
<sup>4</sup> this need. Yet we shall be persevering in prayer and the dispensation of the word."

<sup>5</sup> And the word pleases the entire multitude, and they choose Stephen, a man full of faith and holy spirit, and Philip and Prochoros and Nicanor and Timon and Parmenas and Nicholas, a proselyte of

<sup>8</sup> Now Stephen, full of grace and power, did great miracles and signs
<sup>9</sup> among the people. Now there rise certain of the synagogue which is termed Freedmen, and of the Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and those from Cilicia and the [province of] Asia, discussing with Stephen.
<sup>10</sup> And they had not the strength to withstand the wisdom and the spirit with which he spoke.

<sup>11</sup> Then they suborned men, saying that, "We have heard him speaking declarations blaspheming Moses <sup>12</sup> and God." Besides, they stir up the people and the elders and the scribes, and, standing by, they grip him, and led him into the

ing THEY-TOGETHER-SNATCH him

<sup>13</sup> These synagogues were doubtless very lax in their adherence to the Jewish law and customs, yet they are not ashamed to charge Stephen with this, in order to inflame the Sanhedrin against him. The false witness did not consist in trumping up charges with no foundation in fact, but in perverting the truth, just as was done in the case of our Lord. Indeed, they brought up the very same charge (Mt 26<sup>61</sup>). While Christ was on earth, His body was the true temple of God (Jno.2<sup>21</sup>). Jehovah did not inhabit Herod's splendid pile. It did not house the Shekinah glory. The only times that it was tenanted by the Divine Effulgence was when He came into its courts. When He left it the last time, He exclaimed, "Lo! your house is left to you desolate!" (Mt.23<sup>38</sup>). Stephen had doubtless brought this truth home to them, and perhaps had also pressed our Lord's prediction concerning the destruction of Herod's shrine, so that not one stone should be left on another (Mt.24<sup>2</sup>). But in no case could he have said that Christ (Whom they contemptuously termed the Nazarene) would Himself destroy the temple. On the contrary, He said that, when they destroyed it, He would raise it up (Jno.2<sup>19</sup>). This He did in His resurrection (Jno.2<sup>22</sup>). And now the glory of God's presence illuminates the face of Stephen, so that he becomes, for the time, the messenger, or angel of God to them.

<sup>1</sup> The address of Stephen is a model for presenting the Messiah to the Jews. They stumbled at His sufferings and rejection, so Stephen takes up the greatest of the nation's heroes, who were types of Messiah, and shows that, in each case, there was a preliminary separation or rejection. Abraham was compelled to leave his kindred and his father's house, Joseph was hated by his brethren, Moses was not recognized when he first came to help his people, even David, that unparalleled type of the coming King, not only spent years in rejection, but had to leave the building of the temple to Solomon. All of these are pictures of a rejected Messiah. In each the glory followed suffering and separation. Such is the picture which the ancient scriptures draw, and the inference is clear that Jesus is Messiah.

<sup>13</sup> Sanhedrin. Besides, false witnesses stand up, saying, "This man does not cease talking, [making] declarations against this holy place and <sup>14</sup> the law, for we have heard him saying that this Jesus the Nazarene will be demolishing this place and will be changing the customs which <sup>15</sup> Moses gives over to us." And, looking intently at him, all those seated in the Sanhedrin perceived his face as if it were the face of a messenger.

<sup>7</sup> Now the chief priest said, "Are <sup>2</sup> these things so?" Now he averred, "Men, brethren and fathers, hear! The God of glory was <sup>55</sup> seen by our father Abraham, being in Mesopotamia, ere he dwelt in Haran, and said to him, 'Come out of <sup>3</sup> your land and from among your relationship and come hither into the land which I shall be showing to <sup>4</sup> you.' Then, coming out of the land of the Chaldeans, he dwells in Haran, and thence, after the death of his father, He exiles him into this land in which you are now dwelling. <sup>5</sup> And He gives him no allotment to enjoy in it, nor a platform for a foot.

And He promises to give it to him for a tenure and to his seed after him, he having no child. Yet <sup>6</sup> God speaks thus, that "his seed shall be a sojourner in an alien land, and they shall enslave it and <sup>7</sup> illtreat it four hundred years. And the nation for which they should be slaving I shall judge", said God, "and after these things they shall

<sup>9</sup> Joseph is a marvelous miniature of the suffering and glorified Messiah. The jealous hatred of his brethren placed him in the pit and in the prison, but God was with him and exalted him to the highest place on earth. He became the deliverer, not only of his own brethren, but of all of Egypt also. The one whom they despised and ill-treated became their lord and saviour. The Sanhedrin could hardly miss the application of this to the Messiah Whom Stephen proclaimed. They were the brethren of Messiah ben Joseph.

<sup>14</sup> The Septuagint, or Greek version, differs from the Hebrew text in Genesis 46<sup>26,27</sup> by giving Joseph nine sons in place of two, and thus bringing the total up to seventy-five. But, as the enumeration in Genesis does not necessarily include all who are alluded to by Stephen, there is no reason why they should give the same total. The Septuagint differs greatly from the Hebrew text in regard to numbers, especially in the genealogies, and it may preserve some true readings.

<sup>16</sup> The bones of Joseph were transferred from Egypt to the land by Moses (Ex.13<sup>19</sup>). So the rest of the patriarchs were transferred to Sychem, where Jacob had bought a parcel of a field (Gen.33<sup>19</sup>), probably near, or adjoining the sepulcher which Abraham had bought before, of which there is no record in Genesis. If Stephen had made even a minute blunder regarding this the Sanhedrin would soon have set him right. They were much "higher" critics than any we have today.

be coming out and offering divine service to Me in this place."

<sup>8</sup> And He gives him the covenant of circumcision. And thus he begets Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day, and Isaac Jacob, and Jacob the twelve patriarchs.

<sup>9</sup> And the patriarchs, being jealous of Joseph, gave him up into Egypt.

<sup>10</sup> And God was with him, and extricates him out of all his afflictions, and gives him favor and wisdom in front of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and constitutes him governor over Egypt, and over his whole house.

<sup>11</sup> Now a famine came on the whole of Egypt and Canaan, and the affliction was great, and our fathers

<sup>14</sup> Now Joseph, dispatching them, calls for Jacob, his father, and the entire relationship among seventy-

<sup>15</sup> five souls. And Jacob descended into Egypt, and he is deceased, he

<sup>16</sup> and our fathers, and they were transferred to Sychem and placed in the tomb which Abraham purchases for a price, in silver, from the sons of Emmor in Sychem.

<sup>17</sup> Now, as the time of the promise which God avows to Abraham drew near, the people grow and were

<sup>18</sup> multiplied in Egypt, until a different king arose over Egypt, who had

	COB BEING GRAIN dim. INTO EGYPT		DIFFERENT ON EGYPT WHO

<sup>18</sup> It is probable that the lot of Israel in Egypt was pleasant under the dynasty which was acquainted with Joseph, who made these rulers absolute masters in Egypt, for he got for them all the silver and the cattle and the land in exchange for grain, in the time of the famine (Gen.47). Such service could not be forgotten. So it was that Israel prospered in the land of Goshen until the reigning dynasty was displaced by a different line of rulers, who knew nothing of Joseph and were not indebted to him for their power.

<sup>20</sup> Moses is a memorable example of God's method of meeting the wisdom of the world. Pharaoh plans the extermination of the Hebrew race, yet he himself nurtures and educates their deliverer!

<sup>22</sup> Egypt is set before us as the sum of human wisdom, as Assyria was of human power. The Egyptian priests had a knowledge of science which, in some points at least, far surpassed what is known today. No scientist can accomplish the feats of Jannes and Jambres. Moses was far beyond our present standards of intellectual attainment.

<sup>23</sup> The incident concerning Moses' rejection by his brethren at his first attempt to become their deliverer must have had a powerful effect on the Sanhedrin, for nothing would appeal to them more than a parallel between Moses and Messiah. Except to the most hardened heart, the fact that Moses was, in the first place, scorned by those whom he came to save, and his efforts in their behalf misunderstood, proved positively that Messiah would receive similar treatment. As Pharaoh menaced the life of Moses, so Herod sought the life of Christ. As his own people cast out Moses and refused to accept the salvation he offered them, so the Jews murdered the Messiah and rejected His deliverance. And we may add, as Moses came back and led them out, so will Messiah return and lead them into the blessings of the millennial kingdom.

<sup>30</sup> The flaming thorn bush is a notable symbol of the nation of Israel. They were in the midst of the fire of persecution and have often been since they came out of Egypt, yet they are never consumed. They are the only eonian nation.

not been acquainted with Joseph.

<sup>21</sup> Now, at his being exposed, Pharaoh's daughter lifts him up and rears him herself, for a son. And Moses was trained in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, yet was able in his words and works.

<sup>23</sup> Now as his forty-year time is completed, it came up on his heart to visit his brethren, the sons of Israel. And, perceiving one being injured, he succors him, and avenges the one being harried, smiting the Egyptian. Now he inferred that his brethren understood that God, through his hand, is giving salvation to them: yet they do not understand. Besides, the ensuing day he was seen by them as they fought, and he interceded with them for peace, saying, 'Men! You are brethren! Why are you injuring one another?' Yet he who is injuring his associate thrusts him from him, saying, 'Who constitutes you a chief and a justice over us? Do you want to despatch me in the manner you despatched the Egyptian yesterday?' Now Moses fled at this word, and became a sojourner in the land of Midian, where he begets two sons.

<sup>30</sup> He Who is especially referred to as Jehovah in the Hebrew scriptures is here called a messenger or angel. The same term is used of the One seen by Moses on mount Sinai (<sup>53</sup>). Hence it is evident that the theophanies, or visible appearances of the invisible God, were carried out by intermediate agents. Indeed, the deity is identified with the messenger even in Exodus. First we are told that the angel of the Lord appeared in the midst of the bush. And when Jehovah saw that he turned aside to see, Elohim called unto him out of the midst of the bush (Ex.3<sup>2-4</sup>). The same is true of the giving of the law at Sinai. Moses went up unto Elohim, and Jehovah called unto him out of the mountain (Ex.19<sup>3</sup>). Yet we are assured that the law was prescribed through messengers in the hands of a mediator (Gal.3<sup>19</sup>), and that it was spoken by messengers (Heb.2<sup>2</sup>).

<sup>35</sup> The prime point with Stephen is that it was the one whom they had disowned who was chosen by God to be their redeemer and judge. Just so with Messiah. The fact that He had been disowned was no proof that He was false. It was, rather, the great sign which identified Him with the types of old, for Moses was rejected by the people even after he led them out of Egypt and had received the law and wrought wonderful miracles to attest his office. This should be the key note in all evangelism of the people of the covenant. A prophet like Moses must suffer at the hands of his own people. This thought ought also to cheer the hearts of His lesser slaves, who find themselves rejected and despised because of their faithfulness to Him.

ing to consider it, the voice of the Lord came, 'I am the God of your fathers, the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob.' Now Moses, becoming in a tremor, dared not consider it.

<sup>33</sup> Now the Lord said to him, 'Loose the sandals from your feet, for the place on which you stand is holy land. I have certainly perceived the evil treatment of My people in Egypt, and their groaning I hear, and I descended to extricate them. And now, come hither, I should dispatch you into Egypt.'

<sup>35</sup> This Moses, whom they disown, saying, 'Who constitutes you a chief and a justice over us?' this one has God commissioned to be a chief as well as a redeemer, a justice, with the hand of the messenger who was seen by him in the thorn bush. This one led them out, doing miracles and signs in the land of Egypt and in the Red Sea, and in the wilderness forty years. This is the Moses who says to the sons of Israel, 'A Prophet will God be raising up to you from among your brethren, as me.'

<sup>38</sup> This is he who came to be in the ecclesia in the wilderness with the messenger who speaks to him in mount Sinai, and with our fathers, who receives the living oracles to give to you, to whom our fathers will not become obedient, but they thrust him away, and turned to Egypt in their hearts, saying to Aaron, 'Make us gods who will go before us—for this man Moses, who led us out of the land

<sup>41</sup> Idolatry is, etymologically, the offering of divine service to that which can be perceived by the senses. In this way, all objects of worship, even if they are supposed to be representations of the true God, are idols. God will have no images of Himself but One—His beloved Son. He is the Image of the invisible God (Col.1:15). The idolatry here mentioned is usually referred to Israel in the wilderness. But their conduct at that time was hardly the occasion of the Babylonian exile. In neither Amos (5:25-27) nor Acts is the time given, but it was, most likely, in the days of the kings, before the captivity. One of the causes of their exile was that they had transgressed very much after all the abominations of the nations (2Chron.36:14). In the land they corrupted the form of the wilderness worship, substituting the tabernacle of Moloch for the testimony which Jehovah had directed to be constructed according to the model Moses had seen. It is possible that the Hebrew should be translated "your king", rather than "Moloch". Amos writes concerning Israel (Amos 1:1), so that the reference may be to their first king, Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who caused Israel to sin. He, like Aaron, made a "calf" or bull for the people to worship. In fact, he made two, and placed one in Bethel and the other in Dan (1 Ki.12:26-30). In one case it was a revolt from the prophet of Jehovah, in the other it was secession from the rightful king and the house of David. Besides the false tabernacle, they also had a substitute for the glory, which seems to have been an image of one of the constellations. Thus they worshipped the "host of heaven". Raiphan, or Remphan, is sometimes identified with Saturn, but it is not certain.

<sup>44</sup> Stephen is charged with speaking against the temple. Hence he traces God's dwelling place to the temple of Solomon, yet proves from scripture that the true temple is not made with hands. The God of glory had left that temple tenantless (Eze.9:8,10:4,18,11:23) and had taken up His abode in His Son, as He had tabernacled amongst them, full of grace and truth (Jn.1:14). And now the glory was in their midst, irradiating the face of Stephen.

of Egypt, we are not aware what became of him.'

<sup>41</sup> And they make a calf in those days and they led up the sacrifice to the idol, and made merry with <sup>42</sup> the works of their hands. Now God turns and gives them up to be offering divine service to the host of heaven, according as it is written in the scroll of the prophets, 'Do you not offer Me slain victims and sacrifices forty years in the
<sup>43</sup> wilderness, O house of Israel? And you took up the tabernacle of Moloch and the constellation of your god Raiphan, the models which you make, to worship them. And I shall be exiling you beyond Babylon.'

<sup>44</sup> The tabernacle of the testimony was with our fathers in the wilderness, according as He prescribes, speaking to Moses to make it according to the model which he had seen, <sup>45</sup> which our fathers succeeding him, with Joshua, also led into the tenure of the nations, whom God thrusts out from the face of our

<sup>48</sup> house, but the Most High is not dwelling in what is made by hands, according as the prophet is <sup>49</sup> saying, "'Heaven is My throne, yet the earth is a footstool for My feet. What kind of house shall be built for Me?" the Lord is saying, "or what is the place of <sup>50</sup> My stopping? Is it not My hand that does all these things?"'

<sup>51</sup> A review of Israel's history reveals a series of apostasies. All of God's spokesmen suffered at their hands. Even while maintaining the outward form they were always at variance with the holy spirit. This charge is of special import at this time, for this is the first great crisis in this book. The holy spirit's testimony to Jerusalem is summarily rejected. The question, Wilt Thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel? receives an emphatic negative, so far as Jerusalem and Judea are concerned. The testimony now goes to Samaria.

<sup>55</sup> Stephen begins his address with "the God of glory" and now he beholds the glory in heaven, and Jesus standing, ready to return and bless them should they repent. After this He is always represented as seated. His work accomplished, waiting until the apostate nation is ready to receive Him as their Messiah.

<sup>52</sup> As your fathers, you also! Which of the prophets do not your fathers persecute? And they kill those who announce beforehand concerning the coming of the Just One, of Whom now you became traitors and murderers—who got the law by the mandate of messengers and do not maintain it!"— 11:37

<sup>54</sup> Now, hearing these things, they were harrowed in their hearts, and <sup>55</sup> gnashed their teeth at him. Now, possessing the fullness of faith and holy spirit, looking intently into heaven, he perceived God's glory and Jesus standing at the right <sup>56</sup> hand of God, and said, "Lo! I am beholding the heavens opened up, and the Son of Mankind standing at the right hand of God." <sup>57</sup> Now, crying with a loud voice, they press their ears and rush on him with one <sup>58</sup> accord. And, casting him outside of the city, they pelted him with stones.

And the witnesses placed their garments at the feet of a young man called Saul.

<sup>59</sup> And they pelted Stephen with stones, while he is invoking and saying, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit!" Now, kneeling, he cries with a loud voice, "Lord, Thou shouldst not stand this sin against them!" And, saying this, he was put to repose.

8 Now Saul was endorsing his assassination. 9:1

Now in that day there came to be a great persecution of the ecclesia which is in Jerusalem, and they were all dispersed among the districts of Judea and Samaria, save <sup>4</sup> We now enter the second cycle of the kingdom testimony. Jerusalem and Judea have not heeded its proclamation. It is now offered to Samaria, then it will go to the limits of the land, and even to the proselytes like the eunuch and Cornelius. Thus it was that the Lord had commanded (1<sup>8</sup>).

After the ten tribes, whose capital was Samaria, were exiled, the king of Assyria sent colonists to repopulate the country (2 Ki.17<sup>24-27</sup>). They intermarried with the remaining Israelites and thus sprang the mixed race of the Samaritans. Because the Jews would not recognize them or allow them to help in rebuilding the temple, they stirred up the Persian king against the Jews, and hindered the work of restoration. They also built their own temple on mount Gerizim and worshiped according to the law. They recognized only the five books of Moses. Thus sprang up a jealous antagonism between them and the Jews, so that the latter refused to have any dealings with them. As they, however, worshiped Jehovah and taught the law and had a strain of Jewish blood, it was fitting that they should hear the proclamation of Christ, after Judea had been evangelized. Physically they were nearer the Jews than any other nation. Thus the widening testimony to the kingdom spread, until the evangel reaches the limits of the land. Then it is carried beyond by means of Saul, who at this time, was its chief opponent.

<sup>9</sup> The Roman Empire was overrun with fortune tellers and jugglers and magicians, many of whom were Jews. The Samaritans were a simple, credulous people, and in their amazement, they gave Simon the place which belongs to Christ. But when the evangel came, Simon himself was amazed for he could see that it was accompanied with a power such as he had never known. His case is an example of "faith" founded on miracles, which is very different from the faith which is based on God's word, apart from the evidence of the senses. Many believed in the Lord when they beheld the signs which He did, yet Jesus did not entrust Himself to them, because He knew what was in humanity (Jn.2 23-25).

<sup>4</sup> They indeed, then, who are dispersed, passed through, evangelizing the word. Now Philip, coming down into the city of Samaria, proclaimed Christ to them. Now the throngs with one accord heeded the things being said by Philip, on hearing them and observing the signs which he did. For many of those having unclean spirits, imploring with a loud voice, they came out. Now many who were paralytics and lame were cured.

<sup>8</sup> Now much joy came to be in that city.

<sup>12</sup> Now when they believe Philip preaching the evangel concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, men as well as women. Now Simon himself also believes, and, being baptized, was waiting on Philip. Besides, beholding the great signs and powers occurring, he is amazed.

<sup>14</sup> As our Lord told the woman at the well, salvation is of the Jews. And moreover, the twelve apostles were appointed to have jurisdiction over the whole land, including Samaria. Hence, holy spirit is not imparted to them except through the mediacy of the apostles. This is in marked contrast with the case of Cornelius and his friends, who received holy spirit without baptism or the laying on of hands. It is evident from this that physical affinity and miracles hinder rather than help the outflow of the spirit.

The exceptional dealing with the Samaritan believers, who were a circumcised people, is seen in the fact that, though repentant and baptized, they had not received the holy spirit upon these conditions as promised by Peter to the believers in Jerusalem (Ac.2<sup>38</sup>). The ancient schism must now end, and Samaria must acknowledge Jerusalem as God's earthly seat of government. The supreme gift can be bestowed only as they recognize their dependence on Peter and John as come down from Jerusalem.

<sup>18</sup> To this day men fondly imagine that spiritual gifts may be bought with money. One of the most delusive and disastrous notions in the church today is that a billion dollar budget will buy billions worth of spiritual benefit. God's gratuities are not sold to the best bidder; we cannot gain His grace with gold. Any effort to bribe Him can only bring down His displeasure. Would that there were more like Peter, who spurned the silver which sought to buy the benefits of the evangel! The church has sunk so low that it is eager to trade its blessings for sordid gain. Peter would lose prestige today if he would not take advantage of such an opportunity to add a goodly sum to the fund for the furtherance of the kingdom!

<sup>19</sup> Among the nations, in Paul's later ministries, the spirit is received on believing, without the intervention of apostles, or baptism, or laying on of hands (Eph.1<sup>13</sup>). And with the removal of such mediate causes, the effect of holy spirit's presence also changes. It is no longer manifest in signs which confirmed the coming of the kingdom, such as the gift of tongues and healing, but in the love, joy and peace which become God's dwelling place.

<sup>14</sup> Now the apostles in Jerusalem, hearing that Samaria has received the word of God, dispatch to them <sup>15</sup> Peter and John, who, descending, pray concerning them so that they may be obtaining holy spirit, <sup>16</sup> for it was not as yet fallen on any of them, only, having been baptized, they belonged to the name of <sup>17</sup> the Lord Jesus. Then they place their hands on them and they obtained holy spirit.

<sup>18</sup> Now Simon, perceiving that through the imposition of the hands of the apostles the spirit is being <sup>19</sup> given, offers them money, saying, "Give me also this authority, that on whomsoever I may be imposing hands, he may be obtaining holy spirit."

<sup>20</sup> Yet Peter said to him, "May your silver be for destruction together with you, seeing that you infer that the gratuity of God is to be acquired by means of money!

<sup>21</sup> There is neither part nor lot for you in this matter, for your heart <sup>22</sup> is not straight in front of God. Repent, then, from this evil of yours, and be beseeching the Lord, if, consequently, the notion of your <sup>23</sup> heart will be forgiven you. For I see you are in the bile of bitterness and the fetter of injustice."

<sup>24</sup> Now answering, Simon said, "You be beseeching the Lord for my sake so that none of the things you have declared may be coming on me."

<sup>25</sup> They indeed, then, who certify and speak the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem. They evangelized many of the villages of the Samaritans, besides.

<sup>26</sup> It is notable that the messenger, or angel, who spoke to Philip is also called "the spirit" (<sup>26</sup>) and "the spirit of the Lord" (<sup>28</sup>). This suggests that these expressions may refer to created beings in some places where we are accustomed to understanding it of the holy spirit of God. In order to leave the subject open and not inject our own opinions or prejudices it has been thought best to spell spirit always without a capital S. This will leave the matter open to the student's own interpretation.

<sup>27</sup> Ethiopia includes the country south of Egypt, of which the island of Meroe, in the upper Nile, was the chief center. The title, Candace, was usually given to the queens, who ruled in Ethiopia in ancient times. The eunuch must have been a proselyte of Judaism, to come all the way from Ethiopia to worship at Jerusalem. It seems strange that he should not have been reached with the evangel of Christ in the holy city, where the apostles still remained. It indicates the fact that Jerusalem and Judea are apostate, for this stranger is going away without knowing the One Who fulfilled the fifty-third of Isaiah. But where God has prepared such a reader and hearer of His word as this Ethiopian, He always sends His preacher.

The kingdom, when it is set up by Christ in the day of the Lord, will reach all the descendants of Noah's sons. In the early part of Acts they are evangelized representatively. The eunuch probably traced his lineage from Ham. Cornelius was a descendant of Japheth. The Jews, of course, sprang from Shem.

<sup>32</sup> Hezekiah, king of Judah, was the most beautiful type of Christ as the Vicarious Sufferer. The prophet Isaiah probably refers to his experience in the fifty-third chapter, in which are some statements which cannot be applied literally to the great Antitype. But the spirit charges the prophet's words with higher truth and deeper doctrine, so that Hezekiah's typical sufferings foretell the sufferings of His Lord.

<sup>27</sup> And rising, he was gone. And lo! a man, an Ethiopian eunuch, a potentate of Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who was over her entire exchequer, who had come, worshiping, to Jerusalem. And he was returning and sitting in his chariot, and read the prophet Isaiah.

<sup>29</sup> Now the spirit said to Philip, "Approach and join this chariot."

<sup>30</sup> Now Philip, running toward him, hears him reading Isaiah, the prophet, and said; "You surely <sup>31</sup> know what you are reading!" Yet he said, "How could I, should no one be guiding me?" And he entreats Philip, stepping up, to be <sup>32</sup> seated with him. Now the context of the scripture which he read was this:

"As a sheep to slaughter was He led,

And as a lamb in front of its shearer is not bleating,
Thus He is not opening His mouth.

Who will be relating His generation,

Seeing that His life is being taken away from the earth?"

<sup>34</sup> Now, answering, the eunuch said to Philip, "I am beseeching of you, concerning whom is the prophet saying this, concerning himself or concerning some different person?"

<sup>3</sup> The call of Saul is the most marvelous of all the manifestations of God's grace. It is a pattern for us who believe in this day of grace. He was the foremost of sinners, yet God made him the foremost of His saints. The grace of the Lord overwhelmed him, with faith and love in Christ Jesus (1Tim.1:12-16). The twelve apostles were called by the Lord on earth, before His ascension. Saul was called by the ascended glorified Lord from heaven. They were called in the land. He was called outside the land. Their ministry was confined to the land and the Hebrews of the dispersion. Paul's service was outside the land among the Hellenists and aliens. They were concerned with the earthly life of our Lord before His ascension. Paul begins with the Lord in glory.

<sup>4</sup> This is only a brief outline of what was said. The following combines the three accounts and probably includes all that passed between Saul and the Lord:

THE LORD: Saul, Saul why are you persecuting Me? It is hard for you to kick against the goads.

SAUL: Who art Thou, Lord?

THE LORD: I am Jesus, the Nazarene, Whom you are persecuting.

SAUL: What shall I do, Lord?

THE LORD: But rise and stand on your feet, for I was seen by you for this, to select you for a deputy and a witness of what you have perceived, as well as what will be seen by you, extricating you from the people and from the nations, to whom I am commissioning you, to open their eyes, to turn them from darkness to light, and the authority of Satan to God, for them to get the pardon of sins and an allotment among those who have been hallowed by faith that is in Me. Stand up and go into the city of Damascus, and there you will be spoken to concerning all which has been set for you to be doing.

<sup>7</sup> The apparent discrepancies between this verse and 22<sup>9</sup> are easily explained when we see that the vision was intended exclusively for Saul and

<sup>36</sup> Now as they went along the road they came to some water, and the eunuch is affirming, "Lo! Water! What is preventing me from being baptized?" And he orders the chariot to stand, and they both descended into the water, Philip as well as the eunuch, and he baptizes him. <sup>38</sup> Now when they stepped up out of the water, the spirit of the Lord snatches away Philip, and the eunuch perceived him no longer, for he went his way rejoicing.

<sup>9</sup> Now Saul, still breathing out threats and murder against the disciples of the Lord, approaching the chief priest, requests from him letters for Damascus to the synagogues, so that, if he should be finding some who are of the way, men as well as women, he may be leading them bound to Jerusalem.

<sup>3</sup> Now in his going he came to be nearing Damascus. Suddenly a light out of heaven flashes about him. And, falling on the earth, he hears a voice saying to him, "Saul, Saul, why are you persecuting Me?" Yet he said, "Who art Thou, Lord?" Yet He said, "I am Jesus Whom you are persecuting. Nevertheless, rise and be entering the city, and it will be spoken to you what you must be doing."

<sup>7</sup> Now the men who are journeying with him had stood dumbfounded, hearing, indeed, the sound, yet beholding no one. Now Saul was raised from the earth, yet, his eyes having been opened, he observed nothing. Now, leading him by the

not for his fellow travelers. They were probably a little distance away and heard a sound and saw a light, but did not see the Person Who was speaking or recognize the sound as His voice. At first they fell on their faces, but they rose before Saul. There is a close harmony rather than any discrepancy in the various accounts.

The call of Saul is an entirely novel departure in this book. It is the first exhibition of pure grace—favor shown to one who deserves punishment—and is the key to the character of the ministries of the apostle Paul which occupy the latter half of this treatise on the proclamation of the kingdom. After the failure of the testimony in Jerusalem and Judea, Saul is called to carry it to the dispersion among the nations and to the proselytes and even to the idolaters themselves. Hence it must be founded, not on righteousness, for they had no deserts, but on grace. So he is called outside the land, by the Lord from heaven, while he is still the most malignant enemy of the evangel and deserving of the direst doom.

10 God graciously gives a double witness to His dealing with Saul. Ananias is quite his opposite, being a devout disciple. Saul would have found it almost impossible to join the disciples as he did without some such confirmatory testimony to his conversion, for Ananias himself was afraid to go to him, knowing what he had done and what he proposed to do.

15 What grace and sovereignty is seen in terming the terrible persecutor of His people a "choice instrument"! God's choice is not like man's. He works His will in the face of human opposition. The most undeserving are the fittest instruments for the manifestation of His favor.

15 Here we have the field and scope of Paul's ministries—first and foremost to the nations, later to kings, and meanwhile to the sons of Israel among the nations.

16 Paul suffered more than any other apostle. Long before his course was completed he claimed to be foremost in this (2Co.11<sup>23-33</sup>). All who are faithful are sure to share in the privilege of suffering for Christ's sake (Phil. 1<sup>29</sup>).

hand, they led him into Damascus, and he was three days without using his eyes, and he neither ate nor drank.

10 Now there was a certain disciple in Damascus named Ananias, and the Lord said to him in a vision, "Ananias!" Now he said, "Lo! it is I, Lord!" Now the Lord to him, "Rise, go to the street called 'Straight,' and seek a Tarsian named Saul in the house of Judas, for, lo! he is praying, and perceived in a vision a man named Ananias entering and placing his hands on him so that he should be recovering sight."

13 Yet Ananias answered, "Lord, I hear from many concerning this man, how much evil he does to Thy saints in Jerusalem. And here he has authority from the chief priests to bind all who are invoking Thy name." Yet the Lord said to him, "Go, seeing that he is a choice instrument of Mine, to bear My name before the nations as well as kings, besides the sons of Israel, for I shall be intimating to him how much he must suffer for My name's sake."

17 Now Ananias came away and entered the house, and, placing his hands on him, said, "Brother Saul, the Lord, Jesus, Who was seen by you on the road by which you came, has commissioned me, so that you should be recovering sight and be filled with holy spirit." And immediately as if scales fall from his eyes, and he recovers sight. And rising, he is baptized, and, obtaining nourishment, is strengthened.

<sup>20</sup> The Jews in the synagogues must have been greatly astonished to find this emissary of the high priest, who had come hither to stamp out the heresy of the Nazarene, boldly proclaim that He is the Son of God. None of the other apostles ever proclaim the Messiah as the Son of God in the Acts. They are chiefly interested in Him as the Son of David (<sup>229,30</sup>), the King of Israel. But Saul has become acquainted with Him in a higher, heavenly glory, hence proclaims Him, in accord with his own experience, as the Son of God. Besides, he reasoned out of the Hebrew scriptures, which foretold the Messiah, and deduced from them that He Whom he had been persecuting and Who met him on the road was indeed the Anointed One, the hope of Israel.

<sup>23</sup> At this point occurs one of those striking omissions in the narrative which assure us that it is concerned only with the kingdom, and that Paul's epistles differ from it in purpose and scope. Paul passed a large part of three years in Arabia (Gal. 1<sup>17,18</sup>). This journey is included in the "considerable number of days". Where in Arabia he went is not revealed, in fact, the term itself is vague. He may have gone far south into the desert between the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf, which is properly called Arabia. He may have gone only a few miles from Damascus, and yet be in Arabia in the popular sense of the term. Wherever he went, and whatever he did, it is evident that it has no bearing on the narrative of Acts. Paul uses it in Galatians as evidence that he did not immediately consult those who were apostles before him, so could not have received his evangel from them. As Acts deals only with that aspect of his ministry which had contact with the commissions of the twelve, it is clear why this incident should be overlooked.

Now he came to be with the disciples in Damascus some days. And immediately he proclaimed Jesus in the synagogues, that He is the Son of God. Now all who are hearing are amazed and said, "Is not this the one who, in Jerusalem, ravages those who are invoking this Name? And he had come here for this, that he may lead them bound to the chief priests." Yet Saul was the more invigorated, and confused the Jews dwelling in Damascus, deducing that this One is the Christ.

<sup>23</sup> Now as a considerable number of days were fulfilled, the Jews plan to assassinate him. Yet their plot is known to Saul. Now they scrutinized the gates day as well as night, so that they may be assassinating him. Yet the disciples, getting him at night, let him down through the wall, lowering him in a hamper.

<sup>26</sup> Now, on coming along to Jerusalem, he tried to join the disciples, and all feared him, not believing that he is a disciple. Yet Barnabas, getting hold of him, led him to the apostles and relates to them how he became acquainted with the Lord on the road, and that He talks to him, and how, in Damascus, he is bold in the name of Jesus.

<sup>28</sup> And he was with them, going in and out, in Jerusalem. <sup>29</sup> Being bold in the name of the Lord Jesus, he talked as well as discussed with the Hellenists. Yet they take in hand

<sup>30</sup> Other details of Paul's stay in Jerusalem (not pertinent in this treatise) are interesting. Not only did the brethren lead him away, but the Lord Himself warned him to flee. While he was praying in the temple, in an ecstasy, the Lord urged him to hurry out of the holy city, because they would not receive his testimony (<sup>22:17-18</sup>). With the true tenacity of a Jew, Saul's heart's desire and petition to God for Israel was for their salvation (<sup>Ro.10:1</sup>). He would wish for nothing better than to be the instrument in God's hands to bring salvation to his own kith and kin. He did not yet understand God's greater purpose to bring salvation to the nations through their defection (<sup>Ro.11:11</sup>). It needed more than the entreaties of his brethren to make him leave Jerusalem, so God gives him a vision, reminding him of his commission for the nations afar.

Eneas means praise and his paralysis symbolizes the paralysis of praise in Israel. His healing is another taste of the powers of the age to come when Jerusalem shall be a praise in the earth (<sup>Isa.43:21</sup> <sup>62:7</sup> <sup>Jer.33:9</sup>). As Eneas presents to us the healing of the sinners of the people, so Dorcas shows the resurrection of the saints who have been full of good works (<sup>Un.14:18</sup>).

<sup>30</sup> to assassinate him. Now, realizing this, the brethren led him down into <sup>25</sup> Cæsarea, and they send him away <sup>31</sup> to Tarsus. Then, indeed, the ecclesia of the whole of Judea and Galilee and Samaria had peace, being edified, and, going on in the fear of the Lord and the consolation of the holy spirit, was multiplied.

<sup>32</sup> Now it occurred that Peter, passing through all, comes down also to the saints who are dwelling at Lydda. Now he found there a certain man named Eneas, eight years lying down on a pallet, who was paralyzed. And Peter said to him, "Eneas, Jesus Christ is healing you! Rise and spread [your pallet] by yourself!" And immediately he <sup>35</sup> rose. And all those dwelling at Lydda and Saron are aware of it, who turn back to the Lord.

<sup>36</sup> Now in Joppa there was a certain disciple named Tabitha, which, being interpreted, is termed Dorcas. She was full of good acts and <sup>37</sup> alms which she did. Now in those days, being infirm, she came to be dying. Now, bathing her, they place her in an upper chamber.

<sup>38</sup> Now, Lydda being near Joppa, the disciples, hearing that Peter is in it, dispatch two men to him, entreating, "You should not be slothful in coming to us!" Now Peter, rising, came with them, whom, coming along, they led up into the upper chamber. And beside him stand reign with Christ the thousand years (Un.20*). This was in the day time. But Eutychus' case comes before us at a time which corresponds with our resurrection. It is at night, before the darkness that precedes the dawn. He had no deserts that we know of. He was drowsing (20*). Nevertheless Paul brings him back to life (1Thes.5 10).

1 The kingdom has been proclaimed in Jerusalem and rejected; it has been heralded in Judea and Samaria, and now is being carried to the limits of the land. The Ethiopian proselyte has been reached by Philip. Now a Roman "proselyte of the gate" is brought before us in the person of Cornelius.

There were two classes of proselytes: the proselytes of righteousness and the proselytes of the gate. The former, by circumcision and conformation to the Jewish ritual, became incorporated into the Jewish people. The latter, called "fearers of God" or "the devout," renounced idolatry and acknowledged the God of Israel as the one true God, but were not circumcised and gave only scant heed to the ceremonial observances. Though highly esteemed, as Cornelius, they were regarded as outside the pale of Judaism, as "uncircumcised" and "of the nations." It was regarded as a crime for a Jew to enter the house of such a proselyte or to eat a meal with him.

Thus the kingdom message, as proclaimed by the twelve apostles, reaches its furthest limit in Cornelius. This accounts for the extraordinary pressure brought upon Peter, for none of the Jews thought that the proselyte of the gate was included in the kingdom commission. First the word was to the Jews only (including proselytes of righteousness), then the Hellenists are evangelized, followed by the despised Samaritans. Now that Cornelius is included, the original commission to the twelve (1<sup>8</sup>) is fulfilled. The twelve never went to the nations. That was reserved for the apostle Paul (Gal.2*).

As Cornelius was a Roman, descended from Japheth, and the eunuch was an Ethiopian, probably belonging to Ham, and the Jews were Shemites, all the sons of Noah were reached through their representatives. This was typical of the spread of the kingdom over all the widows lamenting and exhibiting tunics and garments, whatever Dorcas made while she was with them.

40 Now Peter, ejecting them all, and kneeling, prays. And, turning about to the body, he said, "Tabitha, rise!" Now she opens her eyes; 41 and, perceiving Peter, sits up. Now, giving her a hand, he raises her. Now, summoning the saints and the widows, he presents her alive.

42 Now it became known in the whole of Joppa, and many believe 43 on the Lord. Now it occurred that he remains a considerable number of days in Joppa with a certain Simon, a tanner.

10 Now a certain man in Cæsarea, named Cornelius, a centurion, of 2 the squadron called "Italian," devout and fearing God with his entire house, is doing many alms to the people and is beseeching God 3 continually. He perceived in a vision apparently, as if about the ninth hour of the day, a messenger of God entering toward him and 4 saying to him, "Cornelius!" Now, he, looking intently at him, and becoming affrighted, said, "What is it, lord?" Now he said to him, "Your prayers and your alms ascended for a memorial before God. 5 And now send men to Joppa and send after a certain Simon, who is 6 surnamed Peter. This man is lodging with a certain Simon, a tanner, whose house is beside the sea."

7 Now as the messenger who is speaking to him came away, sum-the whole earth when it will be set up in power at Christ's return. His dominion will include all the descendants of Noah's sons, and embrace all the families of the earth. His salvation will be known from sea to sea.

As the Romans despised the Jews, the signs of the operation of the spirit of God in Cornelius were very marked even before he called for Peter. Centurions were not naturally devout or in fear of God, nor did they give alms to the Jews or pray to God. Cornelius believed the scriptures or he would not have recognized Israel's supremacy. He knew God or he would not have prayed to Him continually. Hence the salvation here proclaimed to him was not prefaced by repentance. It was of the same nature as that which Peter proclaimed at Pentecost. It was a deliverance which insured his entrance into the kingdom.

According to Solomon's dedicatory petition (1Ki.8:41-43) that Jehovah should do all that the stranger who prayed toward His house should call for, Cornelius' prayers and alms come up for a memorial before God. Yet he must be taught that all his blessings come to him through Israel. Hence he is told to call for Peter. This is in direct antithesis to the present truth, for now, during Israel's apostasy, we get our blessings direct from God.

The location of Peter at the time is suggestive. The nations are often represented by the sea, and he had gone as far as he could on land for he was at the sea side. His hunger is typical of the hunger of God for the worship of all his creatures—not Israel alone, hence Peter is told to "sacrifice and eat." The ceremonially unclean animals must represent those among the nations whom God had cleansed. Hence we must regard Cornelius as one whom God had cleansed before Peter met him.

Peter, like all the Jews, was so prejudiced by birth and training that it was almost impossible for him to conceive of such a thing as having fellowship with a gentile, or even a proselyte of the gate, no matter how devout he might be. Henceforth the apostasy of Israel consists largely in refusing to be a channel of blessing to the nations. This led them to question Peter and persecute Paul.

moning two domestics and a devout soldier of those who waited on him, and unfolding it all to them, he dispatches them to Joppa.

Now on the morrow, while they are journeying and drawing near the city, Peter went up on the housetop to pray about the sixth hour of the day [noon]. Now he became ravenous and wanted to taste [food]. Now, while they are preparing it, an ecstasy came on him, and he is beholding heaven opened and a certain utensil descending, as a large sheet, with four edges, let down on the earth, in which belonged all the quadrupeds and reptiles of the earth and the flying creatures of heaven.

And a voice came to him, "Rise, Peter! Sacrifice and eat!" Yet Peter said, "Far be it from me, Lord, seeing that I never ate anything common and unclean!" And a second [time], a voice [came] to him again, "What God cleanses, do not you count common!" Now this occurred thrice, and immediately the utensil was taken up into heaven.

Now as Peter was bewildered in himself as to whatever the vision he perceived should be, lo! the men who have been dispatched by Cornelius, asking for the house of Simon, stand by at the portal. And, shouting, they inquired to ascertain if Simon, surnamed Peter, is lodging in this place.

Now, as Peter is engrossed with the vision, the spirit said to him, "Lo! three men are seeking you! But rise, descend and go with

The vision alone was not sufficient to break through the prejudice of Peter, for he could not make out what it meant. But the presence of the three men, who were ceremonially unclean, like the animals he had just seen in the vision, made his course clear. He dared not refuse to fellowship with them or disregard the call of Cornelius. The character of Cornelius was evidence that God had cleansed him. Peter could no longer class him as common or unclean. The fact that Cornelius gave of his means to the people of the covenant was much in his favor, for in the judgment of the nations which precedes the kingdom the nations are judged according to their treatment of the sons of Israel (Mt. 25<sup>31-46</sup>).

<sup>23</sup> The journey from Joppa to Cæsarea would lie along the sea shore. Thus Peter skirted the "limits of the land." The location of Cæsarea is doubtless typical also. Its geographical location corresponded with Cornelius' moral position. It was on the fringe of Judaism, near the outer gentile world.

<sup>23</sup> Later we learn that six brethren from Joppa accompanied Peter to Cæsarea. This was a prudent thing to do, for Peter well knew that he would have to defend his action in thus going against all Jewish precedent and prejudice. True, there was nothing in their scriptures which forbade all social intercourse with foreigners, but the apostles, as well as the other disciples, were bound by custom and tradition more firmly than by the divine revelation. In view of the storm of protest which was sure to arise, the six men accompany Peter so that they can confirm his account of the event.

<sup>24</sup> Cornelius seems to have carried many of his dependents and friends with him in his regard for the Jews and their religion. They also were in a measure prepared for Peter's message. They were not, like Paul's converts, turned from darkness to light and from idolatry to the worship of the true God. They already had much light and worshiped the God of Israel. So the proclamation to them is much the same as to the Jews.

<sup>30</sup> Cornelius calls the messenger, or angel, he had seen, a man. There is no warrant in scripture, for the pop-them, nothing doubting, seeing that I have commissioned them."

<sup>21</sup> Now Peter, descending to the men, said, "Lo! I am he whom you are seeking. What is the cause of your presence?" Now they say, "The centurion Cornelius, a just and God-fearing man, besides being borne witness to by the whole Jewish nation, is apprized by a holy messenger to send after you [to come] into his house, and to hear declarations from you." Calling them in, then, he lodges them.

Now on the morrow, on rising, he came away with them, and some of the brethren from Joppa came with him. Now on the morrow he entered Cæsarea. Now Cornelius was hoping for them, calling together his relatives and intimate friends. Now as Peter came to enter, Cornelius, meeting him, falling at his feet, worships. Yet Peter raises him, saying, "Rise, I myself also am a man." And, conversing with him, he entered, and finds many come together. "Besides," he averred to them, "you are versed in the fact how illicit it is for a man who is a Jew to be joined to or approach another tribe, and God shows me not to say that any man is common or unclean. Wherefore, being sent after, I came without gainsaying also. I am inquiring to ascertain, then, on what account you send after me."

<sup>30</sup> And Cornelius averred, "Four days ago at this ninth hour [three o'clock] I was fasting and praying ular idea that angels always have wings, like the cherubim. They usually appear in a human form.

<sup>31</sup> The conversion of Cornelius is not in accord with the truth for today. Salvation is not offered to those who have access to God in prayer, for such are already saved. It is for sinners, and the ungodly and God's enemies (Ro.5:1-11). It is not of works (Ro.11:6). Cornelius and his friends were acceptable to God because they feared Him and acted righteously, and this before Simon was sent to them. They occupied the place of the godly Israelite before Christ came. They lacked the pardon and gifts which came with the proclamation of the kingdom. These are now made theirs through the chief of the twelve apostles. Their blessing is connected with and depends on the blessing of Israel in the kingdom. Our blessing depends on the opposite. It follows Israel's apostasy. Cornelius is blessed in accord with the prophetic prediction concerning the nations in the kingdom, as it will be during the millennial eon. We are blessed in accord with a secret administration, of which the prophets knew nothing, which could not be revealed until after the kingdom proclamation had been heralded to the people and the proselytes like Cornelius.

<sup>34-35</sup> This statement teaches, not that the fear of God and righteous acts take the place of faith in Christ, but they take the place of Moses. Such as Cornelius who pant after the living God are candidates for the kingdom, but must hear the word of life in order to be saved (11:14). Such as Cornelius are they who will enter the kingdom when the nations are judged (Mt.25:34-36).

in my house, and lo! a man stood <sup>31</sup> before me in splendid attire, and he is averring, 'Cornelius, your prayer is hearkened to and your alms are brought to remembrance <sup>32</sup> before God. Send, then, into Joppa, and call for Simon, who is surnamed Peter. He is lodging in the house of Simon the tanner, beside the sea.' Forthwith, then, I send to you, and you do ideally in coming along. Now, then, we are all present before God to hear all that you have been bidden by the Lord."

<sup>34</sup> Now Peter, opening his mouth, said, "Of a truth I am grasping <sup>35</sup> that God is not partial, but in every nation he who is fearing Him and acting righteously is acceptable <sup>36</sup> to Him. Of the word He dispatches to the sons of Israel, preaching the evangel of peace through Jesus Christ (He is Lord <sup>37</sup> of all), you are aware. The declaration came down the whole of Judea, beginning from Galilee with the baptism which John proclaims: <sup>38</sup> Jesus from Nazareth, as God anoints Him with holy spirit and power, Who passed through as a benefactor and healer of all those who are tyrannized over by the Slanderer, seeing that God was with Him.

<sup>39</sup> And we are witnesses of all that He does in the country of the Jews and in Jerusalem: Whom they assassinate also, hanging Him on a tree.

Besides being a specimen of the future blessing of the believing nations in the kingdom, who will be rewarded according to their treatment of Israel, the case of Cornelius was undoubtedly divinely intended to bridge the almost impassable gap between the ministries of Peter and Paul, between the evangelists of the Circumcision and of the Uncircumcision. Here we see the blessings of the Circumcision given by God to those who are uncircumcised, and in such a way that His hand could not be doubted. Hence Peter claims (15<sup>7</sup>) that God chose him first to speak to the nations, and he was enabled to acknowledge Paul's commission to the Uncircumcision. Unless Peter had been so prepared, it would have been practically impossible for Paul to carry on his earlier ministries among the nations, for he would have had, not only the unbelieving Jews, but the disciples and the apostles themselves firmly set against his work. Paul did not confine himself to converts to Judaism, as Cornelius and his friends, but had a message of grace suited to idolaters who had never heard of the true God. Nevertheless the principle taught to Peter applied to them also, for God acknowledged them by spiritual gifts, which made it evident that He had cleansed them.

<sup>44</sup> At Pentecost the call to repent came to a people who had already rejected Jesus Christ. Peter says nothing of repentance to Cornelius (11<sup>18</sup>).

<sup>48</sup> By baptism they were united to the believing remnant in the nation of Israel, for the name used was the same (2<sup>38</sup>). It is evident, however, that this was a loose union, for the fact of their uncircumcision would bar them from the temple and from everything which the disciples had in common with the Jewish nation. In practice, even the social communion was always on a most doubtful and hesitating basis. Many of the disciples never would have fellowship with the Uncircumcision, and even Peter himself, after boldly defending his course with Cornelius, as well as the truth involved, was intimidated by the prevailing opposition, so that, at Antioch he first ate with the Uncircumcision and then withdrew and severed himself for fear of the party headed by James, the brother of the Lord (Ga.2<sup>11-12</sup>).

<sup>40</sup> This One God rouses the third day, and gives Him to become disclosed, <sup>41</sup> not to the entire people, but to witnesses who have been elected before by God, to us who ate and drank together with Him after His resurrection from among the dead. And He charges us to proclaim to the people and to certify that this One is He Who is specified by God to be Judge of the living and the dead.

<sup>45</sup> And as many of the faithful of the Circumcision as come with Peter were amazed, seeing that the gratuity of the holy spirit has been poured out on the nations also.

<sup>47</sup> Peter answered, "Can anyone forbid water, that anyone of these is not to be baptized, who obtained

<sup>48</sup> the holy spirit even as we?" Now he bids them be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. Then they ask him to stay some days:

11 Now the apostles and the brethren who are of Judea hear that the nations also receive the word of

2 God. Now when Peter went up into Jerusalem, those of the Cir-

3 cumcision doubted him, saying that, "You came in to uncircumcised men and ate with them!"

<sup>4</sup> So important is this new departure that Peter's rehearsal before his indignant brethren is given in full, for it removes the great obstacle which lay in the way of the further spread of the evangel. The commission which was received by the eleven from the Lord did not include the uncircumcised. They had made it known in Jerusalem and Judea and Samaria and the whole land of Israel, but only to the Circumcision. None of the disciples had any thought of proclaiming it to those of another nation even if they, like Cornelius, were devout and God-fearing men. This conclusion proves that the Pentecostal ecclesia did not include a single one of the Gentiles, but absolutely excluded all except those of Jewish blood. They could not, of course, exclude the Hellenists, or Jews who leaned to Greek culture, for they were not Greeks, but circumcised Israelites.

Neither may we take the case of Cornelius as the beginning of the evangel to the nations, as such. We do not find that this case was followed up by the evangelization of the Uncircumcision in the land. Indeed, it seems to have had no effect at all in this direction. After the death of Stephen and the following persecution, the disciples spoke to none but the Jews only (<sup>10</sup>). And when some of the foreign Jews spoke to the Greeks at Antioch, outside the land, it is most probable that they, like Cornelius, were proselytes in that lesser degree which was called a proselyte of the gate. The first time the evangel was proclaimed to the idolaters was probably the case of Sergius Paul, proconsul of Cyprus (<sup>13</sup> 7), or Paul's preaching to the people of Lystra (<sup>14</sup> 7). Throughout his early ministries, however, Paul not only went into the synagogues and preached to the Jews first, but he also spoke to the devout and God-fearing proselytes, like Cornelius, before going out to the Uncircumcision. Such converts from Judaism formed the nucleus of most of the ecclesias founded by him so far as their Gentile contents were concerned. See 13<sup>48</sup>, 14<sup>1</sup>, Lydia 16<sup>14</sup>, 17<sup>4</sup>, 12, 18<sup>4</sup> (contrast <sup>6</sup>) and Justus 7. The gentiles were a distinct class.

<sup>5</sup> it to them consecutively, saying, "I was in the city of Joppa, praying, and I perceived, in an ecstasy, a vision, a certain utensil descending, as a large sheet with four edges, let down out of heaven, and it came as <sup>6</sup> far as me, into which, intently looking, I considered and perceived the quadrupeds of the earth and the wild beasts and the reptiles and the
<sup>7</sup> flying creatures of heaven. Now, I hear a voice also, saying to me, 'Rise, Peter! Sacrifice and eat!'
<sup>8</sup> Yet I said, 'Far be it from me, Lord, seeing that a thing common or unclean never entered into my <sup>9</sup> mouth!' Yet the voice answered a second [time] out of heaven, 'What God cleanses, do not you
<sup>10</sup> count common!' Now this occurred thrice, and it is all pulled up again into heaven.

<sup>11</sup> And lo! forthwith three men stand by at the house in which we were, having been dispatched from
<sup>12</sup> Caesarea to me. Now the spirit said to me to come together with them, nothing doubting. Now these six brethren also came with me, and we entered into the man's house.

<sup>13</sup> Now he reports to us how he perceived the messenger standing in his house and saying, 'Dispatch to Joppa and send after Simon, who is
<sup>14</sup> surnamed Peter, who will be speaking declarations to you by which you shall be saved, and your entire house.'

<sup>15</sup> Now as I begin to speak, the holy spirit falls on them, even as on us never went beyond the Jews. Now as the gospel comes to this gentile proselyte the baptism of spirit takes precedence over that in water, and is Peter's justification for giving Israel's rite to this gentile.

<sup>17</sup> The constant tendency, in this scroll, from the physical to the spiritual, is well illustrated by the gifts given to Cornelius and his friends, as a sign of their acceptance by God. The sign of the covenant, circumcision, was in the flesh. The lack of this excluded them from the blessings of the kingdom. In Israel, the spirit followed the bathing of their physical frames in the rite of baptism. But the Lord Himself baptizes these uncircumcised aliens in spirit before they are baptized in water. The spirit supersedes and governs the physical rite. In the case of these proselytes the rite of baptism followed the reception of the spirit (Ac.16<sup>15</sup> Ro.6<sup>3</sup> 1Co.12<sup>14-16</sup>), because of their association with Judaism, but it does not seem to have been universally administered in the case of non-proselytes (1Co.12<sup>17</sup>, Eph.4<sup>5</sup>, Col.2<sup>12</sup>).

<sup>19</sup> We are now entering a new sphere, just outside the land of Israel. Driven out of Jerusalem and Judea, the disciples spread the proclamation among their Jewish brethren, utterly ignoring the gentile proselytes, even though they knew of the case of Cornelius. Some of them, however, were foreign Jews, who had come into closer contact with the gentiles. These, acting on the case of Cornelius, spoke to the Greeks, who may have been the first of the nations to believe. In this way a new center was formed for the evangel. It consisted largely of uncircumcised aliens who had been proselytes. From this new base it was that the evangel went forth and eventually reached the idolaters among the nations, giving them a subordinate place in the kingdom. It continued until Paul went to Rome, from which he sent forth the special truth for the present economy.

<sup>22</sup> The Jerusalem disciples were most of them full of zeal for the law and the ritual, but Barnabas was full of holy spirit and faith, and thus was in line with God's purposes.

<sup>25</sup> Barnabas knew that Saul's commission was to the nations, hence he discerned that Antioch was the very field suited to his call.

as He said that 'John, indeed, baptizes in water, yet you shall be baptized in holy spirit.' If, then, God gives them the equal gratuity as to us also, when believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I—able to forbid God?"

<sup>18</sup> Now on hearing these things, they quiet down, and glorify God, saying, "Consequently God gives repentance unto life to the nations also!"

<sup>19</sup> Those indeed, then, who are dispersed from the affliction which is occurring about Stephen, passed through as far as Phœnicia and Cyprus and Antioch, speaking the word to no one except to Jews only.

<sup>20</sup> Now some of them were Cyprian men, and Cyrenians, who, coming into Antioch, spoke to the Greeks also, preaching the evangel of the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them. Besides, a vast number who believe turn back to the Lord.

<sup>22</sup> Now the account of them is heard in the ears of the ecclesia which is in Jerusalem, and they

<sup>23</sup> delegate Barnabas to Antioch, who, coming along and perceiving the grace of God, rejoiced and entreated all with purpose of heart to be

<sup>24</sup> remaining in the Lord—seeing that he was a good man and full of holy spirit and faith. And a considerable throng was added to the Lord.

<sup>25</sup> Now he came away to Tarsus to hunt Saul; and finding him, he led him to Antioch. Now it came that they assemble a whole year, also, in the ecclesia and teach a considerable throng. Besides, in Antioch firstly the disciples are styled "Christians."

<sup>26</sup> The name "Christian" is Latin in its termination, so seems to have been given by the Romans. It is mentioned only twice more (26<sup>28</sup>; 1 Pet. 4<sup>16</sup>), and was a term of contempt. It is never used by the saints of themselves, though there are hundreds of passages where we would use the term today. The name probably arose from the fact that here, for the first time, gentiles, Romans, left the worship of the synagogue for the faith of Christ. They would be continually speaking of one "Christ" and their countrymen gave them this new name in derision. Paul never uses this term. Peter alone uses it of his fellow saints of the Circumcision who believed.

<sup>29</sup> What could have been better calculated to soften the hearts of the Judean disciples than the help thus received from these uncircumcised converts? Yet we never read that they ever relented in their antagonism to the alien believers, and certainly gave little consideration to Saul, who brought their gifts to them. It is not likely, however, that Saul went as far as Jerusalem with the contribution, for, in his Galatian epistle, he intimates that he did not visit the holy city for fourteen years after his return from Damascus. The reason seems to be that there was a persecution on the part of Herod, as well as a famine in Jerusalem, so that it was not prudent to enter the city. This is the first occasion in which the saints among the nations sought to make some payment to Israel for the spiritual gifts they had received (Ro. 15<sup>27</sup>).

<sup>1</sup> The failure of the nation to respond to the proclamation of the kingdom is fully manifest, and it is reflected in the events now chronicled. The twelve are no longer sustained by divine power in the city of the King. Herod puts James to death and there is no effort made to fill his place and maintain the due number of the apostles. That James, rather than Peter or John, was taken is significant, for they are typical men. James, or Jacob, brings before us the nation in flesh, and, as this aspect of the kingdom proclamation has failed and is finished, he is removed. Peter (not Simon) was a spiritual name (Jn. 1<sup>42</sup>), representative of the remnant who believed. He is persecuted, but not slain.

<sup>29</sup> Now according as any of the disciples thrived, they each of them designate something to send to the brethren dwelling in Judea, for dispensing, which they do also, dispatching to the elders through the hand of Barnabas and Saul. 12: 35

<sup>12</sup> Now at that season Herod the king put forth his hands to illtreat some from the ecclesia. Now he assassinated James, the brother of John, with the sword. Now, perceiving that it is pleasing to the Jews, he proceeded to apprehend Peter also (now they were the days of unleavened [bread]), whom, arresting also, he placed in jail, giving him over to four quaternions of soldiers to guard him, intending after the Passover to lead him up to the people.

<sup>5</sup> Peter, indeed, then, was kept in the jail, yet prayer was earnestly made by the ecclesia to God concerning him. Now when Herod was about to be leading him to them, in that night Peter was reposing between two soldiers, having been bound with two chains, besides which guards before the

The apostasy of the Jewish nation was attested by the death of James. Instead of mourning the fact that one of the apostles of the Messiah was put to death, they are pleased. They prefer the yoke of their hereditary enemy, the Idumean Herod, to the Messiah God had sent them. So will the apostate nation in the time of the end rejoice at the murder of God's two witnesses (Un.11).

It was contrary to Jewish custom to carry on a trial during the national festivals, so Herod was waiting until the passover week should be over. Then he would increase his popularity by making a public exhibition of Peter's trial and death.

The Lord had told Peter that, when he should be old and decrepit he would glorify God by his death (Jn.21<sup>18</sup>). That time had not yet come. No power on earth can touch God's servants before the appointed time.

The deliverance of Peter should be contrasted with that of Paul and Silas at Philippi. This will show the vast advance in Paul's ministry over that of the twelve. Peter's deliverance illustrates the power and stern righteousness associated with the kingdom. The grace and salvation revealed in Philippi is in closer accord with that which is ours in Christ Jesus. Peter slept. Paul and Silas, suffering from the Roman scourge and the stocks, sang praises and prayed. Peter was taken out by stealth unknown to the guards. Paul and Silas made no attempt to escape, even when the prison doors were open. The prisoners heard them, and the warden was saved by their testimony. Peter's escape did not bring salvation to his keepers. It brought death, for his guards had to pay with their lives for his. Peter flies from Jerusalem from the face of Herod. Paul and Silas are escorted out of the jail and through the city by the officers who had mistreated them. In every particular, the deliverance of Paul and Silas eclipses the escape of Peter. One figures Israel's deliverance by judgment on the nations, the other the salvation which comes through the temporary setting aside of Israel.

<sup>7</sup> door kept the jail. And lo! a messenger of the Lord stood by, and a light shines in the room. Now, smiting Peter on the side, he rouses him, saying, "Rise quickly!" And the chains fall off from his <sup>8</sup> hands. Now the messenger said to him, "Gird yourself and bind on your soles." Now he does thus. And he is saying to him, "Throw your cloak about you and follow <sup>9</sup> me." And, coming out, he followed him. And he had not perceived that what is occurring by means of the messenger is true, yet he seemed to be observing a vision.

<sup>10</sup> Now, passing through the first and second jail, they come to the iron gate that brings them into the city, which opened to them spontaneously. And, coming out, they came forward one street, and immediately the messenger withdrew <sup>11</sup> from him. And Peter, coming to himself, said, "Now I truly perceive that the Lord delegates His messenger, and extricates me out of the hand of Herod and all the hope of the Jewish people."

<sup>12</sup> And, being conscious, he came to the house of Mary, the mother of John who is surnamed Mark, where a considerable number were convened together and praying.

<sup>17</sup> The death of James and the escape of Peter mark a crisis in the history of the kingdom proclamation. The power in Jerusalem passes out of the hands of the apostles into the hands of James, the Lord's brother. Note that Peter does not ask them to report to the rest of the apostles, but to James and the brethren. Henceforth these have the controlling voice in Jerusalem. The death of James broke the ranks of the apostles. Now there were only eleven. Peter was compelled to flee and John does not seem to have taken an active part.

It is most significant that the leadership now falls upon one who was never commissioned by the Lord, but held his place and wielded his influence on the ground of a close physical relationship to the Lord. While He was yet on earth none of his brothers or sisters believed in Him. Our Lord made light of such physical ties. To those who told Him that His mother and brothers wished to speak to Him He said "These who are hearing and doing the word of God are my mother and My brethren" (Lu.8<sup>21</sup>). But the believers in Jerusalem have drifted away from spiritual realities and give the Lord's own brother the place which He gave to the apostles. James early had a high place among the Jerusalem saints. Paul makes special mention of him when he went up to Jerusalem (Ga.1<sup>19</sup>). This is in marked contrast to the course of Paul, which is characterized by the gradual elimination of the physical and a strong tendency toward the spiritual.

<sup>20</sup> Josephus' account of Herod's death agrees with this in all its main features, though he does not seem to know of the reason for the flattery, nor does he ascribe the disease to a messenger of the Lord. In accepting divine honors Herod becomes a type of the great dictator of the end time, who will set himself up, saying that he is God, and will be slain by the Lord Himself.

stoutly insisted it is so. Yet they said, "It is his messenger."

Now, opening, they perceive him

<sup>17</sup> and were amazed. Yet, gesturing with a hand to them to hush, he relates to them how the Lord led him out of the jail. Besides he said, "Report these things to James and the brethren." And, coming out, he was gone to a different place.

<sup>18</sup> Now, day being come, there was no slight disturbance among the soldiers as to what became of Peter.

<sup>19</sup> Now Herod, seeking for him and not finding him, examining the guards, orders them to be led away [to death]. And, coming down from Judea, he tarried in Cæsarea.

<sup>20</sup> Now he was in a fighting fury with the Tyrians and Sidonians, yet, with one accord, they were present with him, and, persuading Blastus, the king's chamberlain, they requested peace, because their country was nurtured from the

<sup>23</sup> a man!" Now instantly a messenger of the Lord smites him, because he gives not the glory to God, and, becoming the food of worms, he gives up his soul.

2 The severance of Barnabas and Saul by the spirit is the prelude to an entirely new departure in the book of Acts. The commission entrusted to the twelve apostles has been fulfilled and their testimony rejected. They went to the limits of the land of Israel. Beyond this they were not sent. Jerusalem, in Judea, now gives place to Antioch, outside the land. The message now goes to the dispersion among the nations and to the proselytes and even to the nations themselves, and continues until it becomes manifest that the Jews outside the land refuse the Messiah, even as those in the land have done. This ministry is carried on by an entirely new set of apostles. The twelve have no part in it. Saul, or Paul, as he is now called, takes the place of Peter in this new apostolic group.

2 The choice of Barnabas and Saul by the spirit is in marked contrast with the choice of James, the brother of our Lord, by the flesh. He leads the apostasy of the pentecostal believers, who insisted on circumcision and law keeping. He was the author of decrees, which were concerned only with the flesh. This new departure takes us in the opposite direction. Saul was chosen by the spirit and led by the spirit until, at length, in his epistles, he gives the flesh no place at all.

6 Sergius Paul was the first individual among the nations who heard the evangel, without first becoming a proselyte of Judaism. Hence his case is typical. Bar-Jesus stands for the Jewish dispersion, who always resisted every attempt to proclaim the evangel to the nations. Seldom, indeed, do we find Paul performing any judgment miracle, but here he blinds the sorcerer for a season. This is the judgment which has befallen Israel during the present administration of God's grace. Israel, in part, has become calloused until the full complement of the nations may be entering (Ro. 11<sup>25</sup>). Throughout Paul's missionary journeys, when he turned from the unbelieving Jews to the nations, the Jews became jealous and sought to turn the gentiles against him. They became blind spiritually, as Bar-Jesus became physically.

accord with the ecclesia, prophets and teachers, Barnabas as well as Simeon, called Niger, and Lucius the Cyrenian, besides Manaen, the tetrarch Herod's foster brother, and

2 Saul. Now, at their ministering to the Lord and fasting, the holy spirit said, "By all means sever to Me Barnabas and Saul for the work to which I have called them." Then, fasting and praying and placing their hands on them, they dismiss them. Paul's 1st trip begins. Ends 14, 26

4 They, indeed, then, being sent forth by the holy spirit, came down to Seleucia, and from thence they sail away to Cyprus. And, coming to be in Salamis, they announced the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. Now they had John also as deputy.

6 Now, passing through the whole island up to Paphos, they found a certain man, a magician, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-Jesus, who was with the proconsul Sergius Paul, an intelligent man. He, calling for Barnabas and Saul, seeks to hear the word of God.

8 Now Elymas the "Magician" (for thus is his name construed) withstood them, seeking to pervert the proconsul from the faith. Now Saul, who is also Paul, being filled with holy spirit, looking intently at him, said, "O, full of all guile and all knavery, son of the Slanderer, enemy of all righteousness, will you not cease perverting the straight ways of the Lord? And now, lo!

The spiritual tendency we have observed is emphasized by the change of Saul's name to Paul. The name Saul suggested the first king in Israel, who was chosen by the people because of his physical superiority, well suited to Paul before he was called by Christ, and in accord with the trend of affairs in Jerusalem, but not at all in harmony with his present ministry. It is usually derived from the Latin, meaning little, but it may also be derived from the root pau, in Greek, which means an interval, the ending, of course taking the masculine form rather than the feminine of the ordinary Greek term. Saul is Hebrew; Paul is Greek. This change of name coincides with his new commission. This signification is most appropriate to his special ministries, which fill in the interval during which Israel is thrust aside. It is brought in for the first time at the precise point when this doom is pronounced on Bar-Jesus. It marks the beginning of God's new departure, which brings blessing to the nations through Israel's apostasy. It was given when the first real gentile believed, for all before Sergius Paul were proselytes of Judaism, like Cornelius. And it is the more remarkable that the first convert under these new conditions was also named Paul, because he inaugurates that new form of God's activities which is well pictured there by the blessed believing gentile and a blinded unbelieving Jew. Before Saul's severance, blessing could not flow except through a Jew. Samaria could not receive the spirit except through Peter and John (8<sup>14</sup>), and the proselyte Cornelius needed the mediacy of the chief of the apostles ere he was blessed with this gift. But now an alien, having no connection with Judaism, believes and is blessed, while a Jew, a son of the covenant, is blinded. This new principle now governs God's dealings, introducing a new dispensation, and gathers force until it is fulfilled at the close of the book.

<sup>13</sup> John, doubtless, was at fault in thus deserting the apostles. But there seems to be a deeper reason for his defection. Being from Jerusalem, and a nephew of Barnabas, he represented the weakness of the flesh and its inability to channel blessing to the nations, hence was not qualified.

the Lord's hand is on you, and you will be blind, not observing the sun until the appointed time. Now instantly a fog and darkness falls on him, and, going about, he sought some to lead him by the hand.

<sup>12</sup> Then the proconsul, perceiving what has occurred, believes, being astonished at the teaching of the Lord.

<sup>14</sup> Now they, passing through from Perga, came along into Antioch, Pisidia, and entering the synagogue the day of the sabbaths, they are seated. Now, after the reading of the law and the prophets, the chiefs of the synagogue dispatch to them, saying, "Men, brethren, if there is in you any word of entreaty for the people, say it."

<sup>16</sup> Now Paul, rising and gesturing with his hand, said, "Men, Israelites, and those who are fearing God, hear! The God of this people Israel chooses our fathers, and He exalts the people in the sojourn in the land of Egypt, and with a high arm He led them out of it. And for about forty years' time He carries them as a nurse in the wilderness.

<sup>19</sup> And, pulling down seven nations in the land of Canaan, He occupies their land (about four hundred and fifty years). And after this He gives judges till the prophet Samuel. And thence they request a king, and God gives them Saul, <sup>14</sup> Paul's sermon and course in Pisidian Antioch is doubtless a specimen case. He usually went first of all into the synagogue and preached the evangel of the kingdom to the Jews of the dispersion and to the gentile proselytes who attended the synagogue services. His sermons included all that Peter preached concerning Messiah as the Son of David, yet went further in order to reach the proselytes. The three classes to whom Paul preached should always be distinguished. There were the men of Israel, his brethren, who were under the law and to whom the covenants and promises pertained. But the synagogues amongst the nations were largely attended by proselytes, who are called "fearers of God," "devout," or "reverent," and usually included a company of women. The proselytes, as a class, accepted Paul's message, but the Jews rejected it, with many notable exceptions. Outside of these were the gentiles proper, the idolators who had no leanings toward Judaism. Among these it was that Paul found the greatest response, but it must be remembered that this account does not lay much stress on this part of his ministry. For instance, it is evident from his epistles that the Thessalonian converts were mostly idolators, yet no hint of this is found in Acts, which speaks only of the Jews and proselytes (17:4). Neither are we informed of all that the apostle preached, but only that which concerned the fate of the earthly kingdom. The doctrine contained in his epistles is none of it in Acts, but all is distinct from and above the highest point reached in this treatise. To the Jews Paul spoke of Christ as proclaimed by John the Baptist, and His life before His death and resurrection and ascension, before he knew Him. Paul's epistles, however, are entirely on resurrection ground. Christ was not seen outside the land of Israel until he was seen by Saul on the Damascus road. Let us never mix the testimony in Acts with the truth in Paul's epistles, but let us rather note the great contrast between them. Contrast Peter's first sermon and Paul's. Both quote from David. Peter to prove that Jesus is David's exalted Son (2:30-31). Paul shows by his first quotation (13:33) that Jesus is the Son of God.

son of Kish, a man out of the tribe of Benjamin, forty years.

<sup>22</sup> And, deposing him, He rouses up David for their king, to whom He said also, in testifying, 'I found David, of Jesse, a man according to My heart, who will be doing all <sup>23</sup> My will.' From this one's seed God, according to the promise, led to Israel the Saviour, Jesus.

<sup>24</sup> John's pre-proclamation, before His personal entrance, was the baptism of repentance to the entire <sup>25</sup> people of Israel. Now, as John completed his career, he said, 'I am not what you are suspecting me to be. But lo! One is coming after me the sandal of Whose feet I am not worthy to loose.'

<sup>29</sup> Now as they accomplish all that which has been written concerning Him, taking Him down from the <sup>30</sup> tree, they place Him in a tomb. Yet God rouses Him from among the <sup>31</sup> dead: Who was seen more days by those who ascended with Him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are now His witnesses to the people.

<sup>32</sup> And we are preaching to you the evangel which comes to be a promise

<sup>33</sup> The rendering first psalm in place of second psalm demands some explanation. Our three great witnesses all read second, and we would have so rendered it, but for the confusion which would result when we come to issue the book of Psalms. There is no longer any question that the first and second psalms of our collection are in reality only one, and this quotation occurs in the first not the second psalm. Some ancient manuscripts preserve this reading. But it was generally changed to conform to the condition of the Greek version of the Hebrew scriptures. In the Hebrew text of the psalms the text reads right on without any break to indicate the division into psalms except the headings and subscriptions. Consequently it has been discovered that each psalm is thus indicated, and those psalms which have no heading or subscription to separate them are fragments of adjoining psalms. Thus the second psalm, so-called, is not an independent composition, but the conclusion of the first psalm.

<sup>34</sup> Here we have the first intimation of the great doctrine of justification or acquittal. But how far below the lofty teaching revealed in the epistle to the Romans! There justification is apart from the law: here it is associated with the law. True to the kingdom he has just announced, Paul proclaims the pardon of sins. But pardon or forgiveness is but a temporary respite which may be forfeited or withdrawn (Mt. 18<sup>23, 35</sup>). Those Pentecostal believers who had been forgiven like the ten thousand talent debtor, yet refused to extend this blessing to the gentiles, who owed much less, had their pardon revoked.

Now, however, the apostle offers them more than pardon. Those who were pardoned still tried to keep the law of Moses (21<sup>20</sup>). He promises an acquittal from their infractions of the law, on the ground of faith. Pardon takes guilt for granted. Justification or acquittal denies guilt. They mingle here for a moment, but in Paul's epistles those who are justified are beyond the necessity of any pardon, for they are pronounced not guilty. The contrast between Moses and Christ is made first by Paul, and in connection with the preaching of justification.

<sup>33</sup> to the fathers, that God has fully fulfilled this for our children, in raising Jesus, as it is written in the first psalm also, 'My Son art Thou;

<sup>34</sup> today have I begotten Thee.' Now, seeing that He raises Him from among the dead by no means longer about to return to decay, He has thus declared, that 'I shall be giving you the faithful benig-nities of

<sup>35</sup> David.' Wherefore, in a different place also, He is saying, 'Thou wilt not be giving Thy Benign One to be acquainted with decay.' For David, indeed, subserving his own generation, by God's counsel was put to repose, and was added to his fathers, and was acquainted with <sup>37</sup> decay, yet He Whom God rouses was not acquainted with decay.

<sup>38</sup> Let it be known to you, then, men, brethren, that through this One is being announced to you <sup>39</sup> the pardon of sins, and from all from which you could not be justified in the law of Moses, everyone who is believing in this One is being justified.

<sup>40</sup> Beware, then, that what is declared in the prophets may not be coming on you: 'Lo! you despisers, and marvel and disappear! seeing that I am working a work in your days—a work which you should by no means be believing if anyone should be detailing it to you.'''

<sup>42</sup> Now, at their being out, they entreated that these declarations be spoken to them on the intervening <sup>43</sup> sabbath. Now the synagogue being broken up, many of the Jews and reverent proselytes follow Paul and Barnabas, who, speaking to them, persuaded them to remain in the grace of God.

44 This is the first time we have the evangel preached to the nations directly except the single case of Sergius Paul. Never before this have we any intimation that the word was spoken to any except Jews, Samaritans, or proselytes. Now that the whole city came to hear the word, the Jews, following the example of Bar-Jesus, oppose Paul and Barnabas. Not till then do we hear the memorable words, "lo! we are turning to the nations."

48 It would be of greatest interest to us to know what Paul preached to the gentiles on this occasion, but there is no record of his words. The reason doubtless is that he went beyond the kingdom proclamation and announced, for the first time, the grand foundation on which God's favor to the nations is based, the doctrine of justification. His previous proclamation was hampered by the fact that his hearers were under the law. Now he is able to set it forth fully and freely as he does in his epistle to the Romans, for his audience is not seeking any justification under law. He announces a divine righteousness, apart from the law.

While there can be little doubt that the apostle preached justification on this occasion in some of the fulness to which his epistles testify, yet it is of the utmost importance for us to note that the account in Acts never attains to the truth taught in his epistles. It leads us up to some of it but never makes actual contact with it. It prepares for it but does not proclaim it. Not one single doctrine for the present secret economy is found in the book of Acts, though all was made known and committed to writing during this period. We are continually led up to, but never enter into the grace which is ours in Christ Jesus. Acts is not a record of the beginning of the present, but a treatise on the end of the previous dispensation. Most of the ecclesiastical confusion which prevails would vanish if this record of the kingdom apostasy were left where it belongs, and all truth for the present based on Paul's written revelation, which deals with the same period of time, but deals with it from an entirely distinct standpoint. God's program is, some Jews, some gentiles; then all Jews and all gentiles.

44 Now on the coming sabbath almost the entire city was assembled
45 to hear the word of the Lord. Yet the Jews, perceiving the throngs, are filled with jealousy, and they contradicted what is spoken by Paul, 46 blaspheming. Being bold, Paul as well as Barnabas say, "It was necessary for the word of God to be spoken first to you. Yet, since, in fact, you are thrusting it away, and are judging yourselves unworthy of eonian life, lo! we are turning to the nations. For thus the Lord has directed us: 18:6

'I have appointed you for a light of the nations;
For you to be for salvation to the limits of the earth.'

48 Now, on hearing this, the nations rejoiced and glorified the word of the Lord, and as many as were set for eonian life believe.

49 Now the word of the Lord was carried through the whole country.
50 Yet the Jews spur on the reverent, respectable women, and the foremost ones of the city and rouse up persecution for Paul and Barnabas, and they ejected them from their boundaries. Now, shaking the dust off their feet against them, they came 51 to Iconium. And the disciples were filled with joy and holy spirit.

14 Now in Iconium the same thing occurred. They enter into the synagogue of the Jews, and so speak that a vast multitude of Jews as well as Greeks believe. Yet the stubborn Jews rouse up and provoke the souls of the nations against
2 the brethren. They, indeed, then,

<sup>6</sup> Lystra seems to be the first place Paul preached without first proclaiming to the Jews in the synagogue, for it seems that there were not enough Jews to have a place of worship. Hence this is the first time the evangel is preached to the gentiles, apart from Judaism altogether. Here we reach the limit of his journey as well as the moral limits of the evangel. It has now broken through all barriers. From being preached to the "Jews only" (11<sup>19</sup>) it has not only reached gentile proselytes and idolaters through the synagogue, but it has gone outside the pale and influence of Judaism, and won its way to the hearts of the far off foreigners.

<sup>8</sup> The contrast between the ministries of Peter and Paul is reflected in their acts. The lame man at the gate of the temple (32-8) was near the dwelling place of God, the source of all blessing. The lame man of Lystra was far off. Neither had ever walked, but the former, picturing the privileged people of God, was carried by his friends. Even the manner of their salvation was different. Peter reached out his hand and lifted the lame man to his feet. Paul did not need to touch the Lystrian, for he leaped up and walked.

<sup>11</sup> It was commonly believed among the ancients, that the gods visited the earth at times in human form, but more especially those places which were devoted to their worship. Lystra seems to have been under the protection of Zeus, for one of his priests resided before the city. Zeus was usually attended by Hermes, the messenger of the gods. Subsequent revelation suggests that, in a very real sense, the Lycaonians were not much mistaken in their estimate of Paul. He was indeed the messenger of the true God, visiting the earth for a time. The Greek gods were in reality demon spirits who had usurped the authority of the air, who, with Satan, are to be cast out of their heavenly habitations when the kingdom is set up. Paul, together with those who receive the grace which comes through him, will replace them and rule the celestial realms, as the body of Christ. So that the Lycaonians were not far wrong, and we may take their words as prophetic of the grace which God was about to reveal (Ga.4:14).

tarry a considerable time, being bold in the Lord, Who is witnessing to the word of His grace, granting signs and miracles to occur through their hands.

<sup>4</sup> Now the multitude of the city is rent: and some, indeed, were with the Jews, yet some with the apostles. Now as there came to be an onset of the nations as well as the Jews, together with their chiefs, to outrage and pelt them with

<sup>6</sup> stones, being conscious of it, they fled for refuge into the cities of Lycaonia, Lystra and Derbe, and the

<sup>8</sup> And there sat a certain man in Lystra, impotent in the feet, lame from his mother's womb, who never

<sup>9</sup> walks. This one hears Paul speaking, who, looking intently at him, and perceiving that he has faith to

<sup>10</sup> be saved, said in a loud voice, "Rise erect on your feet!" And he leaps and walked.

<sup>15</sup> In speaking to idolaters in Lystra and Athens, Paul does not appeal to the Hebrew scriptures, for they knew nothing of God's written revelation. He appeals to them through God the Creator and Sustainer, as revealed in nature.

<sup>19</sup> God has a way of giving his servants a vision of the end at the beginning, to sustain them in the trials on the way. Joseph knew God's purpose for him and was prepared for the pit and the prison, for he realized that these led to the throne. So, we may well believe, God made known to the apostle Paul his purposes of grace for the nations long before Paul made them public from Rome. And what time would be so opportune as this, when the evangel for the first time is carried directly to the nations? Indeed, about fourteen years later, Paul seems to refer to his stoning at Lystra as the time when he received his greatest visions and revelations, which he was not allowed to publish until his kingdom ministry in Acts was brought to a close. Such a revelation must have been made in a setting calculated to reveal God's grace. And what occasion compares with this? Let us remember that Paul was stoned but once (2Co.11<sup>25</sup>) and this by the gentiles just as soon as the evangel breaks through to them. The Jews reject the evangel and call down judgment. How dire must be the punishment due to these uncircumcised aliens for stoning the chosen vessel God had sent for their salvation! This is surely the opportunity demanded by grace to show its potency! They drag his body, battered and bleeding, outside the city, but his spirit flies far ahead to the paradise of the new earth, and soars into the heights of the third heaven. There he sees the despised, undeserving gentiles, who had stoned him to death, ruling the celestial realms as members of Christ's body and "blessed with all spiritual blessings among the celestials" (Eph.1<sup>3</sup>). Here we reach the summit of grace, the secret (1Co.2<sup>7</sup>) which God had prepared for those who love Him. Though Paul was not really dead, it is well to note that, from this time on, he reckons himself and all believers as having died, and as living a resurrection life (2Co.1<sup>9</sup>).

Why are you doing these things?

We also are men, of like emotions as you, preaching the evangel to you

<sup>16</sup> Thes 1:9 to turn [you] back from these vanities to the living God, Who makes heaven and earth and the sea and all that is in them, Who, in bygone generations, leaves all the nations to go on in their ways, although He leaves Himself not without the testimony of good acts, giving showers from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with nourishment and gladness." And, saying these things, they hardly stop the throngs from sacrificing to them. LD 18

<sup>19</sup> Yet Jews from Antioch and Iconium come on, and persuading the throngs, and stoning Paul, they dragged him outside the city, inferring that he is dead. Yet when the disciples surround him, rising, he entered the city. And on the morrow he came out with Barnabas to Derbe. That city being evangelized as well, and making a considerable number of disciples, they return into Lystra and <sup>22</sup> 2 Tim 3:11 into Iconium and into Antioch, establishing the souls of the disciples, besides entreating them to remain in the faith and that "through many afflictions must we be entering into the kingdom of God." Now, electing elders for them according to the ecclesia, praying with fastings, they committed them to the Lord in Whom they had believed.

27 The report in Antioch that God had opened the door of faith to the nations sums up Paul's first missionary journey. This is given out as something new, unknown before. It is evident that Antioch itself was composed partly of gentiles, but they had been proselytes of Judaism before the evangel was proclaimed to them. Many of the misconceptions as to the book of Acts, especially in regard to Pentecost and the ministry of the twelve apostles, would vanish if this fact were given the prominence it deserves. The twelve apostles did not reach out to the nations. Jews from the dispersion spoke to the proselytes. When Peter did this in the case of Cornelius, it was considered a grave breach by the majority in Jerusalem. Not till Paul and Barnabas' first missionary journey did the word go out to the idolaters. Before this the door was shut. The only way of access was through Judaism. Now it is open, and consists of faith, altogether apart from Jewish rites and ceremonies.

1 No sooner was the door of faith opened to the nations than the emissaries of Jerusalem tried to slam it shut. Paul had been reporting that salvation had been brought directly to the gentiles without the necessity of their becoming proselytes. Now the Judaizers come and insist that it is not sufficient to be a "proselyte of the gate," but they must become a "proselyte of righteousness" and take upon themselves all the obligations of Judaism. The conflict was between faith and law, grace and works. The circumcisionists were perversely using in the interests of self-righteousness that which God had given for its cure.

From Paul's account, given in his epistle to the Galatians, we find that these "false brethren" crept into the ecclesia at Antioch unawares, spying out their freedom in Christ Jesus, and determined to bring them into the bondage of the law of Moses. Besides being sent by the brethren at Antioch, Paul had a revelation which directed him to go to Jerusalem and communicate his evangel, which differed materially from that of the twelve and the Judaizers, to those in authority in Jerusalem. He also took Titus along as a test case, because he was not circumcised (Ga.2:1-5).

24 And passing through into Pisia,
25 dia, they came to Pamphylia. And, speaking the word of the Lord in Perga, they descended to Attalia,
26 and thence they sail away to Antioch, whence they had been given over to the grace of God for the work which they fulfill.

27 Now, coming along and assembling the ecclesia, they informed them of whatever God does with them, and that He opens up a 28 door of faith to the nations. Now they tarried no brief time with the disciples.

15 And some, coming down from Judea, taught the brethren that, "If you should not be circumcised after the custom of Moses you cannot be saved." Now as Paul and Barnabas come to have no slight commotion and questioning with them, they prescribe that Paul and Barnabas and some others from among them are to go up into Jerusalem to the apostles and the elders about this question.

3 They, indeed, then, being sent forward by the ecclesia, passed through Phoenicia as well as Samaria, detailing the turning about of the nations. And they caused great joy to all the brethren.

4 Now, coming along into Jerusalem, they were received by the ecclesia and the apostles and the elders, and they inform them of 5 whatever God does with them. Yet some from the sect of the Pharisees who have believed rise up, saying that "They must be circumcised,

6 Before this convention Paul took up the question privately with the more influential members of the Jerusalem ecclesia, especially with James, the brother of the Lord, and with the apostles Peter and John. Having convinced them that he had a special revelation for the Uncircumcision they were able to influence the assembly, and thus he was able to check the growing opposition to his ministry in Jerusalem.

In Judea the ecclesia of Christ was rapidly degenerating into a Jewish sect. It was called "the sect of the Nazarenes" by its enemies. They clung to the Mosaic law and ritual as fiercely as ever, and could not bear to consider anything which seemed derogatory to their ancient religion. Besides, they gave the traditions concerning social intercourse with the alien nations all the force of a divine command. Peter's course with Cornelius was not a direct violation of the law, though it may have involved the eating of that which was forbidden by Moses.

7 Peter here refers to Cornelius, and his words must be taken, not in the light of Paul's subsequent course, but as the Jews present would understand them. Peter's preaching to the nations was confined to proselytes in the land. Without that experience Paul would never have been able to convince Peter that God could deal with the nations in a way different from His dealings with the Circumcision. The case of Cornelius was specially designed to bridge the gap between the two ministries of Peter and Paul.

11 These are bold and noble words to be spoken by the chief apostle of the Circumcision in such an assemblage of Judaizers. These are Peter's last words in the book of Acts. Instead of conceding that the gentiles must be saved by means of the law and the ritual, through Judaism, Peter insists on the very opposite. The aliens are not to be saved like the Jews, but the Circumcision themselves are not saved by the law and circumcision, but by grace, even as the nations. We can hardly realize how astounding such a declaration would be in this assembly. It was not understood or heeded. Peter himself denied it by his acts soon afterward (Ga.2:11-21).

besides charging them to keep the law of Moses."

6 Now the apostles and elders were assembled to see about this matter.

7 Now, there coming to be much questioning, Peter, rising, said to them, "Men! Brethren! You are versed in the fact that from early days God chooses among you, that through my mouth the nations are to hear the word of the evangel and believe. And God, the Knower of hearts, testifies to them, giving the holy spirit according as to us also, and does not discriminate at all between us and them, cleansing their hearts by faith. Why, then, are you now trying God, by placing a yoke on the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we have the strength to bear? But through the grace of the Lord Jesus we are believing, to be saved in a manner even as they."

12 Now the entire multitude hushes, and they heard Barnabas and Paul unfolding whatever signs and miracles God does among the nations through them.

13 Now after they hush, James answered, saying, "Men! Brethren! Hear me! Simeon unfolds how God first visits the nations, to obtain out of them a people for His name. And with this the words of the prophets are agreeing, according as it is written,

16 "After these things I will return, And I will rebuild the tabernacle of David which has fallen, And its overturned [structure] will I rebuild, And I will re-erect it,

17 So that those left of mankind should be seeking the Lord,

James, the brother of our Lord, though not an apostle, had by far the most influence in Jerusalem, especially with the Judaisers. Peter, who should have had the leadership, was afraid of him. If his wise and weighty words had been heeded all would have been well. But the legalists were too strong, and listened to James, their leader, the brother of the Lord according to the flesh, rather than to one who was not only one of His brethren in spirit, but had been trained and commissioned to lead His people. Peter's decision was in accord with the spirit and should have been obeyed. James' compromise was a concession to the flesh. Later, when the full truth for the present was revealed these decrees were abolished (Eph. 2<sup>15</sup>).

<sup>18</sup> James does not refer to the report of Barnabas and Paul, when he quotes Amos 9<sup>11-12</sup>, but to Peter's address. The prophet, speaking of the time when the kingdom will be set up, refers to those among the nations, who, like Cornelius, invoked the name of the Lord, and are blessed with His people Israel. It has no reference to the present economy of God's grace.

<sup>19</sup> Notice the emphatic I. This was James' own solution. The object of the decrees seems to have been to make it possible for the Jews to have social intercourse with the believers among the nations without offending Jewish prejudices. A Jew, even if a believer, could not eat at the same table with a gentile if he should serve an idol sacrifice, or strangled meat, or blood. Had Peter's advice been followed, they would have cast off the yoke of the law, which they never were able to bear, and so could have had free and joyful fellowship with the Uncircumcision. James' plan keeps the Jews under the divine law and puts the nations under a human law. Instead of loosing all from bondage, he binds both.

<sup>24</sup> The great object of the conference was definitely settled, and never again do we hear that circumcision and law keeping are essential to salvation. The Judaisers now change to the teaching that, though these may not be necessary for salvation, they are essential to progress and perfection. Paul refutes this in Galatians.

And all the nations over whom
My name has been invoked,"

The Lord is saying, Who is doing

from the eon.

<sup>19</sup> Wherefore I decide not to be harassing those from the nations who <sup>20</sup> are turning back to God, but to dispatch an epistle to them to be ab-staining from ceremonial pollution with idols, and prostitution, and that which is strangled, and blood.

tions, as suits a city, has those who are proclaiming him, being read every sabbath in the synagogues."

<sup>22</sup> Then it seems [good] to the apostles and the elders, together with the whole ecclesia, choosing men from among them, to send to Antioch together with Paul and Barnabas, Judas, who is called Bar-Sabbas, and Silas, leading men among the breth-<sup>23</sup> ren, writing through their hand:

"The apostles and elders and brethren to the brethren out of the nations at Antioch, and Syria and Cilicia:

<sup>24</sup> Rejoice! Since, in fact, we hear that some coming out from us disturb you by words, dismantling your souls, whom we do not cau<sup>25</sup> tion, it seems [good] to us, coming to be of one accord, choosing men, to send them to you with our <sup>26</sup> beloved Barnabas and Paul, men who have given up their souls for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>29</sup> Strictly speaking, these decrees were binding only on the believers in Syria and Cilicia, though they must have influenced all the saints among the nations. Paul practically repeals them when he makes the eating of meats offered to idols a matter of individual conscience (1Co.8). The revelation of the new humanity (Eph.2:15) in which all physical distinctions disappear, so that there is no Jew or Greek, nullifies this "law of precepts in decrees." They were based on a distinction which no longer exists for those who are in Christ Jesus. Speaking of this to the Colossians, the apostle boldly cancels them by "erasing the handwriting of the decrees against us, which was hostile to us, and has taken it away out of the midst . . ." How far has Jerusalem fallen! Instead of bringing blessing to the nations, they use this opportunity of burdening them with a law of their own devising. No wonder, when Paul comes again, he finds James in full charge, and all the tens of thousands of believing Jews zealous of the law and hostile to him and his ministry.

<sup>35</sup> It was during this period that Peter came to Antioch and lived at first in unrestrained intercourse with the gentiles, eating with them in consistency with his speech at the conference and with the decrees, also with his own conduct in the case of Cornelius. In the presence of "certain from James" Peter began to vacillate and complied with their prejudices. If Peter through consideration for the weak conscience had been yielding a non-essential point, Paul would approve. But his motive was the fear of man. His example not only sanctioned the heresies of the Judaizers but also carried away such believers as Barnabas, and well merited Paul's rebuke.

<sup>37</sup> Barnabas had already provoked Paul's indignation by weakly yielding to the influence of Peter and the Judaizers. Possibly he was still smarting under Paul's public rebuke. Paul, on the other hand, always revolted against anything that looked like compromise and weakness. Though it was impossible for them to longer work together, they evidently make amicable arrangement to divide between them the territory of their former journey.

<sup>27</sup> We have, then, commissioned Judas and Silas, and they are reporting the same by word. For it seems [good] to the holy spirit and to us not to be placing one more burden on you more than these essentials: to be abstaining from idol sacrifices, and blood, and what is strangled, and prostitution; from which, carefully keeping yourselves, you will be well engaged. Farewell!"

<sup>30</sup> They indeed, then, being dismissed, came down to Antioch, and, assembling the multitude, hand them the epistle. Now, reading it, they rejoiced at the consolation. Judas as well as Silas, being prophets themselves also, entreat and establish the brethren by many a word. Now, the time being spent, they were dismissed with peace from the brethren, to those who commission them. Yet Paul and Barnabas tarried in Antioch, teaching and preaching the evangel of the word of the Lord, with many others also.

<sup>36</sup> Now, after some days, Paul said to Barnabas, "By all means, turning back, we should be visiting the brethren at every city in which we announce the word of the Lord,— <sup>37</sup> how they are faring." Now Barnabas intended to take along with them John also, who is called Mark.
<sup>38</sup> Yet Paul counted him unworthy to take along—the one withdrawing from them from Pamphylia, and not coming with them to the work.
<sup>39</sup> Now they became so incensed as to recoil from one another. And Barnabas, taking Mark along, sails off to Cyprus.

<sup>40</sup> Silas was almost necessary as a companion for Paul. The decrees provided that they should be delivered by both Barnabas and Paul, while Judas and Silas were to confirm them by word of mouth. Now that Barnabas is gone, Paul could hardly deliver the decrees without a second witness, and Silas was the very one for the purpose, for he had the recommendation of Jerusalem.

<sup>40</sup> Paul seems to have had the sympathy of the brethren in Antioch. Nothing is said of their interest in Barnabas and Mark. But when Paul and Silas go, the brethren commend them to God's grace.

<sup>1</sup> Paul did not retrace the steps of his first missionary journey. He did not go to Cyprus at all. He went by land through Syria and Cilicia, and crossed the Taurus mountains more to the east, coming out upon the high inland plain near Lystra and Derbe.

<sup>3</sup> The circumcision of Timothy, at first sight, seems strange and inconsistent. Had Paul not refused to circumcise Titus? Had not the council at Jerusalem decided that circumcision was not essential to salvation? But Timothy's case is an entirely different matter. Paul is still going among the synagogues proclaiming Jesus as the Messiah of the Jews. To have an associate who was uncircumcised would be a great hindrance and give the Jews the occasion which they sought to denounce and persecute him. He still maintains that circumcision is nothing. Yet he has no hesitancy in using it if it will mollify the prejudice of those whom he desires to reach with the evangel.

16 Now he arrives also at Derbe and at Lystra, and lo! a certain disciple was there, named Timothy, the son of a believing Jewish woman, yet of a Greek father, who was testified to by the brethren in Lystra and Iconium. This one, Paul wants to come out with him, and, taking him, circumcised him because of the Jews who are in those places, for they had all been aware that his father belonged to the Greeks.

<sup>4</sup> Now, as they went through the cities, they give over to them the decrees to maintain, which have been decided upon by the apostles and the elders who are in Jerusalem.

<sup>6</sup> Now they passed through Phrygia and the Galatian province, being forbidden by the holy spirit to speak the word in the [province of]

<sup>7</sup> Asia. Yet, coming about Mysia, they tried to go into Bithynia, and the spirit of Jesus does not let them. Yet they, passing by Mysia, descended into Troas.

<sup>9</sup> Paul's commission is as broad as humanity, yet the guidance of God decides matters of time and place for testimony.

<sup>9</sup> Up to this time Paul was guided by hindrances. Trying to go through Galatia to the regions beyond, he is taken sick. He then seeks to enter the populous province of Asia, but the time had not yet come. Finally, at Troas, he receives the first intimation that his work lay in Europe. Without stopping to preach in Troas he immediately sets sail for Macedonia, which he reached in two days—a remarkably swift journey. It took five days on a later occasion (20<sup>e</sup>).

<sup>12</sup> Philippi was a Roman colony in the special sense that it enjoyed many of the privileges of Rome itself. It was free from the control of the governor of the province. It regulated its own internal affairs by its own magistrates.

<sup>13</sup> There seem to have been few Jews in the city. There was no synagogue. As it was the custom of the Jews to retire to the sea shore or some stream, which they esteemed a pure place, for prayer, Paul and his company resorted to such a spot and spoke to the women who came. Here it was that the Lord, who had led them from afar, manifested His presence and power by opening the heart of Lydia, the first fruit of the evangel in Europe. Strangely enough, however, she was from Asia, and from the very regions which they were forbidden to evangelize.

<sup>16</sup> Python is the name of Apollo in his character as an oracle. Those who were ventriloquists, speaking with their mouths closed, were called Pythons. It was a kind of demon possession, not at all uncommon in ancient Greece. Their ravings were highly esteemed by the superstitious idolaters. Hence this slave girl was able to earn much money for her masters. It was probably the enemy's plan to discredit Paul's message by a questionable commendation.

immediately seek to come out to Macedonia, deducing that God has called us to preach the evangel to them.

<sup>11</sup> Now, setting out from Troas, we run straight to Samothrace, yet the <sup>12</sup> ensuing [day] to Neapolis, and thence to Philippi, which is the foremost city of that part of Macedonia, a colony.

Now we were tarrying in this <sup>13</sup> city some days. And the day of the <sup>14</sup> sabbaths we came outside of the gate beside a river, where we inferred there was prayer, and, being seated, we spoke to the women who are <sup>15</sup> coming together. And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple of the city of Thyatira, revering God, heard, whose heart the Lord opens up to heed what is <sup>16</sup> being spoken by Paul. Now as she is baptized, she and her household, she entreats, saying, "If you have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house and remain." And she urges us.

<sup>17</sup> Now it occurred, at our going to the prayer, a certain maid having a python spirit meets us, who afforded a vast income to her masters, divining. She, following after Paul and us, cried, saying, "These men are slaves of God most high, who are announcing to you the way of <sup>18</sup> salvation!" Now this she did many days. Now Paul, being exasperated, and turning about, said to the spir-

 ON-TURNING TO-THE spirit

<sup>19</sup> This is the first occasion in which the evangel comes into conflict with the religion of the nations and with the spirit powers back of it. Hither-to the Jews and Judaism opposed the evangel. At Lystra it was welcomed by the idolaters, at first, until the Jews turned the people against the apostles.

<sup>19</sup> Note carefully the real reason of the opposition. Their income was cut off. To this day this, the first symptom of antagonism, has largely controlled the opposition to the truth. Doubtless, if the evangel had increased their income, they would have accepted it.

<sup>20</sup> There was no law against casting out demons, so the accusation is craftily perverted to arouse the prejudices of the Roman officers. The Jews had been ordered out of Rome and were in bad repute. There was a law, practically obsolete, which forbade the introduction of any religious innovation as dangerous to the peace of the empire. So that, if the law had been allowed to take its normal course, the apostles might have been imprisoned for a long period, and the evangel would have received a permanent check, but the unlawful action of the officers, putting them in the wrong, effectually opened the way for the further proclamation of the evangel in Philippi.

<sup>22</sup> The terrible Roman flogging and vile, filthy jail, with the torture of the stocks, was intended to put a stop to the evangel. But God turned it to its furtherance. Paul and Silas, rejoicing in their sufferings for Christ, get an audience even in the prison.

<sup>26</sup> Contrast the deliverance of Paul and Silas with that of Peter (12<sup>3-10</sup>). Peter had not been ill-treated as they were, and slept. They prayed and sang songs of praise. No angel came to deliver Paul and Silas, but they brought a much greater deliverance to the warden and his household, and doubtless to some of the prisoners as well. Peter's escape, on the contrary, cost the lives of his keepers. Paul and Silas come out in broad daylight, escorted by the officers of the city and leave openly after they have met their brethren and taken leave of them. Peter comes out at night and flees to another place to escape Herod's wrath.

it, "I am charging you, in the name of Jesus Christ, to be coming out from her!" And it came out the same hour.

<sup>21</sup> our city belong to the Jews, and they are announcing customs which it is not allowed us to assent to, nor

<sup>25</sup> Now at midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God. Now the prisoners listened <sup>26</sup> to them. Now, suddenly, a great quake occurred, so that the foundations of the prison are shaken. Now, instantly, all the doors were opened, and the bonds of all were slackened.

<sup>30</sup> The earthquake, the open doors, the knowledge that he would forfeit his own life if a prisoner escaped, and the voice out of the darkness of the dungeon that read his inmost thoughts when he is about to take his own life, all conspired to convince the warden that these men and their message were from God. He doubtless had heard what the spirit of Python had declared about them, hence his cry, "What ought I to be doing that I may be saved?"

<sup>32</sup> They did not stop with the bare exhortation to believe, but went on to open up the truth of the evangel. Faith does not come by the mere entreaty to believe, but through the setting forth of the truths which are to be believed. The death of Christ for our sins, His burial and resurrection are essential to salvation and should be the subject of every effort to preach the evangel. This gospel of God's grace was immediately effective, producing great joy.

<sup>33</sup> What a transformation in the warden! The day before he had treated them with unnecessary severity; now he stoops to bathe their backs and attends to their comforts, taking them into his own home.

<sup>35</sup> Philippi was a military colony, hence the officials were army officers rather than magistrates. This may explain their illegal course of taking a hand in punishing those who had never been tried. Later reflection doubtless convinced them of this error, so they sent to have Paul and Silas released. The warden was doubtless very happy at this turn of affairs, and exhorts them to go. But Paul, seeing the hand of God in the changed attitude of the officers, and solicitous for the furtherance of the evangel in Philippi, determines to press the advantage. The officers did not know that they were Roman citizens, hence did not realize how serious had been their offense. A public acknowledgment of their fault would shield the saints from further persecution. He insists that the officers shall come and lead them out in person, so that all may see that they were no longer opposed to their work. This the officers do, but, lest a rumor of this should get to Rome, they entreat them to leave the city, which, with due deliberation, the apostles did.

ing evil to yourself, for we are all in this place." Now, requesting lights, he springs in, and coming to be in a tremor, prostrates to Paul and Silas, and preceding them out, averred, "Masters, what must I be doing that I may be saved?"

<sup>31</sup> Now they say, "Believe on the Lord Jesus, and you shall be saved, <sup>32</sup> you and your household." And they speak to him the word of the Lord, together with all who are in his

<sup>36</sup> ing, "Release those men." Now the warden reports these words to Paul, that "The officers have sent a dispatch that you may be released. Then come out now, go

<sup>37</sup> in peace." Yet Paul averred to them, "Lashing us publicly, uncondemned, men belonging to the Romans, they cast us into jail, and now they are ejecting us surreptitiously! No! But let them come themselves and lead us out!"

<sup>38</sup> Now the constables report these statements to the officers. Now they were afraid, hearing that they are

<sup>40</sup> Now, coming out of the jail, they came to Lydia, and, seeing the brethren, they console them and came away.

<sup>17</sup> Now, traversing Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue of the Jews. Now, as Paul's custom was, he entered to them and on three sabbaths he argues with them from the scriptures, opening to them and placing before them that Christ must suffer and rise from among the dead, and that "This One is Christ—the Jesus Whom I am announcing to you."

<sup>4</sup> And some of them are persuaded, and were allotted to Paul and Silas, besides a vast multitude of the reverent Greeks, and of the foremost women not a few.

<sup>5</sup> Now the Jews, being jealous, taking also to themselves some wicked men of the loafers, and making up a mob, they made a tumult in the city, and, standing by the house of Jason, they sought to lead them before the populace. Now, not finding them, they dragged Jason and some brethren to the city magistrate, imploring that "These who raise the inhabited earth to insurrection are present in this place also, whom Jason has entertained. And all these are committing things contravening the decrees of Caesar, saying there is a different King, Jesus." Now they disturb the throng and the city magistrates at hearing these things. And, obtaining bail from Jason and the rest, they release them.

<sup>10</sup> As it was unwise to excite the mob in Thessalonica further, and the apostles did not wish to cease their labors, they slip away to Berea, probably one of the nearest synagogues. Here the Jews give them a hearty reception and eagerly examine the ancient Scriptures to see if Paul's message is in accord with their predictions. Consequently many of them believe and the proselytes also, from among the Greeks, receive the word of the Lord.

<sup>11</sup> Paul's success among the noble Jews of Berea is clearly the result of their examination of the Scriptures. Here, doubtless, as elsewhere, current Jewish tradition, the teaching of the elders, had largely replaced the divine record, just as today the traditions of the church supersede the truths of Scripture. The true nobility lies in ignoring current dogma and accepting only what is in closest accord with holy writ. This is the path that leads to real and substantial blessing.

<sup>15</sup> Paul has now fulfilled the Macedonian call, and leaves that province for Greece, which was then named Achaia. Athens was, in some ways, the principal city, and it had a Jewish meeting place. Hence he went thither and took his usual course, speaking to the Jews in the synagogue, and to the others in the market place. We are not informed of his reception by the Jews, but they do not seem to have persecuted him.

<sup>18</sup> The Epicurean philosophy was virtually Atheism. Like modern scientific theorists it denied creation, teaching that the universe was formed by a fortuitous concourse of atoms, and continued to function without the intervention of God. There was no moral government, so there was no judgment and no resurrection. Their highest aim was self-gratification.

<sup>18</sup> The Stoics had many gods. They cultivated an austere apathy and held reason to be the only good. Stoicism developed a class of philosophic Pharisees who needed no Saviour, and acknowledged no sin. Zeno, its founder, died by his own hand.

<sup>10</sup> Now the brethren immediately send out Paul as well as Silas by night into Berea, who are away, coming along into the synagogue of the Jews. Now these were more noble than those in Thessalonica, who receive the word with all eagerness, examining the scriptures daily, if these things be so. Many of them, indeed, then, believe, and of the respectable Greek women and men not a few.

<sup>13</sup> Now as the Jews of Thessalonica know that in Berea also the word of God was announced by Paul, they came there also, agitating and disturbing the throngs. Now immediately, then, the brethren send away Paul to go as far as the sea. Silas as well as Timothy remain behind there.

<sup>15</sup> Now those who are conducting Paul led him as far as Athens, and, obtaining directions to Silas and Timothy that they may be coming most quickly to him, they are off.

<sup>16</sup> Now while Paul was waiting for them in Athens his spirit was incited in him, beholding the city idol-ridden. Indeed, then, he argued in the synagogue with the Jews and with the reverent, and in the market every day with those happening along.

<sup>18</sup> Now some of the Epicurean and Stoic philosophers also parleyed with him, and some said, "Whatever may this scrap-picker be wanting to say?" Yet some, "He seems <sup>18</sup> "Scrap-picker" is a piece of Athenian slang based upon the habits of birds who pick up seed and scraps, and applied to men who pick up scraps of learning and who lack a thorough knowledge of their subjects.

<sup>21</sup> While the Epicureans derided him, both they and the Stoics, as well as the many Athenians who had returned from foreign travel, all were eager to hear anything that was novel, even if they could not agree with it. The resurrection was unheard of amongst them, so they wish to know more of it.

<sup>23</sup> Paul is too wise to begin offensively by telling his hearers that they were too superstitious. His words are rather complimentary, at least so they would understand them. To dread demons was a virtue, the essence of their religion.

<sup>23</sup> By this happy introduction the apostle manages to conciliate the pretense to knowledge which the philosophers affected. Instead of charging them directly with ignorance of God he introduces the inscription, TO AN UNKNOWN GOD, which they doubtless all had seen. Then he pursues a course of reasoning, which they could follow, showing the illogical basis of their philosophies as to creation, God's continued activity in providence, and His desire that men should use these evidences in groping for Him—as they were. He is careful to make every possible concession to the philosophers, yet boldly attacks their error. In the midst of marvelous temples, and elaborate ritual, he does not hesitate to declare their uselessness to the God Who needed nothing, but was the Giver of all things. He asserts His supremacy in time and space. He acknowledges the partial truth in the Stoic philosophy by proclaiming His presence and immanence.

to be an announcer of strange demons," seeing that he preached to them the evangel of Jesus and the resurrection. Besides, getting hold of him, they led him to the Areopagus, saying "Can we know what this new teaching is, of which you are speaking? For what you are bringing to our hearing is strange. We are resolved, then, to know what this is wanting to be!" Now all the Athenians and the repatriated guests had opportunity for no other thing than to be telling something or hearing something newer.

<sup>22</sup> Now Paul, standing in the center of the Areopagus, averred, "Men! Athenians! I am beholding on all sides how unusually religious you are. For, passing through and contemplating the objects of your veneration, I found a pedestal also, on which had been inscribed, 'TO AN UNKNOWN GOD.' To Whom then, you are ignorantly devout, This One I am announcing to you:

<sup>24</sup> God, Who makes the world and all which is in it, He, the Lord possessing heaven and earth, is not dwelling in temples made with

<sup>25</sup> hands, neither is He, requiring anything, being attended by human hands, Himself giving to all life

<sup>26</sup> and breath and all. Besides, He makes out of one every nation of mankind, to be dwelling on all the surface of the earth, specifying the setting of the seasons and

<sup>27</sup> the bounds of their dwelling, for them to be seeking God, if, consequently, they surely should grope for Him and may be finding Him, though to be sure, He is existing not far from each one of us, for <sup>28</sup> in Him we are living and moving

<sup>28</sup> Paul not only appeals to the measure of truth in their philosophies, but strengthens his cause with them by showing that even their own poets have stumbled on the truth he is about to deduce. The exact words "For we, too, are of the race" occur in a poem by Aratus, of Cilicia, Paul's native province. "The race" refers to the race of the gods, who were merely deified men. Cleanthes of Lystra also, in a hymn to Zeus, says, "for we are of your race."

<sup>29</sup> Paul then does away with their idols, leaving nothing of their religion but the unknown God, Who knows their ignorance and bears with it, but now charges them to change their minds in view of future judgment, which is assured by the resurrection of Christ from the dead. Paul wisely begins the evangel to them by announcing the resurrection, for it alone could dispel the error of their philosophies and bring them to a realization of the necessity for a Saviour.

<sup>32</sup> The resurrection involves the death of Christ, and this the manner and necessity of His death for sin, but Paul was not allowed to proceed, though he doubtless did unfold the evangel to those who followed him when he left the Areopagus.

Here we have a marvelous model for the preaching of the evangel to the wise of this world. No appeal is made to scripture, for it would be useless. Every concession is made to the dim perceptions of truth which they held, and they are led as far as human reason can bring them up to the greatest fact of the evangel—the resurrection. But alas! Not many wise are called, for God chooses the stupid of the world to disgrace the wise (1Co.12<sup>6</sup>). No persecution drove Paul away, yet no flourishing ecclesia followed his labors. Indifference is deadly.

<sup>1</sup> Paul's plan, in leaving Athens, was doubtless to found another center for the evangel in Achaia, as Thessalonica was for Macedonia. Corinth was the logical place, a large mercantile city, whence the evangel could spread in all directions.

and are, even as some poets of yours have declared, 'For we are <sup>29</sup> of the race also.' Belonging, then, to the divine race, we ought not to be inferring that the Divine is like gold, or silver, or stone, a sculpture of art and human sentiment. Lev. 20:4

<sup>30</sup> God, indeed, then, condoning the times of ignorance, now is charging all men everywhere to repent,
<sup>31</sup> forasmuch as He assigns a day in which He is about to be judging the inhabited earth in righteousness by the Man Whom He specifies, tendering faith to all, raising Him from among the dead."—

18 After these things, departing from Athens, he came to Corinth.

<sup>3</sup> from Rome), he came to them, and, because they were of a like trade, he remained with them and worked, for they were tentmakers by trade.

<sup>5</sup> as well as Greeks. Now, as Silas as well as Timothy came down

<sup>3</sup> While in Thessalonica he had been supported partly by gifts from Philippi, but now he engaged in tentmaking as a means of livelihood.

During his early days in Corinth his heart was continually occupied with the saints from whom he had been severed, especially those of Thessalonica. He had sent Timothy to them to establish them. Now when Timothy came to Corinth with Silas and brought good news of their faith and love, he writes an epistle to them. This was, it seems, not only the first of Paul's epistles to be penned, but the first part of the Greek Scriptures to be committed to writing.

<sup>6</sup> As usual, Paul went to the synagogue and spoke on the sabbaths, but he does not seem to have proclaimed Christ until his companions came. Then he boldly preached Jesus as the Messiah. Profiting by his former experiences, he leaves them when they oppose and holds his meetings in a private house. Yet many, including the chief of the synagogue, are won for the Lord. Paul's language and symbolic action in withdrawing from the Jews are a denunciation of woe, and agree with what he wrote about them at this time (1Thess.2<sup>15,16</sup>).

<sup>9</sup> Paul, in writing to the Corinthians concerning these early days, told them that he was with them in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling (1Co.2<sup>3</sup>). Hence he received a vision in the night to encourage him. God had chosen many a sinner in that city who should hear the evangel through Paul and believe. The opposition did not develop for some time and he was allowed to work for a year and a half. Thus he laid the foundation (1Co.3<sup>10</sup>) of one of the most flourishing of the ecclesias, which ever after had a large place in his heart.

<sup>12</sup> The Jews, however, took advantage of a change in the government, when Gallio (Annæus Novatus, a brother of Seneca, the philosopher, but adopted into the family of Junius Gallio, the rhetorician) became proconsul. He seems to have been especially liberal and tolerant, and refused to act as judge in an affair involving the religious law of the Jews. He considered such matters entirely outside his jurisdiction as a Roman judge.

from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the word, certifying to the Jews that Jesus is the Christ. Now at their resisting and blaspheming, shaking out his garments, he said to them, "Your blood be on your head! I am clear. From now on I shall go to the nations." 13:46.

<sup>7</sup> And proceeding thence, he entered the house of a certain one named Titus Justus, who is revering God, whose house was adjacent to the synagogue. Now Crispus, the chief of the synagogue, believes in the Lord, together with his whole household. And many of the Corinthians, hearing, believed, and were baptized.

<sup>9</sup> Now the Lord said to Paul, through a vision in the night, "Fear not! but be speaking: and you should not be silent, because I am with you, and no one shall place [hands] on you to illtreat you, because I have many people in this city." Now he is seated one year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

<sup>12</sup> Now, Gallio being proconsul of Achaia, the Jews with one accord assaulted Paul, and they led him to the dais, saying that "This man is inducing men to reverence God aside from the law." Now, as Paul was about to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews, "If, indeed, it were some injury or wicked knavery, O Jews, I should, on that account, tolerate you. Yet if they are questions about words and names and a law of yours, you will see! I am not intending

<sup>17</sup> At Philippi, the apostle had turned all blame upon the officers. So here the Lord brings upon the Jews the violence and disgrace they hoped to heap on the apostle. His promise that Paul should not be harmed is faithfully kept. The opposition has helped rather than hindered the evangel.

<sup>18</sup> The taking of a vow was not a part of the law, but was strictly voluntary on the part of those who took it on themselves. Such a person was separated to God, and must not touch the dead, no matter how close the physical relationship. So Paul, at this time, became separated from the dying nation of Israel (Nu.6).

Perhaps Paul's deliverance from the Jews in Corinth was the occasion of this vow. As a further indication of his separation from the apostate nation it corresponds to his action at the beginning of his ministry in Corinth in severing from the unbelieving Jews and going to the nations with the evangel. We have no record of his release from the vow, for he only sheared his hair in Cenchrea. To end it he would need to go to Jerusalem and shave his head. Hence, in spirit, his ministry henceforth is that of a Nazarite, without the joy which will characterize the coming of the kingdom and with the weakness and shame suggested by the long hair.

<sup>22</sup> It is evident that Antioch has displaced Jerusalem as the center of the evangel. From this point he commences his third missionary journey. He first retraces the steps of his former journey but is now permitted to enter the province of Asia.

<sup>18</sup> Now Paul, remaining still a considerable number of days with the brethren, taking leave, sailed away to Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea, for he had a vow.

<sup>20</sup> Jews. Yet on their asking him to stay on more time, he does not consent, but, taking leave, and saying,

"God willing, I shall come back again to you," he set out from <sup>22</sup> Ephesus. And, coming down into Cæsarea, going up and greeting the ecclesia, he descended to Antioch.

<sup>23</sup> And, spending some time, he came away, passing consecutively through the Galatian province and Phrygia, establishing all the disciples.

<sup>24</sup> Now a certain Jew, named Apollos, an Alexandrian by race, a scholarly man, arrives at Ephesus, being able in the scriptures. He was instructed in the way of the Lord, and fervent in spirit. He spoke and taught accurately what concerns Jesus, being versed only

<sup>26</sup> in the baptism of John. And he begins to [speak] boldly in the synagogue. Now when Priscilla and

<sup>26</sup> Apollos' ignorance of the ministry of the Lord and His twelve apostles made it easy for him to receive the truth proclaimed through Paul, so that he became a great help to the saints in Corinth as well as an ardent and powerful exponent of the ancient scriptures concerning the Messiah. What Paul had planted Apollos watered. He built on Paul's foundation (1Co.3<sup>9,10</sup>). The Corinthians made him the head of one of their schisms (1Co.1<sup>12</sup>). He continued in fellowship with the apostle to the end (Titus 3<sup>13</sup>). It is not likely that he was an eloquent man, for the word used denotes scholarship, rather than eloquence, and the combination is rare. Superiority of speech is not needed in the proclamation of the evangel. It is not in word but in power (1Co.2<sup>1,4</sup>).

<sup>2</sup> These disciples, like Apollos, seemed to know nothing of the ministry of the Lord and the twelve apostles, and of the gifts of the holy spirit which were not given until after our Lord's ascension. They possessed none of these gifts and had not so much as heard of them. John's baptism was for the repentant, to prepare a people for the Messiah Who should come after him, Who would baptize in holy spirit.

Aquila hear him, they took him to themselves and expounded the way of God more accurately.

<sup>27</sup> Now, as he intends to be passing through into Achaia, the brethren, promoting it, write to the disciples to welcome him, who, coming along, parleyed much with those who have believed through grace, for he strenuously and thoroughly confuted the Jews, publicly exhibiting, through the scriptures, that Jesus is the Christ.

<sup>19</sup> Now it occurred while Apollos was in Corinth, Paul, passing through the upper parts, comes down to Ephesus and, finding some disciples, said to them, "<sup>2</sup> Did you obtain holy spirit when believing?" Yet they to him, "<sup>3</sup> Nay, neither hear we if there is holy spirit." Yet he said "<sup>4</sup> Into what, then, are you baptized?" Yet they said, "<sup>5</sup> Into the baptism of John." Yet Paul said, "<sup>6</sup> John baptizes with the baptism of repentance, saying to the people that they should be believing on the One Who is coming after him, that is, on <sup>5</sup> Jesus. Now on hearing this, they are baptized into the name of the <sup>6</sup> Lord Jesus." And at the placing of Paul's hands on them, the holy spirit came on them and they talked <sup>7</sup> languages and prophesied. Now in all there were about twelve men.

<sup>8</sup> Now, entering the synagogue, he [spoke] boldly for three months, arguing and persuading as to that which concerns the kingdom of God. <sup>9</sup> Now, as some were hardened and stubborn, speaking evil of the way

EVIL-SAYING THE WAY

<sup>8</sup> Once more Paul pursues his usual plan of proclaiming Christ in the synagogue of the principal city of a province.

<sup>9</sup> In Ephesus the previous visit of the apostle and the testimony of Apollos, as well as his own bold proclamation in the synagogue, won many adherents among the Jews, so that in this case, it was not some who believed, but some who opposed. After three months matters come to a crisis and Paul leaves the synagogue and brings the believing disciples with him, making his headquarters in the school of Tyrannus, where he discourses daily. Besides this, as he reminds the elders in his affecting farewell at Miletus, he supported himself by his own hands (20<sup>34</sup>), possibly working at his trade with Aquila and Priscilla, going about the homes as well as teaching publicly (20<sup>20</sup>), and healing many of diseases, and casting out wicked spirits.

<sup>13</sup> The Jews had fallen so low that many of them became sorcerers and magicians who used incantations in their attempts to overcome evil spirits. Finding that Paul's formula was so effective they do not hesitate to profane the name of the Lord, by using it in their exorcisms. But the evil spirits were not deceived by this means, as the sons of Sceva found to their sorrow.

<sup>17</sup> This incident had a marked effect on those who practised such arts. The demons whom they feared had acknowledged both the Lord and His servant as worthy of their obedience. No wonder that they were filled with fear and magnified the Lord Jesus.

before the multitude, withdrawing from them, he severs the disciples, arguing daily in the school of

<sup>10</sup> Tyrannus. Now this occurred for two years, so that all those dwelling in the [province of] Asia hear the word of the Lord, Jews as well as <sup>11</sup> Greeks. Besides, powers, not the casual kind, God did through the <sup>12</sup> hands of Paul, so that handkerchiefs or aprons from his cuticle are carried away to the infirm also, to clear the diseases from them, and wicked spirits go out.

<sup>13</sup> Now some wandering Jews also, exorcists, take in hand to name the name of the Lord Jesus over those having wicked spirits, saying, "I adjure you by Jesus Whom Paul <sup>14</sup> is proclaiming!" Now there were some seven sons of Sceva, a Jew, a <sup>15</sup> chief priest, doing this. Yet, answering, the wicked spirit said to them, "Jesus, indeed, I know, and I am versed in Paul, yet who are <sup>16</sup> you?" And the man in whom the wicked spirit was, leaping on them, getting the mastery of both, is too strong for them, so that they are escaping out of that house naked and wounded.

<sup>17</sup> Now this became known to all, Jews as well as Greeks, who are dwelling in Ephesus. And fear falls on them all, and the name of <sup>18</sup> the Lord Jesus was magnified. And many who have believed came, confessing and informing them of their

<sup>18</sup> Many believers still clung to their old practises, but when they found that the Lord was greater than the demons whom they feared, they abandoned their false arts. They gave up the scrolls which taught them, and burned up nearly ten thousand dollars' worth.

<sup>21</sup> The words "as these things were fulfilled" mark the central crisis in Paul's ministry. We have long passed Jerusalem, Antioch has held its place as the base for his missionary journeys, and his correspondence was connected with Corinth, but now we look forward to Rome. In epistles written at this juncture Paul declares that he has fully preached the gospel of Christ in these parts (Ro.15<sup>19</sup>), that there is to be a change in his ministry, especially in the evangel he was proclaiming. He had gone about proclaiming Christ as Israel's Messiah, "after the flesh," yet henceforth he would do so no longer. He would recognize no man after the flesh. He would proclaim the conciliation, which does away with the distinction between the Circumcision and Uncircumcision (2Co.5<sup>14-21</sup>, Ro.5<sup>12-21</sup>). His gospel to the nations had been based on the promise to Abraham that all the nations of the earth should be blessed through His Seed. Now he preaches to all mankind because of a common descent from Adam. As this ministry is not in line with the kingdom to Israel, which is the subject of Acts, it is not recognized in this scroll.

The apostle's ministry in the synagogues is at an end, for the Jews among the nations have rejected their Messiah even as those in the land had done. All that now remains is his testimony before kings and in Rome.

Ephesus was the religious as Rome was the political center of the world. Paul gave a larger part of his ministry to the church there than to any other.

<sup>23</sup> The disturbance in Ephesus was no doubt caused by the opposition of the evil spirits, or demons, who are the real objects of worship in idolatry. It served God's purpose as well, for the apostle's ministry had come to a crisis which required him to leave Ephesus.

<sup>19</sup> practises. Now a considerable number of those practising meddling arts, bringing together the scrolls, burned them up in view of all. And they compute their value and found it to be fifty thousand pieces of silver. Thus the word of the Lord grows mightily and was strong.

<sup>21</sup> Now, as these things were fulfilled, Paul pondered, in spirit, passing through Macedonia and Achaia, going to Jerusalem, saying that "After coming to be there I must see Rome also." Now, dispatching two of his servants, Timothy and Erastus, to Macedonia, he attended, for the time, to the [province of] Asia.

<sup>23</sup> Now at that season no slight disturbance occurred concerning the way, for one named Demetrius, a silversmith (making silver temples of Artemis afforded no slight income to the artisans and the workers concerned with such, whom he convenes), said, "Men! You are versed in the fact that by this vocation we thrive, and you are beholding and hearing that, not only of Ephesus, but of almost the entire [province of] Asia, this Paul by his persuasion causes a considerable throng to stand aloof, saying that they are not gods which are coming into being by means of hands. Now, not only is this endangering our party, coming to be confuted by it, but the sanctuary of the great goddess Artemis also being thereby reckoned nothing (as well as her magnificence being about to be

It was an ancient custom to use portable images or shrines, which were modeled after celebrated temples or other objects of worship. They were used for various purposes, either as household gods or for religious processions, or even on journeys or military expeditions. Some were of wood, others of gold or silver. It can easily be seen how a profitable trade in such images could spring up in Ephesus, for the temple of Diana was world-renowned. Worshipers from afar would want a shrine to take with them to their homes.

The reason why shrines or temples of Diana were made, rather than images of the goddess may lie in the fact that the temple was most magnificent, while the image it contained was rude indeed. It was not an image of Diana the Huntress, which is the usual character in which she is now represented, but a many-breasted female figure above and a shapeless block below, carved out of wood. Nevertheless, she was the object of the most fanatical veneration.

<sup>33</sup> This Alexander may be that copper-smith who had done much evil to the apostle (2Tim.4<sup>14</sup>). If so, it shows the shameless lengths to which the Jews went in their hatred of Paul. They would not wish to be implicated in this matter, though it was well known that they also were opposed to idolatry. If this was the coppersmith he might have some influence with craftsmen of a like occupation, and he would clear his fellow countrymen of any association with Paul. But the mob knew he was a Jew and the mob was in no humor to tolerate any one who was not a worshiper of their goddess.

<sup>35</sup> To be the janitor or sexton of the temple of some great divinity was considered a high honor by the cities of the ancient world.

<sup>35</sup> The "scribe" is called by the same name as the well-known class among the Jews. He was a high city official, and, in this case, a man of tact and judgment. He appeals to them at their weakest point, and calms them before showing the groundlessness and danger of their mad uproar.

pulled down), whom the whole [province of] Asia and the inhabited earth is revering."

<sup>28</sup> Now, on hearing this and becoming full of fury, they cried, saying, "Great is Artemis of the Ephesians!" And the city is filled with the confusion. And, gripping Gaius and Aristarchus, Macedonians, fellow travelers of Paul, they rush with one accord into the theater.

<sup>30</sup> (Now, at Paul's intending to enter in to the populace, the disciples did <sup>31</sup> not let him. Yet some of the chiefs of [the province of] Asia also, being his friends, sending to him, entreated him not to venture into the theater himself.) Others, indeed, then, cried some other thing, for the ecclesia was confused, and the majority were not aware on what account they had come together.

<sup>33</sup> Now they unite on Alexander out of the throng, the Jews pushing him forward. Now Alexander, gesturing with his hand, wanted to make a

<sup>34</sup> defense to the populace. Yet on recognizing that he is a Jew, one voice came from all for about two hours, crying, "Great is Artemis of the Ephesians! Great is Artemis of the Ephesians!"

<sup>35</sup> Now the scribe, composing the throng, is averring: "Men! Ephesians! For what man is there who knows not the city of the Ephesians, which is the sexton of the temple of the great Artemis and of that which

<sup>36</sup> fell from Zeus? These things, then, not being gainsaid, you must possess composure and commit nothing rash. For you led these men, who are neither despoilers of the sanctuary, nor blasphemers

<sup>38</sup> After showing them that the men they had led to the theater were not guilty of any overt act against the temple or goddess he reminds them that there are legal means of redress for any wrong which they may have committed.

<sup>39</sup> We have purposely retained the uniform rendering ecclesia here, for it gives us a true idea of its meaning in ordinary Greek. It was a town council before which any matter such as this might be brought for settlement. A select portion of the population convened for public business was so called.

<sup>40</sup> The Romans would not tolerate any disorderly assemblage, and would soon recall any liberties and privileges accorded to a city if disorders were not promptly suppressed.

Thus God overrules to deliver Paul from "so great a death" even though the spiritual powers of evil, the avaricious mob, and the Jews were all combined against him. As in Corinth, He uses the power of Rome to protect him from false brethren and fanatical idolaters led on by his unseen spirit enemies.

<sup>1</sup> During Paul's stay in Ephesus he penned the two epistles to the Corinthians. In these we find a full account of much which is outside the scope of Acts. They trace the gradual change which is coming over his teaching, for his ministry went "from glory to glory" (2Co.3:18). As associated with the proclamation of the kingdom, his ministry seems to fail, as did that of the twelve. This is what is recorded in Acts. But as associated with the secret which was not made publicly known until after his final appeal to the Jews in Rome, his ministry ascended to the heights of Ephesian truth by gradual degrees.

<sup>2</sup> While in Corinth he wrote the epistle to the Galatians and that to the Romans. Thus, within a few months he writes all the Preparatory Epistles, in the central crisis of his ministry, after his determination to give the flesh no further place.

Demetrius and the artisans with him have a charge against anyone, court sessions are being held, and there are proconsuls: let them be indicting one another. Now if you are seeking for anything about other things, it will be explained in a legal ecclesia. For we are also in danger of being indicted concerning today's commotion, there existing not a single cause concerning which we shall be able to render an account concerning this riot."

three months being spent, as there came to be a plot against him by the Jews, being about to set out for Syria, he came to be of the opinion that he would return through Macedonia. Now Sopater Pyrrhus, a Berean, and Aristarchus and Secundus, Thessalonians, and Gaius of Derbe, and Timothy and Tychicus and Trophimus of Asia arranged to meet him in the [province of] Asia.

away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came to them in Troas in five days, where we tarried seven days.

7 At Paul's first visit to Troas, the vision of the man of Macedonia caused him to pass through without delay. The door was shut (16<sup>8,9</sup>). At his second visit a door was opened, in the Lord, but as he had no rest in his spirit because of the absence of Titus, he again left for Macedonia (2Co.2<sup>12-13</sup>). Nevertheless a considerable number seem to have believed. Conscious that he would probably never see them again, Paul lingers and prolongs his farewell exhortation.

9 There is a contrast as well as a similarity between the miracles wrought by Peter and Paul. Peter raised Dorcas to life as Paul raised Eutychus. Much stress is laid on the good works and almsdeeds that she did. Nothing of the kind is recorded of Eutychus. Indeed, he was not sufficiently watchful to keep awake when the apostle was preaching. Are not these types of the resurrection of Israel and of the ecclesia which is Christ's body? Those in the former resurrection (Un.20<sup>4-5</sup>) have worked as well as believed, and their resurrection is, in measure, deserved. But the saints of the present economy of grace are like Eutychus. Paul's preaching fails to keep them awake. They are drowsy and undeserving. Nevertheless, such is the superabundance of grace, that, in the secret resurrection (1Co. 15<sup>51</sup>) revealed about this time by the apostle Paul, merit has no place, for we shall live together with Him whether we are watchful or drowsy (1Thes.5<sup>10</sup>).

13 We may see something of the tense solicitude of the apostle's heart in his actions. For the sake of a few more hours at Troas he walked twenty miles after having preached most of the night. He would not trust himself in Ephesus, lest he should linger and defeat his purpose to be in Jerusalem at Pentecost. Yet he could not sail past without at least a parting word to the elders of the ecclesia he had come to love so well. It becomes more and more evident that the new departure in his ministry included the cessation of his own physical presence with the ecclesias. It was to be communicated in true spiritual style by means of epistles.

about to be off on the morrow. And he prolonged the word unto midnight. Now there were a considerable number of torches in the upper chamber where we were assembled.

9 Now a certain young man named Eutychus, being seated on the window, sinking into a deep sleep while Paul is arguing still more, being sunk from sleep, falls down from the third story, and was picked up
10 dead. Now Paul, descending, falls on him, and, embracing him, said, "Make no tumult, for his soul is in him."

11 Now, ascending and breaking bread and taking a taste, besides conversing a considerable time until 12 daybreak, so he came away. And they led the boy alive, and were immeasurably consoled.

13 Now we, coming before to the ship, set out for Assos, thence being about to take up Paul, for thus it was prescribed, he being about to 14 go on foot. Now, as he came up with us in Assos, taking him up, we 15 came to Mitylene. And, sailing from thence, the ensuing [day] we arrive abreast of Chios, yet on another we put in at Samos, yet the next we 16 came into Miletus, for Paul had decided to sail past Ephesus, so that he should not be coming to linger in the [province of] Asia, for he hurried, if it may be possible for him to be in Jerusalem the day of Pentecost. 1Co.16:8

17 Now from Miletus, sending to Ephesus, he calls for the elders of

It must be remembered that Paul's ministry was continually changing. As the apostasy of the Jews progressed, the evangel of the kingdom became less pronounced and he was entrusted with a secret, which, depending on Israel's failure, could not be made known publicly until Israel was set aside. Hence there is a great gulf between this address and the Ephesian epistle, which he wrote to them from Rome some years later. His career at this time was still imperfect. Writing to the Corinthians a short time before, he says that the saints are still in the period of minority and that maturity, or perfection, had not yet been attained (1Co.13<sup>9-12</sup>).

21 Repentance had its place in Paul's preaching while he was proclaiming the kingdom. It was associated with pardon. Henceforth he no longer preaches these, but justification and conciliation by faith alone, as is set forth in his epistles to the Romans, Corinthians, and Galatians, which were written not long before this last meeting with the Ephesian elders. The call to repentance is most frequently made to the covenant people, and usually for the purpose of averting impending judgment.

22 Paul had a profound conviction that it was God's will that he should go to Jerusalem and then to Rome. The further intimation of the spirit that bonds and afflictions awaited him did not make him flinch. The distinct character of his ministry is seen by comparing him with Peter, who left Jerusalem after he had been delivered from bonds. Paul goes to Jerusalem well aware that his physical frame would be put under restraint. This corresponds closely with the change which his ministry was undergoing. The kingdom and physical blessings were fast receding and spiritual gratuities were taking their place. Henceforth Paul's physical environment is expressive of the truth which he ministers.

27 The counsel of God concerning the kingdom, as revealed in the Hebrew Scriptures, must not be confused with the still secret purpose of God, which the apostle did not make known to the Ephesians until after his arrival at Rome. See Ephesians 1<sup>9,31-9</sup>, and Colossians 1<sup>25,27</sup>.

18 the ecclesia. Now, as they came to him, he said to them, "You are versed [in the facts], from the first day on which I stepped into the [province of] Asia, how I came
19 to be with you all the time, slaving for the Lord with all humility and tears, and the trials which befell
20 me by the plots of the Jews, how I do not shrink from informing you of anything which is expedient, and teaching you publicly and at your 21 homes, certifying to Jews as well as to Greeks repentance toward God and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now, lo! I, having been bound in spirit, am going to Jerusalem, not being aware what I will
23 meet with in it, more than that the holy spirit, city by city, certifies to me, saying that bonds and afflictions
24 are remaining for me. But I am taking account of nothing, nor am I making my soul precious to myself, till I should be perfecting my career and the dispensation which I obtained from the Lord Jesus, to certify the evangel of the grace of God.

25 And now, lo! I am aware that you all, among whom I came proclaiming the kingdom, shall see my 26 face no more. Wherefore I take you to witness in this very day that I am clear from the blood of all,
27 for I do not shrink from informing you of the entire counsel of God.

<sup>28</sup> The oversight in Ephesus seems to have been in the hands of a number of supervisors who cared for them as a shepherd tends his flock. Not one of the ecclesiastical arrangements of later days was present.

<sup>29</sup> The apostle draws a dark picture of apostasy. Wolves from without were to come in. These are spoken of as "burdensome" and probably refers to those who came in to get rather than to give. But even worse was the apostasy within. In Corinth we see the readiness with which the disciples followed a leader even when the leader refused a following. In Ephesus began the destructive work of those who set themselves up as heads of parties or divisions. Had they acted like Paul with the Corinthians the schism would have been healed. But, as they courted a personal following, it has led to the multiplied divisions of today.

<sup>32</sup> "God and the word of His grace" means much more to us than it possibly could have meant to the Ephesian elders at Miletus.

The richest storehouse of His grace had not yet been opened. The epistle to the Ephesians had not yet been penned. Yet Paul doubtless referred to these later unfoldings and committed them to that further revelation which it was not yet lawful for him to utter (2 Co. 12:4). God and the word of His grace are our only, yet sufficient, recourse in the present apostasy.

<sup>33</sup> As Priscilla and Aquila were in Ephesus, it is probable that Paul worked with them for his living as he had done at Corinth. What a marvelous example of self-sacrifice he has left! Vast as was the spiritual wealth he brought to Ephesus, he did not even take the meager dole needed for his sustenance.

<sup>37</sup> The occasion of their most poignant sorrow was the sign of their greatest benefit. They were about to exchange a subordinate place at Israel's board, for "every spiritual blessedness among the celestials" (Eph. 1:3). Paul's face may fade from view on earth, yet it was but a symptom of a higher and greater fellowship in heaven.

sors, to be shepherding the ecclesia of God, which He procures through <sup>29</sup> His own blood. Now I am aware that, after I am out of reach, burdensome wolves will be entering among you, not sparing the flocklet.

<sup>30</sup> And from among yourselves men will be arising, speaking perverse things to pull away disciples after

<sup>21</sup> themselves. Wherefore watch, remembering that for three years, night and day, I cease not admonish-

<sup>32</sup> ing each one with tears. And now I am committing you to God and to the word of His grace, which is able to edify and give the enjoyment of an allotment among all who have been hallowed.

<sup>33</sup> I covet no one's silver or gold

<sup>35</sup> those who are with me. I intimate all to you, that, toiling thus, you must be supporting the infirm, and be remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, that He said, 'It is happiness to give rather than to

<sup>37</sup> Now there came to be considerable lamentation by all, and falling on Paul's neck, they kissed him

<sup>38</sup> fondly, being especially pained at the word which he had declared that they are about to behold his face no more. Yet they sent him forward into the ship.

<sup>4</sup> We cannot take this statement "who said to Paul, through the spirit, not to be stepping aboard to Jerusalem" as a prohibition by the spirit of God, for Paul was acting in closest accord with the directions of the spirit. Rather, they knew, through the spirit, what was awaiting Paul in Jerusalem, and they, like all the disciples, were anxious to spare him the trials and sufferings which would surely be his lot if he persisted in his purpose to go on to Jerusalem. But Paul was emulating the spirit and conduct of his Master, Who set His face as a flint to go to Jerusalem, when He was well aware of all the shame and suffering which should befall Him in the city. Instead of blaming Paul for his persistence we may rather marvel at the steadfastness of his purpose and unflinching courage, not only in view of the trials ahead, but the importunities of his fond friends, who were compelled to recognize that his steadfast purpose grew out of clearer discernment of the Master's will, and so acquiesced (<sup>14</sup>).

<sup>6</sup> What demonstrations of affection were witnessed wherever the apostle paused to say farewell! Following the party with the wives and children as far as the beach, after prayer they "pull away" from one another. Surely Paul had won many hearts who could not but dread the dangers which were ahead of him!

<sup>8</sup> More than twenty years have passed since Philip, the evangelist, after his meeting with the Ethiopian eunuch, was left at Cæsarea (<sup>840</sup>). Whether he has remained there ever since, or had his headquarters there, does not seem clear, though he now seems to be a permanent resident. His duties as one of the seven do not seem to have detained him in Jerusalem.

<sup>9</sup> We are not informed whether the daughters of Philip added their warnings to the rest, but there seems to be no reason for mentioning their gift here unless they, too, confirmed the word of the others.

straight, we came to Coos, yet the next [day] to Rhodes, and thence to <sup>2</sup> Patara. And finding a ship ferrying to Phœnicia, stepping on board, <sup>3</sup> we set out. Now, Cyprus looming up, and leaving it to the left, we sailed to Syria, and came down to Tyre, for there the ship was unloading the cargo.

<sup>4</sup> Now, finding out the disciples, we stay with them seven days, who said to Paul, through the spirit, not to be stepping aboard to Jerusalem.

<sup>5</sup> Now, when the days came to fit us out, coming away, we went, being sent forward by all, together with the wives and children, till outside the city. And, kneeling on the <sup>6</sup> beach, praying, we pull away from one another, and stepped into the ship. Yet they return to their own.

<sup>7</sup> Now we, quitting the ship, from Tyre descended to Ptolemais, and, greeting the brethren, we remain one day with them.

<sup>8</sup> Now, coming away on the morrow, we came to Cæsarea, and, coming into the house of Philip the evangelist, who is of the seven, we <sup>9</sup> remain with him. Now there were four daughters of this man, virgins, prophesying.

<sup>10</sup> Now, at our staying on more days, a certain prophet came down <sup>11</sup> from Judea, named Agabus. And, coming to us and picking up Paul's girdle, binding his own feet and

<sup>11</sup> This is probably that same Agabus who came down to Antioch and prophesied the famine under Claudius Cæsar (11<sup>28</sup>). He now reappears under similar circumstances. There is to be a great spiritual famine in Israel. The indications of it are found in their treatment of Paul, which was set forth in the style of the ancient prophets. This was the last intimation he had, and it so impressed all his friends that they once more sought to dissuade him from entering the city of Jerusalem. We may see how thoroughly he was convinced that he was in the Lord's will by his reply to their entreaties. He was no fanatic, bent on carrying out his own will, unmindful of the feelings of his friends. His presence in Jerusalem was necessary, not only that he might fulfill his promise to contribute to the support of the poor of the Circumcision (Ga.2<sup>10</sup>), but that the apostasy of the nation, including the "believers" might be manifested, and thus his last and crowning ministry, which was to follow their failure, might be made known to the nations.

<sup>18</sup> The absence of the apostles from the leadership of the saints in the holy city and the elevation of James, the brother of the Lord, to the place of authority show how the apostasy had progressed amongst them. The Lord's commission to the twelve was practically ignored, while the physical relationship of James made him their chief. Even at Paul's first visit, though he saw none of the apostles except Peter, he saw James, who already seemed to have a high place (Ga.1<sup>19</sup>). At the conference concerning circumcision Peter was quite overshadowed by James, who proposes the decrees and carries his point (15<sup>13-21</sup>). Paul gives him a higher place than John or Peter, when he says that James, Cephas and John seemed to be the pillars at Jerusalem (Ga.2<sup>9</sup>). Soon afterward this becomes evident in Peter's conduct at Antioch. He acted in accord with the decrees until some came from James: then he was afraid of the Circumcision party (Ga.2<sup>12</sup>). James was at the head of those "believers" who led the Galatians astray and were the source of much of the trouble in Corinth. They hated Paul.

hands, he said, "Now this the holy spirit is saying, 'The man whose girdle this is shall the Jews in Jerusalem be binding thus, and they shall be giving him over into the hands of the nations.'" Now as we hear these things, we, as well as those in the place, entreated him not to go up to Jerusalem. Then Paul answered and said, "What are you doing, lamenting and unnerving my heart? For I am ready, not only to be bound, but to die also in Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus." Now, as he was not persuaded, we become quiet, saying, "Let the will of the Lord occur!"

<sup>15</sup> Now, after these days, taking up our baggage, we went up to Jerusalem. Now disciples from Cæsarea also, came with us, to lead us to Mnason, a certain Cyprian, an early disciple, with whom we should lodge. Now at our coming to be in Jerusalem the brethren welcome us with gratification.

<sup>18</sup> Now, on the ensuing [day], Paul had been in together with us to James, and all the elders came along. And greeting them, he unfolded, one by one, each of the things which God does among the nations through his dispensation.

<sup>20</sup> Now those who hear glorified God, and they said to him, "You are beholding, brother, how many tens of thousands there are among the Jews, who have believed, and all possess a zeal for the law. Now they were instructed concerning you that you are teaching all the Jews among the nations apostasy from

<sup>24</sup> The "belief" of the Circumcision, based on tangible evidence, such as signs and wonders, was of a very different quality from that of Paul's epistles. In our Lord's day "many believed on His name, beholding the signs which He did. Yet Jesus—He did not entrust Himself to them . . . for He knew what was in humanity" (Jn. <sup>223</sup>25). So the myriad believers in Jerusalem were still zealous for the law and circumcision and the traditional observances. Their belief did not hinder them from hating the apostle and sending emissaries to undo his work among the nations. That Paul's real danger lay in these "believers" is evident not only from the warning of the elders and the precautionary measures they proposed, but from his own prayer to be rescued from the stubborn (not the unbelievers) in Judea (Ro. <sup>1531</sup>15). Those who submitted to James' leadership could not tolerate Paul.

<sup>24</sup> It was considered an act of piety to defray the expense of the sacrifices offered by the Nazarites at the completion of their vow, especially if the men were too poor to provide them (Nu.6). Paul himself was not rich, but it was probably agreed that some of the contribution he had brought for the poor could be used for this purpose. By thus publicly associating himself with this ceremonial it was hoped he would be able to disarm the prejudice against him. Paul's course in this matter cannot be condemned. Up to this time he became a Jew to the Jews. He could circumcise Timothy, because of the prejudice of the Jews, at the same time making it evident that circumcision was nothing. Ceremonial observances were nothing, only as they might be used to conciliate those who clung to them. It is the motive rather than the act which determines what is right and what is wrong.

<sup>27</sup> As it was the season of Pentecost, Jews from all parts of the world were in Jerusalem to keep the festival. Much stress has been laid upon the first Pentecost, when the gospel of the kingdom was first proclaimed by the apostles. What a contrast is this Pentecost, when the chief herald of the kingdom is hated by the believers and nearly put to death through their opposition!

Moses, telling them not to be circumcising their children, nor to be <sup>22</sup> walking in the customs. What is it, then? Undoubtedly a multitude must come together, for they will <sup>23</sup> hear that you have come. This, then, which we are saying to you, <sup>18</sup> do. With us are four men having a <sup>24</sup> vow on them. Taking these along, be purified together with them, and bear their expenses, that they should be shaving their heads, and all will know that what they have been instructed concerning you is nothing, but you yourself also are observing the fundamentals and <sup>25</sup> maintaining the law. Now concerning those of the nations who have believed, we dispatch an epistle, deciding they are to guard themselves from idol sacrifice, as well as from blood and what is strangled, and from prostitution."

<sup>26</sup> Then Paul, taking the men along on the next day, being purified together with them, had passed into the sanctuary, publishing the full completion of the days of purification, until the offering for each one of them was offered.

<sup>27</sup> Now as the seven days were about to be concluded, Jews from the [province of] Asia, gazing at him in the sanctuary, threw the entire throng into confusion, and laid <sup>28</sup> hands on him, crying, "Men! Israelites! Help! He is the man who is teaching all men everywhere against the people, and the law, and this holy place, and, furthermore, led Greeks also into the sanctuary, and has contaminated this holy <sup>29</sup> place." For before this they had seen Trophimus the Ephesian in the

<sup>28</sup> While all the charges against Paul were false literally, they had some foundation in spirit, just as the accusation that our Lord had threatened to destroy the temple and raise it again in three days was false, yet true in the deepest sense. In his epistle to the Romans he had shown the defection of the people, the futility of the law and Jewish ceremonial and led the believers among the nations, in spirit, into the very holy of holies. Yet in fact he had not led Trophimus beyond the central wall of the barrier (Eph.2<sup>14</sup>) called the "soreg," which forbade the nearer approach of any except those of Jewish blood. He insisted that the law was holy and just and good (Ro.7<sup>12</sup>) and maintained the special privileges of the people of the covenant (Ro.9 4-5). The plan to conciliate the Christian Jews ends in a disaster which shows that Paul and the legalists are incompatible.

<sup>30</sup> Since the whole city was stirred and the people ran together, it is evident that the myriads of Jews who believed sided with their unbelieving countrymen against Paul. This is not so strange as it appears, for even to this day the bitterness of religious controversy leads those with far less between them than there was between Paul and the Judaizers to act in much the same manner. A supposed heretic is not given the consideration which is granted an unbeliever. Religion, especially that which lays stress upon ritual, has radically vitiated the standard of human morals. Paul came to them with much alms and immense spiritual wealth, all of which they spurned as their fathers had spurned his Lord.

<sup>31</sup> The fortress of Antonia was at the northwestern corner of the temple area, with turrets which overlooked all the temple courts, so that any disturbance could be immediately reported to the captain. Hence the mob did not have time to kill Paul before the soldiers rushed down and took him out of their hands.

<sup>32</sup> As the captain could not find out who Paul was he came to the conclusion that he was the Egyptian impostor who had recently led an insurrection, and concerning whom both the soldiers and the populace were still somewhat excited.

city with him, whom they inferred that Paul led into the sanctuary.

<sup>30</sup> Besides, the whole city was stirred and there came to be a running together of the people. And, getting hold of Paul, they drew him outside of the sanctuary, and immediately the doors are locked.

<sup>31</sup> And, while they are seeking to kill him, the allegation came up to the captain of the squadron that the whole of Jerusalem was in confusion, who, taking along soldiers and centurions, forthwith runs down to them. Now they, perceiving the captain and the soldiers, cease beating Paul.

<sup>33</sup> Then the captain, drawing near, got hold of him, and orders him to be bound with two chains. And he ascertained who he may be and

<sup>34</sup> what he has done. Yet others in the throng retorted some other thing. Now, at his not being able to know with certainty because of the tumult, he orders him to be led into the citadel. Now when he came on the stairs, it befell that he was borne by the soldiers because of the

<sup>35</sup> violence of the throng, for the multitude of the people followed, crying "Away with him!"

<sup>37</sup> And, being about to be led into the citadel, Paul is saying to the captain, "Is it allowed me to say something to you?" Yet he averred,

<sup>38</sup> "You know Greek, consequently you are not the Egyptian who, before these days, raises an insurrection, leading into the wilderness the four thousand men of the Assassins." Yet Paul said, "I, indeed, am a Jewish man, a Tarsian of Cilicia, a citizen of no insignificant

<sup>40</sup> God acts in marvelous ways. Human opposition works out his purposes quite as effectively as human help. What better means could be devised to get all Jerusalem as well as representatives from the dispersion together to hear this final testimony to the Messiah and His kingdom? Such an assemblage could not be called and there was probably no building large enough to hold them. It seems almost incredible that Paul should be granted an opportunity to speak to them, as Roman law and Roman soldiers were usually excessively strict and severe. Thus, in a few minutes, the whole situation is changed. We would naturally expect him to speak Greek, for all would have understood him, but, with fine tact, he speaks to them in the language none but the Circumcision could understand, which was associated in their minds with all that was sacred in the Judaism they fought for. It was the nearest approach to the language of their sacred scriptures. It was the language of Jew with Jew, just as Yiddish is with one class today.

<sup>3</sup> We cannot help admiring the opening words of the apostle. His gesture had stopped the tumult. His language had quieted them. Now his words are calculated to draw them into sympathy with him, as he shows them that he understands perfectly why they are persecuting him, for he himself had outdone them in his desire to stamp out the heresy which he now defends. Indeed he had witnesses among their leaders who could testify that he had received authority from them to carry his persecution to outside cities.

<sup>6</sup> Never before had the apostle such an opportunity to tell of his meeting with the Messiah to his own people. We may gather much from his address concerning the status of the believers in Judea at this crisis. The offense of the cross had ceased. They were regarded simply as another Jewish sect. The crowd made no demonstration against the mention of Jesus as Messiah. Myriads of them believed that and the rest tolerated it.

city. Now I am beseeching you, permit me to speak to the people."

<sup>2</sup> you now!" Now on hearing that he shouted to them in the Hebrew vernacular they tendered more quiet-

<sup>3</sup> ness, and he is averring, "I am a man, a Jew, born in Tarsus, Cilicia, yet reared in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, having been educated according to the exactitude of the hereditary law, possessing a zeal for God, according as all of you are

<sup>4</sup> today. I persecute those of this way to death, binding and giving up men as well as women to jail,

<sup>5</sup> as the chief priest also was witnessing to me, and the entire eldership, from whom, receiving letters also to the brethren, I went into Damascus, to be leading those also, being there, bound to Jerusalem, that they may be punished.

<sup>6</sup> Now it occurred, while I was going and drawing near to Damascus, about midday, suddenly out of heaven a considerable light flashes

<sup>7</sup> about me. And I fall flat, and I hear a voice saying to me, 'Saul! Saul! Why are you persecuting

<sup>8</sup> Me?' Yet I answered and said, 'Who art Thou, Lord?' And He said to me, I am Jesus, the Nazarene, Whom you are persecuting.'

<sup>9</sup> The apparent discrepancy between this and the first account of his call (<sup>97</sup>) is readily explained. The men with him heard a sound but did not recognize it as the voice "of Him Who is speaking to me." The same word means both voice and sound. They gazed at the light, but not at the One from Whom it radiated.

<sup>12</sup> In the same spirit he introduces Ananias as "a pious man according to the law," omitting all mention of his belief in the Messiah. He speaks of "the God of our fathers," and baptism, and the familiar prophetic formula of "invoking His name."

<sup>18</sup> That this is a solemn witness against the Jews is evident from the statement of the Lord that they would not receive Paul's testimony no matter how anxious he was to win them. Paul is here being used in the land as he afterward was in Rome to the dispersion to give the apostate nation a solemn intimation that God was through with them for a time and was now about to take up the nations.

<sup>9</sup> Now those who are with me gaze, indeed, at the light, yet they hear not the voice of Him Who is speaking to me. Now I said, 'What shall I be doing, Lord?' Now the Lord said to me, 'Rise, go into Damascus, and there you will be spoken to concerning all which has been set for you to do.'

<sup>11</sup> Now, as I observed nothing for the glory of that light, being led by the hand by those with me, I came <sup>12</sup> into Damascus. Now a certain Ananias, a pious man according to the law, being borne witness to by <sup>13</sup> all the Jews dwelling there, coming to me and standing by, said to me, 'Brother Saul, recover your sight!' And I, in the same hour, look up <sup>14</sup> to him. Now he said, 'The God of our fathers selects you to know His will, and to be acquainted with the Just One, and to hear the voice of His mouth, that you shall be His witness to all mankind of what you have seen and hear. And now, why do you defer? Rise, be baptized, and bathe off your sins, invoking His name.'

<sup>17</sup> Now it occurred, at my returning to Jerusalem and while I am praying in the sanctuary, I came to be in <sup>18</sup> an ecstasy and to perceive Him saying to me, 'Hurry, and come quickly out of Jerusalem, because they will not be assenting to your testimony concerning Me.' And I said, 'Lord, they are versed in the fact that I was jailing and lashing those in the synagogues who are believing <sup>20</sup> on Thee. And when the blood of

<sup>21</sup> Here we have the cause of Israel's apostasy laid bare. They were to be a channel of blessing to the other nations, but, instead, they kept all Jehovah's gifts to themselves and refused to share them with the less favored nations. They were like the slave who owed ten thousand talents, but, having nothing to pay with, is forgiven the debt. But when he found a fellow slave who owed him much less, he refused to be merciful and had him cast into prison. Consequently his Lord was indignant and gave him up to the tormentors (Mt.18<sup>23</sup>). Israel is the ten thousand talent debtor. The nations were their fellow-slaves. Israel was pardoned, but, since they refuse to pass on the blessing to the nations, the pardon is withdrawn and the nation has been in the hands of the tormentors ever since. Only a few years after this Jerusalem was destroyed, the nation scattered and driven from the land to wander up and down the earth, despised by the nations whom they had wronged.

<sup>25</sup> On several previous occasions Paul had been protected from the fury of his own countrymen by the intervention of the Roman power. Gallio had turned the tables against them (18:12-17), and the scribe of Ephesus had cleared him (19<sup>37</sup>), but never before had he appealed to his Roman citizenship as a defense against his own kin. In Philippi he had used it, not to shield himself, but for the sake of the evangel. Now, however, that the nation in the land is finally given over to judgment, he has no hesitancy in claiming his rights as a Roman citizen. He had already been beaten five times by the Jews (2Co.11<sup>24</sup>) and it was needless to bear any more.

<sup>25</sup> As he was a Roman citizen, the captain had no right to bind Paul, much less to scourge him before trial. But the fact that he had bound him illegally put Paul in an advantageous position, to which was added the respect due to one who had received such a citizenship by birth, while the captain had obtained it by purchase. "I am a Jew" availed nothing with the Jews. But on his declaration that he is a Roman, his word is instantly accepted. It was a capital offense to claim unlawfully the possession of the citizenship.

Stephen, Thy witness, was shed, I myself also was standing by and endorsing it, and guarding the garments of those who are assassinating him.' And He said to me, 'Go! seeing that I shall be delegating you afar to the nations.'—

<sup>22</sup> Now they heard him until this word, and they lift up their voice, saying, "Away with such a one from the earth, for it is not befitting for him to live!" Besides, at their clamoring, and tossing their garments, and casting dust into the

<sup>24</sup> air, the captain orders him to be led into the citadel, telling them to interrogate him by scourging, that he may recognize for what cause they shouted thus at him.

<sup>25</sup> Now as they stretch him out with the thongs, Paul said to the centurion standing by, "Is it allowed you to scourge a Roman <sup>26</sup> man, and uncondemned?" Now the centurion, when he hears it, coming to the captain, reports, saying, "What are you about to be doing? For this man is a Roman."

<sup>27</sup> Now the captain, approaching, said to him, "Tell me, are you a Roman?" Now he averred, "Yes."

<sup>28</sup> Now the captain answered, "I acquire this citizenship with a vast sum." Yet Paul averred, "Yet I have been so born." Immediately, then, those about to be interrogating him withdraw from him. Now the captain also was afraid, recognizing that he is a Roman and that he had bound him.

<sup>30</sup> Now, on the morrow, resolved to know with certainty of what he is being accused by the Jews, he looses

<sup>1</sup> Paul now stands before the Sanhedrin, in which body he seems to have had a vote after the death of Stephen. Doubtless many who were there were old associates of his and most of them were acquainted with his life and doctrines, so that the inquiry was a mere form and bound to arrive at no conclusion. Paul, contrary to his usual custom of speaking first in a winning way of his auditors, commences immediately with his own defense, and seems to apologize for the fact that his Roman citizenship had entitled him to this hearing before them. This so enraged the chief priest, who probably took it as a hint that he was beyond his jurisdiction, that he has him slapped on the mouth. There were constant changes in the high priestly office in those days, which accounts for the ignorance of the apostle as to the personality of the high priest. Josephus tells us that Paul's prediction was fulfilled in the Jewish war, when this hypocritical president of the Sanhedrin was murdered by assassins.

Paul had the privileges of a Greek (21<sup>37</sup>), a Hebrew (22<sup>3</sup>), and a Roman (22<sup>27</sup>). The man that Christ found had been separated and trained and circumstanced by God.

<sup>6</sup> The Pharisees had this in common with the faith of Christ, that they believed in a resurrection of the dead, which was, however, denied by the Sadducees. This question was the cause of perpetual strife between them. Paul, seeing how useless any further appeal to the council would be, determined to shift the contention to the subject of resurrection, in which he would have the Pharisees on his side and thus they would be diverted into strife amongst themselves. The result justified his plan, for the Pharisees immediately become violent partisans of his and some are even willing to allow that a spirit—which the Sadducees did not believe in—had spoken to him. They thought to use his testimony as an argument against their enemies the Sadducees. Thus it has ever been with the Jews. Their own internal strife was seldom laid aside even in face of the gravest crisis, and became the cause of many of their miseries.

him and orders the chief priests and the entire Sanhedrin to come together. And, leading Paul down, he stands him among them.

23 Now Paul, looking intently at the Sanhedrin, said, "Men! Brethren! I, in all good conscience, have used my citizenship for God until <sup>2</sup> this day." Now the chief priest Ananias enjoins those standing beside him to beat his mouth. Then <sup>3</sup> Paul said to him, "God is about to beat you, whitewashed wall! And you are sitting to judge me according to the law, and are ordering me to be beaten illegally!" <sup>4</sup> Now those standing by say, "You are reviling God's chief priest!" <sup>5</sup> And Paul averred, "I was not aware, brethren, that he is chief priest. For it is written that 'You shall not be declaring evil of your people's chief.'"

<sup>6</sup> Now Paul, knowing that one party is Sadducees, yet the other Pharisees, cries in the Sanhedrin, "Men! Brethren! I am a Pharisee, a son of Pharisees. Concerning the expectation and resurrection of the dead am I being judged." Now <sup>7</sup> at his saying this, there came to be a commotion of the Pharisees and Sadducees, and the multitude is <sup>8</sup> rent. For Sadducees, indeed, are saying there is no resurrection, nor messenger, nor spirit, yet Pharisees are avowing both.

<sup>9</sup> Now a great clamor occurred, and some of the scribes of the party of the Pharisees, rising, fought it out with one another, saying, "We are finding nothing evil in this man. Now if a spirit or messenger speaks <sup>10</sup> to him—" Yet much commotion oc-

<sup>10</sup> The captain was more concerned that a Roman citizen should not be injured than to get their report, and so sends his soldiers to rescue him a second time from their clutches. It was well that he was again taken into the custody of the Romans, for the Jews would soon have torn him to pieces.

<sup>11</sup> After such experiences we may well imagine that the future looked black to the persecuted saint. Now, if ever, he might yield to discouraging forebodings. At just such periods in the apostle's ministry he received divine help in the form of a vision to comfort and encourage him. In Corinth, when Jewish opposition threatened to wreck his testimony, the Lord spoke to him "Fear not!" And the reason was that God had a purpose to fulfil which demanded his continuance (18<sup>9</sup>). Again, in the midst of the storm on his journey to Rome, he is again assured, "Fear not, Paul" (27<sup>24</sup>). So now, he receives the definite and cheering assurance that it is the purpose of God that he should fulfil his wish to see Rome. Besides, the Lord commends his testimony in Jerusalem, which was such a failure seemingly. This word of approval should deter us from criticising any of the apostle's acts, for they undoubtedly were in line with God's purpose, and that, rather than our own provincial standard of right and wrong, is the true test of conduct. Results are not the test of a true ministry. Paul at Jerusalem was as great a failure as Noah, Elijah and Jeremiah. But for this commendation, Paul would seem to be out of the will of God.

<sup>12</sup> In contrast with this serene assurance is the malignant activity of the Jews, who seem to have recovered from their temporary occupation with their own differences. The apostle now becomes the object of a plot to assassinate him. Thus the Roman citadel becomes his fortress rather than his prison. If the conspirators had been true to their oath, more than forty of them would have died of self-inflicted famine, but the Talmud assures us that they could be absolved. What a conscienceless load of crime was cloaked under the religious zeal of these pious Jews!

curring, the captain, being afraid lest Paul should be pulled to pieces by them, orders the troop to descend and snatch him out of their midst, and to lead him into the citadel.

<sup>11</sup> Now the Lord, the ensuing night, standing by him, said, "Have courage! For as you certify to that which concerns Me in Jerusalem, thus you must testify in Rome also."

<sup>12</sup> Now on the coming of day, the Jews making a conspiracy, anathematize themselves, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till <sup>13</sup> they may kill Paul. Now there were more than forty who make <sup>14</sup> this cabal, who, approaching the chief priests and the elders, say, "We anathematize ourselves with an anathema to taste nothing till <sup>15</sup> we may kill Paul. Now, then, you inform the captain together with the Sanhedrin, so that he may be leading him down to you, as though about to investigate more exactly that which concerns him, yet we, before he draws near, are ready to assassinate him."

<sup>16</sup> Now the son of Paul's sister, hearing of the ambush, coming along and entering into the citadel, <sup>17</sup> reports it to Paul. Now Paul, calling one of the centurions to him, averred, "Lead this young man to the captain, for he has something
<sup>18</sup> to report to him." He, indeed, then, taking him along, led him to the captain and is averring, "The prisoner, Paul, calling to me, asks me to

<sup>16</sup> Paul's family was influential in the Hebrew world. His nephew was in a position to learn the secret plans of the Jewish leaders.

<sup>18</sup> Roman citizens, while awaiting trial, were kept in custody in several ways, according to circumstances and the rank of the prisoner. Public custody consisted in being thrust into the common jails and confined in dungeons of the worst kind. They were kept in chains or kept in stocks as in the case of Paul and Silas at Philippi. Free custody was simply a guarantee on the part of some person of high rank that the person would appear for trial. Military custody consisted in putting the person in charge of a soldier who was responsible for the prisoner with his own life. It was usual to chain the prisoner's right hand to the soldier's left. Sometimes, however, the military custody was relaxed to the extent of merely putting the prisoner under the observation of a soldier, without chains. The soldiers, of course, relieved one another in military custody. There seems to be no doubt that Paul's imprisonment was a mild form of military custody, with liberty of access for his friends and relatives.

<sup>23</sup> The Roman provinces were divided into armed and unarmed, the former being under the authority of the emperor, the latter under the senate. Roughly speaking, the garrisoned provinces were on the frontiers, or where the country had not been fully subjugated. Tacitus and Josephus tell us that the fifth, tenth, and fifteenth legions were stationed in Cæsarea, Ptolemais, or Jerusalem a few years after this. They were largely recruited in the province where they were located. The Jews were, however, exempt from military duty, so that the soldiers in Judea were drawn from the Syrian and Greek population. A legion consisted of more than six thousand infantry, perhaps as many auxiliaries, besides a regiment of cavalry. Such was the force at the captain's command from which he drew the detachment which conveyed Paul to Cæsarea, the seat of the governor of the province.

<sup>26</sup> Claudius Lysias was a diplomat and did not stop at a simple lie to gain credit for himself for having protected a Roman citizen from the Jews.

lead this youth to you, who has something to speak to you."

<sup>19</sup> Now the captain, taking hold of him by the hand, and retiring to privacy, inquired to ascertain

"What is it that you have to report to me?" Now he said that "The Jews agreed to ask you so that you may lead Paul down tomorrow to the Sanhedrin, as though about to ascertain somewhat more exactly

<sup>21</sup> concerning him. You, then, should not be persuaded by them, for there are in ambush for him more than forty of their men, who anathematize themselves neither to eat nor to drink till they should be assassinating him. And now they are ready, anticipating the promise from you."

<sup>22</sup> Then, indeed, the captain dismisses the youth, charging him "Talk out to no one that you disclose these things to me." And calling certain two centurions to him, he said, "Make ready two hundred soldiers, so that they may go as far as Cæsarea, and seventy cavalry, and two hundred slingers, from the third hour of the night

<sup>24</sup> [nine o'clock]. Besides, present beasts that, mounting Paul, they should be safely conveying him to Felix, the governor." He writes a letter after this model:

<sup>28</sup> As in the case of our Lord, witness after witness testified that Paul had done nothing deserving the bonds he endured or the death with which he was threatened. All who heard his case concurred in the opinion that the accusations against him were unfounded and false. Yet it was in this way that he fulfilled that part of his ministry foretold by Ananias which he hitherto had no opportunity of carrying out. He had witnessed to the Jewish people and to the nations. Now he was to testify before kings (<sup>9</sup>15) and thus close the kingdom testimony. His undoubted innocence, coupled with his Roman citizenship, greatly mitigated the terrors of a long imprisonment. The divine reason for this seems to be that the testimony to the Jews in the land was fulfilled, and Paul was, as a consequence, put beyond their power. All that they are allowed to do aids him in fulfilling his final kingdom testimony to the kings of the land, and provides for his journey to Rome, the greatest center of earthly power at the time, there solemnly to close up the kingdom proclamation altogether. Paul's imprisonment was a sign that the earthly kingdom was being withdrawn, otherwise its herald would be delivered from the earthly rulers. And this is emphasized by the fact that the nation who rejected it is the cause of his imprisonment.

<sup>34</sup> It was a nice point with the Roman authorities not to interfere with one another's jurisdiction. Thus Pilate, when our Lord was brought before him, learning that he was of Galilee, which was in Herod's jurisdiction, sent Him to Herod (Lu.23<sup>7</sup>). Felix does not seem to have hated Paul's Cilician origin, probably because the complaints against him were not sustained, and the alleged crimes were committed mainly in Jerusalem.

<sup>1</sup> Ananias, the chief priest, lost no time in following the man who had called him a whitewashed wall. He hires a professional pleader against Paul, probably an Italian, acquainted more accurately with the Roman law, and the flattery to which governors were accustomed. As at the trial of the Master it was really Pilate before Christ, so now the judges are being judged, though judgment is not denounced here as in the Sanhedrin.

intending to get to know the charge because of which they indicted him, I led him down to their Sanhedrin.

<sup>29</sup> Him I found being indicted concerning questions of their law, yet not having one indictment deserving of death or bonds. Now on its being divulged to me that there will be a plot against the man, forthwith I send him to you, charging the accusers also to speak against him before you. Farewell."

<sup>31</sup> The soldiers, indeed, then, according to their directions, taking up Paul, led him through the night <sup>32</sup> to Antipatris. Now, on the morrow, they return to the citadel, leaving the cavalry to come away <sup>33</sup> with him, who, coming into Cæsarea, and giving up the letter to the governor, present Paul also to him.

<sup>34</sup> Now, reading it, and inquiring of what prefecture he is, and ascertaining that he is from Cilicia, <sup>35</sup> "I shall give you a hearing," he averred, "whenever your accusers also should be coming along," ordering him to be guarded in Herod's pretorium.

<sup>3</sup> The smooth eulogy of Felix was most undeserved. He was a freedman of Claudius and brother of that Pallas who was a favorite of the emperor. Having been a slave and now owing his elevation to influence at Rome, it is no wonder Tacitus tells us that "in the practice of all kinds of lust and cruelty he exercised the power of a king with the temper of a slave." He had Jonathan, one of the high priests, assassinated because he protested against some of his practises. It must be acknowledged, however, that he did rid parts of Judea from robbers, and especially, at about this time, drove out the Egyptian for whom Paul was mistaken by Claudius Lysias. His acts stirred the Jews against the Roman rule so that, when he retired from the province and went to Rome, he was tried for maladministration, but acquitted by Nero through the influence of his brother Pallas.

<sup>5</sup> Tertullus makes three charges against Paul. The first was against Roman law, stirring up treason against the government. The second was against the law of Moses, as they supposed, a ring-leader of the Nazarenes. The third was against both Roman and Jewish law, profaning the sanctuary, for the Roman law protected the Jews in the exercise of their worship.

<sup>6-8</sup> The omission of "and want to judge by a law of ours, yet captain Lysias, coming with much force, leading him away out of our hands, orders his accusers to come to you" is based on the evidence of almost all the ancient manuscripts and has the consent of almost all of the editors of the text. It is most unlikely that an orator like Tertullus would so damage his own influence as to accuse captain Lysias of a wrong, or suggest that Felix had no right to judge the case.

<sup>10</sup> Paul quickly disposed of the two charges involving the Roman law. Since coming to Jerusalem only a few days before he had done nothing upon which they could base their charge of sedition. Neither had he profaned the temple. The other charge he admits, and makes it the occasion of his testimony. His dignified and truthful introduction is in marked contrast to that of his accuser.

welcoming it, most mighty Felix, with all thankfulness. Now, lest I may be hindering you still more, I am entreating you to hear us concisely in your leniency. For, finding this man a pestilence and stirrer of insurrections among all the Jews of the inhabited earth, besides a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes, who tries to profane the sanctuary also, of whom we lay hold also, from whom you will, by examining him, be able to recognize all of these things concerning which we are accusing him." Now the Jews also agreed, alleging these things to be so.

<sup>10</sup> And Paul, the governor nodding to him to speak, answered, "Being versed in the fact that for many years you have been a judge to this nation, I am defending that which concerns myself cheerfully, seeing that you can recognize that it is not more than twelve days since I came up to worship in Jerusalem. <sup>12</sup> And they neither found me in the sanctuary arguing with any one or making a concourse of the throng, either in the synagogues, <sup>13</sup> or at the city, nor can they substantiate to you that concerning which they are now accusing me.

<sup>14</sup> Yet this I am avowing to you, that, according to the way which they are terming a sect, thus am I offering divine service to the hereditary God, believing all which has been written, according to the law <sup>15</sup> and in the prophets, having an expectation in God, which these themselves also are anticipating, that there is to be a future resurrection of the just as well as the unjust.

<sup>20</sup> Having thus defended himself of all but the theological charge against him, Paul dismisses that by showing that the fundamental doctrinal difference was the same as that which kept the Pharisees and Sadducees in continual strife with one another. If it was criminal to differ they should be indicted and one party punished. When they had settled their differences it would be in order to try the sect of the Nazarenes.

<sup>22</sup> The "justice" of Rome, like all human justice, was based on expedience, rather than equity. Felix would have set Paul free, only he knew it would displease the Jews. He invents an excuse for deferring matters, for he evidently had no thought of consulting captain Lysias, who, on his own confession, could make nothing out of the case. One point seems to have impressed Felix. Paul had come to Jerusalem with much money. Could he or his friends be persuaded to part with some of it? This seems to have controlled his course until he was relieved of his place. On this account he not only lets Paul have much freedom but desires that he shall be able to get into communication with his friends. This is why he gives him audience and hints that, given occasion, he would call for him. It is not that he would hear him when he had a "convenient season," but that he would make any season convenient if stumbling block, toward God and men, continually.

<sup>17</sup> Now, after the lapse of more years, I came along doing alms for <sup>18</sup> my nation, and making offerings, in which they found me, purified in the sanctuary, not with a throng, nor with tumult. Now there were some Jews from the [province of]
<sup>19</sup> Asia, who were obligated to be present before you and accuse me, if they may have anything against me.
<sup>20</sup> Or let these themselves say what injury they found when I stood in the
<sup>21</sup> Sanhedrin, or concerning this one voice with which I cry out, standing among them, that, 'Concerning the resurrection of the dead I am being judged today by you.'

<sup>22</sup> Now Felix makes them postpone, being acquainted more exactly with that which concerns the way, saying, "Whenever captain Lysias may come down, I shall investigate your <sup>23</sup> affairs." He directs the centurion that he is to be kept, and is to be at ease, and to prevent no one of his own to be subservient to him.

<sup>24</sup> Now after some days Felix, coming along with Drusilla, his wife (being a Jewess), sends after Paul and hears him concerning the faith
<sup>25</sup> into Christ Jesus. Now as he is arguing concerning righteousness, and self-control, and the future judgment, Felix, becoming affrighted, answered, "Go now. Yet, given occasion, I shall be calling given the proper encouragement. He was after a bribe. Yet the Lord used this mercenary motive to protect Paul from the Jews and to lead him before kings and to bring him to Rome.

24 The great moral courage of the apostle is manifest in his intercourse with Felix and his wife Drusilla, whom the king had enticed from her own husband by the help of a magician. To speak to such a notorious man, who slew the high priest for presuming to expostulate with him concerning his unlawful acts, while he was his prisoner and fully at his mercy, about righteousness, self-control and future judgment, so that the governor was affrighted, was to anticipate the powers of the coming kingdom, where righteousness shall reign.

1 Festus seems to have been a just man, though he tried to favor the Jews, as one in his position naturally would. The Jews had found that they could do nothing with Felix in Paul's case, and seem to have dropped the matter. But the accession of the new procurator gave them another opportunity to have him put to death and they are not slow to take advantage of it. Festus is more respectable than Felix. His name means "festive," and consistently with it he prefers the pleasurable to the right. He summarily disposed of the fact of Christ and His resurrection as a religious vagary because he was essentially worldly. The world holds festival while the saints suffer.

7 From Paul's reply we may imagine that the charges against him were much the same as those which had been preferred before. But they produced no evidence and the governor seems to have been convinced of his innocence. He should have freed Paul, but such a course would have brought his administration into disrepute at its very inception. Consequently he proposes a course which the Jews would approve, but he leaves it open to Paul to reject or accept. He proposes to bring the case back to Jerusalem. But Paul is through with Jerusalem and the Jewish nation. God has made it plain that his next testimony is in Rome.

27 Now, two years being fulfilled, Felix got a successor, Porcius Festus. And, wanting to curry favor with the Jews, Felix left Paul bound.

25 Festus, then, stepping into the prefecture, after three days went up 2 to Jerusalem from Cæsarea. And the chief priests and foremost of the Jews inform him against Paul, and 3 they entreated him, requesting a favor against him, so that he should be sending after him [to bring him] into Jerusalem, making an ambush 4 to assassinate him by the way. Festus, indeed, then, answered that Paul is to be kept in Cæsarea, yet he himself was about to be going 5 out quickly. "Those, then, among you," he is averring, "who are able, step down with me. If there is anything amiss in the man, let them accuse him."

6 Now, tarrying among them not more than eight or ten days, descending to Cæsarea, on the morrow, being seated on the dais, he orders Paul to be led forth. Now at his coming along, the Jews who have descended from Jerusalem stand about him, bringing many and heavy charges against him which they had not the strength to 8 demonstrate, Paul defending that "Neither against the law of the Jews, nor against the sanctuary, nor against Cæsar did I any sin."

9 Now Festus, wanting to curry favor with the Jews, answering Paul, said, "Are you willing to go up to Jerusalem to be judged there before me concerning these 10 things?" Yet Paul said, "I am standing at the dais of Cæsar, <sup>10</sup> Paul's reply is a marvelous compendium of his defense and his rights as a Roman citizen. Festus had supreme criminal jurisdiction in Judea over all except Roman citizens. Even these, should they be caught in some gross crime, such as banditry or piracy, could be condemned and executed by the provincial governors, with no recourse to any higher tribunal. Festus' consultation with the council was to determine this point. But it was all too evident that Paul was not guilty of such open violations of the law. Hence his appeal must stand. Festus had no right to try his case.

<sup>11-12</sup> One of the legal advantages of a Roman citizen was his right to appeal to Cæsar. But this right was not permitted to burden the supreme court of the empire with trifling cases, and the governor of a province was empowered to investigate such claims and to decide whether or not the appeal should be granted.

<sup>13</sup> The Roman law required that the person of a prisoner who had appealed to the emperor should be sent to Rome for trial at the earliest moment, but he must be accompanied by an official report of the case up to the time of the appeal. All of the acts and documents, the depositions of the witnesses on both sides, and a record of the judgment of the lower tribunal had to be sent to aid the emperor in his consideration of the case. Here is where Festus was in a quandary. The evidence, if such it could be called, was quite unintelligible to him. He did not wish to make his government ridiculous at its very commencement by sending a prisoner against whom he could not even formulate a definite indictment.

<sup>22</sup> Herod Agrippa II, king of Chalcis, was familiar with the Jewish law and customs from his youth and had the power of appointing the high priest. Together with his sister, Bernice, he had come to pay a complimentary visit to the newly appointed procurator. Here was an opportunity for Festus to get the information he required concerning Paul's case, for the king was the most likely one to help him formulate an indictment, as he was an ex-

where I must be judged. I have injured the Jews not at all, as you also are very ideally recognizing. If, then, indeed, I am injuring, and I have committed anything deserving death, I am not refusing to die. Yet if there is nothing in that of which these are accusing me, no one can surrender me to them as a favor. I am appealing to Cæsar!"

<sup>15</sup> man left prisoner by Felix, concerning whom, at my coming to Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews inform, requesting his conviction. To whom I answered that it is not the custom for Romans to surrender as a favor any man ere the accused may have the accusers face to face, besides getting a defensive position concerning the indictment.

<sup>17</sup> At their coming together in this place, then, making no postponement, when next I am seated on the dais, I order the man to be led forth, concerning whom the accusers, when they stood up, brought not a single charge of the wickedness I suspected, but they had certain questions concerning their own religion against him, and concerning a certain Jesus, who has died, whom pert in all questions relating to the Jews, besides having spent much of his youth in Rome. To him, then, Festus details Paul's case.

<sup>23</sup> Cæsarea was the capital of Judea and thus provided Paul with an audience composed of the principal political personages of the province. To this was added Agrippa and his retinue, altogether such a company as few heralds of the kingdom could hope to find. Besides, Agrippa had doubtless heard concerning the Lord and His disciples, and especially of Paul, whom he was hoping to hear. All the notables of the city as well as the military leaders assembled with them on the morrow to hear Paul's last proclamation of Messiah in the land.

What thoughts must have surged in the breast of the apostle as he is led forth to face this display of worldly power! Could anything be more expressive of the fact that, through Israel's apostasy, the longed-for kingdom, which he had proclaimed in the land and among the dispersion, was now withdrawn? Hence his defense contains no allusion to the theocratic rule to be established by Messiah. To have spoken before kings and governors before this crisis and declared the destruction of human governments by the advent of Messiah would have been suicidal. Now that the kingdom recedes, he is less and less occupied with it.

<sup>24</sup> The well chosen words of Festus show that, though he could not understand the feeling of the Jews against Paul, he was convinced of his innocence. The examination which followed was in no sense a trial, for there were no accusations. The apostle is given liberty to speak concerning himself, yet he skilfully brings in his meeting with the Lord and his commission, so that all the elements of the evangel are put before his hearers. It is but one more example of God's inimitable ways of turning evil into good, of making human opposition work out His purpose. Paul, in his chain, and persecuted by his own people, was performing a ministry which could be accomplished in no other way.

<sup>20</sup> Paul alleged to be alive. Now I, being perplexed by the questioning about these things, said, If he may be intending to go to Jerusalem and to be judged there concerning these things? Now when Paul appeals to be kept for the emperor's investigation, I order him to be kept till I shall send him up to Cæsar."

<sup>21</sup> Now Agrippa to Festus: "I myself also intended to hear the man." "Tomorrow," he is averring, "you shall hear him." Then, on the morrow, at Agrippa and Bernice's coming with much pagantry, and entering into the audience chamber, together with captains and prominent men of the city, and, at Festus' order, Paul was led forth. And Festus is averring, "King Agrippa, and all men present with us, you are beholding this man concerning whom the entire multitude of the Jews pled with me, in Jerusalem as well as in this place, imploring that he must by no means live longer. Now I grasped that he has committed nothing deserving of death, yet at his making this appeal to the emperor, I decide to send him—concerning whom I have nothing certain to write to the lord. Wherefore I led him before you, and especially before you, king Agrippa, so that, the examination occurring, I should have something to write."

<sup>27</sup> For it seems to me irrational, sending a prisoner, not also to signify the charges against him."

<sup>6</sup> Paul's plight has often been repeated in the subsequent history of Christendom. His offense consists in believing the scriptures—which his opponents claimed to believe. Strange to say, the most bitter persecution, to those who believe God, comes, not from the irreligious world, but from those who claim that they, too, believe the scriptures, but who do not seem to have received the spirit of love which pervades them.

<sup>7</sup> The Jews were expecting the Messiah and the kingdom, and should have rejoiced in the fulfillment of their expectation. Instead, they fly in the face of their fondest hopes, when they reject the proclamation of Messiah.

concerning yourself." Then Paul, stretching out his hand, made his defense. "Concerning all of which I am being indicted by Jews, king Agrippa, I have deemed myself happy to be about to make my defense before you today, especially as you are an expert, versed in all the customs as well as the questions of the Jews. Wherefore I am beseeching you to hear me patiently.

<sup>4</sup> My life, indeed, then, from youth, which came to be from the beginning among my nation, and in Jerusalem, all the Jews are acquainted with, knowing me from the very first, should they be willing to testify, that according to the strictest sect of this ritual of ours, I live a Pharisee. And now, being judged, I stand in expectation of the promise made by God to our fathers, to which our twelve tribes, earnestly offering divine service night and day, are expecting to attain. Concerning which expectation I am being indicted by Jews, O king!

<sup>8</sup> What! Is it being judged unbelievable by you, if God is rousing the dead?

<sup>9</sup> I, indeed, then, suppose myself bound to commit much contrary to the name of Jesus the Nazarene, which I do also in Jerusalem. And many of the saints besides, I lock up in jails, obtaining authority from the chief priests. Besides I deposit a ballot to despatch them.

<sup>11</sup> And at all the synagogues, often punishing them, I compelled them to blaspheme. Besides, being exceedingly maddened against them, I persecuted them as far as the outside

<sup>12</sup> This is the fullest account of Saul's call, and the only one which gives his commission to the nations. He forbore to mention this in speaking to his enraged kinsmen (<sup>22</sup><sup>7</sup>) as he here omits all reference to Ananias. He uses only such parts as suit the place and purpose.

<sup>14</sup> All fell to the earth at first, but later stood up (<sup>9</sup><sup>7</sup>) as Saul himself was told to do. The fact that the Lord spoke in Hebrew is shown in the other accounts by the form of the name Saul. It is spelled differently and is not declined, as is the Greek in other places.

<sup>14</sup> with me. And, all of us falling down to the earth, I hear a voice saying to me in the Hebrew vernacular, 'Saul! Saul! Why are you persecuting Me? It is hard for you to be kicking against the goads!' 20:26-27
<sup>15</sup> Now I say, 'Who art Thou, Lord?' Now the Lord said, 'I am Jesus,
<sup>16</sup> Whom you are persecuting. But rise and stand on your feet, for I was seen by you for this, to select you for a deputy and a witness of what you perceived as well as that in which I will be seen by you, extricating you from the people and from the nations, to whom I am
<sup>17</sup> commissioning you, to open their eyes to turn them about from darkness to light and from the authority of Satan to God, for them to get a pardon of sins and an allotment among those who have been hal-
<sup>18</sup> lowed by faith that is in Me.'

<sup>20</sup> enly apparition, but first to those in Damascus, besides in Jerusalem also, as well as the entire province of Judea, and to the nations, I reported that they are to be repenting and turning back to God, engaging in acts worthy of repentance. 20:21

<sup>22</sup> tempted to lay hands on me. Happening then, on assistance from God, I have stood until this day,

the resurrection of Christ
 22 It is evident that the apostle did disclose secrets which cannot be found in Moses and the prophets. One of these was the secret of the resurrection, made known to the Corinthians (1Co.15<sup>15</sup>). Another was the secret of the evangel, which occupies much of the epistle to the Romans (Ro.16<sup>25</sup>). We must either take the statement that he had said nothing but what Moses and the prophets said of future occurrences in a general way of all his past course, or take it strictly of his conduct since his apprehension by the Jews. If the latter is the case, it becomes clear why, at this time of comparative leisure, no epistles proceed from his pen and there is a gap of several years between the Preparatory and the Perfection epistles. For the time being he seems to have confined himself to the closing drama of the kingdom. This aspect of his ministry is the only one, of course, which finds any place in the present account. Until the kingdom was fully set aside, he could disclose no more secrets.

24 The idea that light was to come to the nations through such a channel was too much for Festus. He did not deride learning. He might acknowledge that light could come through study. The word here used is the same which is elsewhere rendered scripture or writing. He objected, not to human attainments, but to divine revelation. This is shown in Paul's appeal to Agrippa, who had believed the prophets without becoming mad.

26 This holds good of all the facts of the gospel. The evangel has no esoteric doctrines. Even its "mysteries" are for the enlightenment of all (Eph. 3<sup>9</sup>).

28 Agrippa was not "almost persuaded." His remark is sarcastic to a degree. Christian was not the honorable term it is today, but a name of reproach and scorn. He suggested that Paul is too hasty in supposing that, as he believed the prophets, he would believe the evangel. But Paul ignores his sarcasm and turns it into a sober wish. He could wish that all that noble company had the true treasures of nobility and wealth which were his in Christ! Thus ends Paul's testimony in Judea. This part of his course is finished.

witnessing to small as well as to great, saying nothing outside of what the prophets as well as Moses 23 speak of future occurrences—if it be the suffering Christ—if He, the first of a resurrection from among the dead, is about to be announcing light to the people as well as to the nations."

24 Now, as he is making this defense, Festus is averring with a loud voice, "You are mad, Paul! Much scripture is deranging you to 25 madness!" Yet Paul is averring, "I am not mad, most mighty Festus, but I am declaiming declarations of truth and sanity. For the king is an adept concerning these things, to whom I am speaking boldly also, for I am persuaded that none of these things is eluding him, for this has not been committed in a corner. King Agrippa, are you believing the prophets? I am aware that you are believing!"

28 Yet Agrippa to Paul: "Briefly are you persuading me, to make a Christian!" Yet Paul, "May I ever wish to God, even briefly and greatly, not only you, but also all who are hearing me today, to become a kind such as I am also, outside of these bonds!"

30 And the king stood up, and the governor, besides Bernice and those 31 sitting with them. And, retiring, they talked with one another, saying that, "This man is not committing anything deserving death or 32 bonds." Now Agrippa averred to Festus, "This man could have been released if he had not appealed to Cæsar."

<sup>6</sup> The Alexandrian ship was somewhat out of her course in this harbor unless it had business there also, but the prevailing west wind would account for this. Egyptian vessels were amongst the largest of that day, and as this one was engaged in the trans-Mediterranean traffic it must have been of considerable size.

<sup>7</sup> Cnidus had an excellent and sheltered harbor, to which, doubtless, they would have gone for the winter if the wind had allowed it.

<sup>27</sup> Now, as it was decided that we are to sail away to Italy, they gave over Paul, as well as some other prisoners, to a centurion named Julius, of the Imperial squadron. Now, stepping on board a ship of Adramyttium, about to sail for places in the [province of] Asia, we set out, with us being Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica. Now, on another [day], we were led down to Sidon. And Julius, using Paul humanely, permits him to go to friends for casual care.

<sup>4</sup> And setting out thence, we sail under the lee of Cyprus, because the winds are contrary. And, sailing through the ocean off Cilicia and Pamphylia, we come down to Myra, of Lycia. And the centurion, finding there an Alexandrian ship sailing to Italy, has us step on board of it. Now, for a considerable number of days, sailing tardily and hardly coming off Cnidus, the wind not leaving us toward it, we sail under the lee of Crete, off Salmone, and hardly skirting it, we came to a certain place called Ideal Harbors, near which was the city of Lasea.

<sup>9</sup> Now, a considerable time elapsing, and sailing being already hazardous, because the Fast also has already passed by, Paul exhorted them, saying, "Men! I behold that sailing is about to be with damage and much forfeit not only of the lading, and of the ship, but of our souls also." Yet the centurion was persuaded by the navigator and

<sup>11</sup> Anciently the steersman, or helmsman, or pilot, was captain of the ship, but his duties in larger vessels corresponds to our navigator. The man who chartered the ship traveled as his own supercargo, and was as much interested in the safety of his lading as the navigator was in his ship. Hence his counsel was sought. One lost his ship and the other his cargo for rejecting Paul's advice. The souls on board (including these two men) were given to Paul, and he lost none of them; even though their action endangered all.

<sup>12</sup> Ideal Harbors, was not, as its name implies, a sheltered enclosure, but rather an open roadstead. Hence the majority of those on board thought best to reject the Jewish prisoner's advice and seek better winter quarters.

<sup>13</sup> As the south wind came up they probably lost all confidence in the pessimistic Jew who had warned them of danger ahead.

<sup>14</sup> This typhoon or hurricane was so violent that the vessel could not keep its course, but was carried off in another direction. Had it not been so strong they could have luffed to the wind and used it to carry them to Phoenix.

<sup>16</sup> Cauda is usually called Claudia, but as this reading is corrected in Sinaiticus, and the modern name omits the "l," we have made it Cauda.

<sup>16</sup> It was customary, in ancient times, to drag a small boat in the water behind the ship. So long as the vessel was being driven by the gale this was safe, but when its speed was temporarily reduced there was great danger of the boat pounding the vessel to pieces or being itself broken up. Hence they held it off, and then hoisted it on board.

<sup>17</sup> "Lowering the gear" in order to keep from running into the Syrtis, on the north African coast, must have consisted in lying-to, or setting a small canvas to bring the vessel up as near the wind as possible. This would stop her progress and change her course.

the man who chartered the ship, rather than by what is being said by Paul.

<sup>21</sup> And there being much abstinence, then Paul, standing in the midst of them, said, "You were obligated indeed, O men, yielding to me, not to have set out from Crete and to gain this damage and for-

<sup>23</sup> That Paul, a mere prisoner, should have presumed to give advice at all shows how quickly he obtained recognition. Now that all wished that he had been heeded, he easily assumes the leadership. They deserve to be lost, and the vessel and its cargo are lost, through rejecting Paul's words. Yet, notwithstanding their disobedience, he is graciously granted the souls of all who are sailing with him. We cannot believe that this shipwreck is merely an interesting adventure in Paul's career without any bearing on the subject of the book of Acts. We have seen how this account gives us only what concerns the kingdom testimony, leaving out important incidents in his life which have no bearing on it. This shipwreck is not mentioned in his later epistles. Hence it must have a close connection with the fortunes of the kingdom. We take it as a parable of Paul's closing kingdom ministry and the fortunes of those who are associated with him in it. They are in the ship and sustained by it just as the nations, under Paul's early ministries are in the kingdom and find their sustenance at Israel's board. But the kingdom is fast going to pieces, Israel as a nation is nearing its end, and now the question is, what is to become of the believers among the nations to whom Paul had preached? Will they be swallowed up in Israel's downfall? The answer is pictured in the salvation of all who sail with Paul and the loss of the ship with its cargo. The nations lose everything connected with the kingdom but are safely carried through the catastrophe. They lose all earthly hopes, but gain the higher heavenly place accorded them in Paul's epistles from Rome.

<sup>27</sup> Those on board ship have the sensation that land is nearing them when the ship approaches a shore and sailors speak of it in this way. Experienced sailors know when they are near land, even if it is invisible, by the distant roar of the breakers and other indications. The danger now lay in striking something in the dark so that they should not be able to reach the shore and save themselves.

<sup>22</sup> feit. And now I am exhorting you to be cheerful, for not one soul from among you will be cast away, more
<sup>23</sup> than the ship. For a messenger of God, Whose I am, to Whom I am offering divine service also, stood
<sup>24</sup> beside me this night, saying, 'Fear not, Paul! You must stand before Cæsar. And lo! God has graciously granted to you all those sailing <sup>25</sup> with you.' Wherefore, be cheerful, men, for I am believing God that it will be even in the manner which <sup>26</sup> has been spoken to me. Yet we must fall on a certain island."

<sup>28</sup> country to be nearing them. And, sounding, they found twenty fathoms. Now, after a bit of an interval, sounding again, they found fifteen <sup>29</sup> fathoms. Besides, fearing lest at some time we should be falling on rough places, pitching four anchors out of the stern, they wished for the coming of day.

<sup>30</sup> Now at the mariners seeking to flee out of the ship, and lowering the skiff into the sea under pretense of being about to stretch anchors out of the prow, Paul said to the centurion and the soldiers, "Except these should be remaining in the ship, you cannot be saved."

<sup>33</sup> Now, until the day was about to come, Paul entreated all to partake of nourishment, saying, "Today is the fourteenth day, apprehensive, <sup>34</sup> It is practically impossible to prepare meals in such a storm as they had encountered and the constant toil and apprehension would take away all desire for food. But now that land was near they doubtless remembered Paul's predictions and were more than willing to listen to him as he cheered and encouraged them. We hear no more of the navigator and the owner of the cargo, and even the centurion obeys Paul, who acknowledges his thankfulness to God before all and gives them an example of faith by taking his fill of food.

<sup>38</sup> The lighter they could make the ship the better chance they had of beaching her near the shore. To do this it was necessary also to control her course, so they hoisted a sail to the wind and unlashd the rudders, which had probably been securely fastened, as steering was impossible. Unlike modern vessels, the ships of that day had two rudders, which they would now use to steer the ship for the beach.

<sup>41</sup> It would seem that some current carried them into a channel, or the place "where two seas met," and hindered them from reaching the beach they were headed for. They ran aground in the channel itself.

<sup>41</sup> Every detail of this description fits perfectly with the environs of what is now called St. Paul's bay on the northern coast of Malta. The depth of the sea, a channel made by the island of Salmonetta, and the evidences of a beach at the mouth of the Westara creek, all identify this as the probable location.

<sup>42</sup> As a Roman guard was ordinarily responsible for his prisoners with his own life, we can better understand the inhuman suggestion of the centurion's soldiers. Once again Paul becomes the saviour of the prisoners even as he had been used but a few hours before to prevent the sailors' desertion and thus saved the lives of the very soldiers who now wished to despatch him. The centurion was too just to kill the one to whom he and the rest owed their very lives.

you are constantly abstinent, taking nothing. Wherefore I am entreating you to partake of nourishment, for this belongs to this salvation of yours, for not a hair from the head of one of you shall be destroyed." Now, saying this, and taking bread, he thanks God before all, and, breaking it, begins to eat. <sup>36</sup> Now, becoming cheerful, they also <sup>37</sup> all took nourishment. Now we were, in all, two hundred seventy-six <sup>38</sup> souls in the ship. Now, being sated with nourishment, they buoyed the ship, casting out the wheat into the sea.

<sup>42</sup> Now the soldiers' counsel was that they should kill the prisoners, lest some, swimming out, may flee <sup>43</sup> away. Yet the centurion, intending to save Paul through it, prevents them from their intention. And he orders those who are able to swim, diving, to be off to land <sup>44</sup> first, and the rest, these, indeed, on

<sup>1</sup> There was an island in the Adriatic called Melida or Melita, which some suppose was the scene of the shipwreck. It is in the gulf of Venice. The ancient Adria, however, included more than the present Adriatic, and was applied to all of the Mediterranean between Sicily and Greece. The modern condition of Malta is no index of what it was in those days. "Barbarians" (for which we have no English equivalent) was applied by the Greeks to any who did not speak Greek, and their conduct makes it clear that they were far from being barbarous or savage. There are no vipers in Malta today, but venomous reptiles always disappear with the increase of population. The Venetian Melita could not possibly be reached with the wind blowing so as to drive them toward the Syrtis quicksand and there is no reason to think that it changed. They would pass innumerable islands on the way as if by a miracle. And their subsequent journey would have been overland or by a different route from Melita.

<sup>1</sup> Just as Matthew, who gives us the rejection of the kingdom as proclaimed by our Lord Himself, closes with a millennial foreview when He told them, in anticipation of that day, "all authority in heaven and on earth is given unto Me," so here, where we have the rejection of the kingdom as proclaimed by His apostles, we are regaled with a millennial scene to remind us that the kingdom is merely delayed, and will come in its proper time. First the serpent is destroyed, corresponding to the binding of Satan at the beginning of the thousand years, then blessing flows out to the nations. Paul, as a herald of that day, is able to pick up serpents without any harm coming to him, but lays hands on those who are ailing, and they have ideal health (Mk. 16:18).

planks, yet those on anything from the ship, and thus all came safely through on the land.

28 And, being safely through, then we recognized that the island is called Melita. And the barbarians tender us not the casual philanthropy, for, kindling a fire, they took us all in, because of the imminent shower and because of the cold.

<sup>3</sup> Now at Paul's twisting together a certain quantity of kindling and placing it on the fire, a viper, coming out of the warmth, fastens on his hand. Now, as the barbarians perceived the wild beast hanging from his hand, they said to one another, "Undoubtedly this man is a murderer, whom, being safely through the sea, Justice lets not live." Indeed, then, twitching the wild beast into the fire, he suffered no evil, yet they were apprehensive that he was about to become inflamed or suddenly fall down dead. Yet, after much apprehension, and beholding nothing coming to be amiss with him, retracting, they said he is a god.

<sup>7</sup> Now in the region about that place were freeholds belonging to the foremost man of the island, named Publius, who, receiving us amiably, lodges us three days. Now it occurred that the father of Publius was lying down, pressed with a fever and dysentery. Paul, entering to him and praying, placing his hands on him, heals him.

 THRU-BAVED OUT OF-THE SEA this YET BECOMING AND THE

8 Three months busy with blessing thus came out of the catastrophe. Had the ship wintered in Cnidus, as they had wished, or at Ideal Harbors, as Paul proposed, the ship and cargo might indeed have been saved, but a much greater loss would have been sustained by the islanders. Thus God always gets a greater good out of a lesser evil.

11 The Latin equivalent of Dioscuri would be "Castor and Pollux". But this gives the impression that it was a Roman vessel, whereas most of the commerce with Rome was carried in foreign bottoms, and this was probably a Greek ship, having a Greek name.

12 There is a local tradition that Paul himself founded the first ecclesia in Syracuse. The account reads as though the centurion allowed him the utmost liberty.

15 As Paul had written an epistle to Rome there must have been a considerable company of believers there. They showed something of their regard for him by coming out to welcome him on the way. One company came as far as Appii Forum. Another delegation met him at Three Taverns, about ten miles nearer the city. No wonder Paul thanked God and took courage. He was now near the goal that he had set before him several years before, and though a prisoner of Rome, he had almost all the freedom he could wish. Indeed, from this time he preferred to call himself a "prisoner of the Lord", as he recognized that it was the Lord's will.

17 It is eminently fitting that the final and decisive rejection of the kingdom should follow its proclamation in Rome, the seat of the world's greatest empire at the time. It had been proclaimed in Jerusalem and rejected by the rulers of the Jews in the land, now it has been fully heralded among the Jews of the dispersion, and they, too, have rejected it wherever Paul has gone. The most signal sign of their apostasy is his imprisonment. It reveals the height of their obstinacy. Rome would free him. But his own nation loads with chains the one who would free them from the Roman yoke.

9 Now on this occurring, the rest also of those in the island, having infirmities, approached and were 10 cured, who honor us with many honors also, and, at our setting out, they placed on board what was for our needs.

11 Now after three months, we set out in an Alexandrian ship with the ensign Dioscuri, which has wintered 12 in the island. And landing at Syracuse, we stay three days, 13 whence, coming about, we arrive at Rhegium, and the south wind coming on after one day, we came the 14 second [day] to Puteoli, where, finding brethren, we were entreated to stay with them seven days. And thus we come to Rome.

15 And thence, the brethren, hearing about us, come to meet us as far as Appii Forum and Three Taverns, perceiving whom, Paul, thanking 16 God, took courage. Now when we came into Rome, Paul was permitted to remain by himself together with a soldier who guarded him.

17 Now it occurred, three days after, that he calls together the foremost of the Jews. Now on their coming together he said to them, "I, men, brethren, doing nothing contrary to the people or to the hereditary customs, was given up a prisoner out of 18 Jerusalem, into the hands of the Romans, who, examining me, intended to release me, because not one cause of death existed in me.

19 Now at the contradiction of the Jews, I am compelled to appeal to Cæsar, not as though having any-

<sup>23</sup> Paul must have had many precious meetings with his believing brethren. He must have made known to them those transcendent truths which he teaches in his Perfection Epistles. If the Acts were giving an account of his career or of his evangel, it stops short at the most important point. As at "history of the commencement of the Christian church" it is the most disappointing of all books, for the truths which distinguish the present economy, found in Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians, were not made known until its close and are never referred to, much less taught. Those events in Paul's career which are of the utmost importance for present truth, from his sojourn in Arabia to the dispatch of Tychicus with the Perfection Epistles, are quite overlooked in this account. Paul's sojourn in Rome marks the beginning of that vast work of the spirit of God which has continued down to the present time. Yet all we are told here is the disappointing meeting with the Jews! Instead of closing with a song of victory and sending the church on its triumphant way, he quotes Isaiah's doleful prophecy concerning the apostate nation, showing the failure of the kingdom proclamation and the reason why it should no longer be heralded. What stronger evidence is needed to show that the Acts is not concerned with the so-called "church"? It is no mere history of the apostolic times. It is concerned only with those events which chronicle the fortunes of the earthly kingdom. It deals with a transitional period when the church was still dependent on the favored nation and had a subordinate place in the reign of Messiah over the earth, as promised by the Hebrew prophets.

<sup>26</sup> This marvelous prophecy has had a threefold fulfillment in Israel: when they rejected Jehovah (Isa. 69:10), when they rejected the Lord (Mt. 13:14,15), and, in this present instance, when they reject the testimony of the spirit, through His apostles. Israel, in part, has become calloused, until the fulness of the nations may be entering (Ro. 11:25).

<sup>20</sup> thing to accuse my nation of. For this cause, then, I call for you, to see and speak [to you]. For on account of the expectation of Israel this chain is lying about me."

<sup>21</sup> Now they say to him, "Neither receive we letters concerning you from Judea, nor does any of the brethren coming along report or speak anything wicked concerning you. Now we count it worthwhile to hear from you what your disposition is. For indeed, concerning this sect, it is known to us that it is being contradicted everywhere."

<sup>23</sup> Now, setting a day for him, the majority came to him in the lodging, to whom he expounded, certifying to the kingdom of God, and persuading them concerning Jesus, from the law of Moses as well as the prophets, from morning till dusk. And some, indeed, were persuaded by what was said, yet some disbelieved. Now there being disagreements one with another, they were dismissed, Paul making one declaration, that, "Ideally the holy spirit speaks through Isaiah the prophet, to your fathers, saying,

'Go to this people and say,
'In hearing, you will be hearing
And may by no means understand,
And observing, you should be observing
And may by no means be perceiving,"

<sup>27</sup> For the heart of this people is made stout,
And they hear heavily with their ears,
And they shut their eyes,
Lest at some time they may be perceiving with their eyes,
And should be hearing with their ears,
And may understand with their heart,
And should be turning about,
And I shall be healing them.'

<sup>29</sup> Verse 29 is not in the three manuscripts on which this version is based.

<sup>31</sup> This proclamation of the kingdom would include its present abeyance and future manifestation. "That which concerns our Lord Jesus Christ" is purposely vague, and is the only hint in the whole book of the greatest of all Paul's ministries, those mysteries or secrets which could not be revealed until the kingdom had been finally rejected. Paul's prison epistles were written during this period.

<sup>28</sup> Let it be known to you, then, that to the nations was this salvation of God dispatched, and they will hear."

<sup>30</sup> Now he remains two whole years in his own hired house, and he welcomed all those going in to him, proclaiming the kingdom of God, and teaching that which concerns the Lord Jesus Christ, with all boldness, unforbidden.

PAUL'S EPISTLES

PAUL'S EPISTLES are for the present. All the rest of Scripture finds its interpretation and application either before or after the present secret administration. Paul alone gives the truth for the ecclesia which is the body of Christ. This is found nowhere outside of his writings. Israel and the nations occupy all other parts of divine revelation. What is true of them in other eras and eons must not be mixed with the present truth or it will lead to confusion and error. All Scripture is profitable, as a revelation of God's ways, but it must not be applied outside its proper place.

The main subject of the Greek Scriptures is the kingdom of Israel. It is refused in the four accounts of our Lord's ministry, it is again rejected in the treatise called Acts, it is reaffirmed in Hebrews, James, Peter, John, and Jude, and it is realized in the Unveiling. In Paul's epistles it is in abeyance.

It is God's purpose to bless the nations through Israel. But when Israel, the channel of blessing, fails, this becomes impossible. In Paul's epistles the nations are blessed during Israel's defection. The sphere of blessing is changed from earth to heaven. Repentance and pardon are replaced by justification and reconciliation. Grace replaces mercy.

The scope of Paul's epistles, both in time and in space, far transcends all the rest of revelation. He is not confined to the earth, but includes the whole universe in God's grand climax of reconciliation (Col. 1<sup>20</sup>). He is not confined to the eons, or ages, but reveals a purpose formed before they began, and not concluded until after their consummation. His range reaches from a time long anterior to the first of Genesis to a period long past the final vision of the Unveiling.

Paul's writings naturally fall into two divisions, his epistles to the ecclesias, and his personal letters to Timothy, Titus and Philemon.

Paul wrote nine epistles to seven ecclesias. They arrange themselves into three groups. The epistles in each group are very closely related, the first epistle in each, Romans, Ephesians and 1 Thessalonians, setting forth the truth didactically, while the other epistles of the same group are explanatory and corrective. The best commentaries on Romans are Corinthians and Galatians; on Ephesians, Philippians and Colossians; and Second Thessalonians supplements the first epistle.

The Thessalonian group we have called the Promise Epistles, because they deal with the expectation of our Lord's return. The Romans group we have named the Preparatory Epistles because they deal with the transitional era which prepared the saints for the final revelation found in the Ephesian group, which we therefore style the Perfection Epistles.

Each group is characterized by one of the abiding trinity of graces, faith, expectation and love (1 Co. 13<sup>13</sup>). The following outline will serve to show the groups and the relation each epistle sustains to the others in its group.

ROMANS

SINNER, would you know how to be just before God? Read Romans!

Saint, would you be at perfect peace with God? Ponder Romans!

The writer of these words became acquainted with God through a study of this epistle. It is emphatically the portion of God's word which is adapted to show all men God's present grace, preparatory to the higher unfoldings of Ephesians.

All revelation previous to Paul's severance to the ministries which are expounded in Romans, as given through the Lord and His apostles, was limited to the Circumcision, concerned with the kingdom promised by the prophets to Israel, and falls far short of the grace revealed through Paul in this epistle. They promised a probationary pardon on repentance, but here we have a complete vindication or justification or acquittal founded entirely on faith.

As is shown by the literary framework, Romans is dominated by three great doctrines: Justification, Conciliation and Sovereignty. God's own righteousness, which He shares with the sinner, His own peace, which He imparts to the believer, and His own indomitable will, which forms the immovable basis of all blessing, are the bulk and burden of this epistle. As justification is commonly degraded to a mere pardon, or forgiveness, and conciliation is unknown, and God's sovereignty is denied, there is need to urge God's beloved saints to give the great truths of this epistle the place in their hearts and lives which they deserve.

Every doctrine in this epistle is discussed twice: first from the viewpoint of the individual, and again from the larger, national standpoint. The latter half of the third and the fourth chapters show clearly and exhaustively how anyone may be vindicated in the sight of God. The latter half of the ninth and the tenth chapter shows how this favor finds its way to the nations while Israel fails to effect it through the law. So, too, God's present attitude of peace toward all mankind and toward those who are justified is fully set forth in the fifth, sixth, seventh and part of the eighth chapters. The bearing of this on Israel and the nations is fully unfolded in the eleventh chapter. That God is for His people is shown in the end of the eighth chapter. His sovereign will with regard to Israel and the nations is shown in the succeeding chapter.

It is exceedingly important to recognize the national scope of the ninth, tenth and eleventh chapters. Much confusion has resulted from applying parts of these chapters to individuals rather than to nations. Nothing in these chapters which is said of Israel nationally, in apostasy, was true of Paul himself and the few faithful ones in the nation. These are not hardened, though the nation, as such, is. Israel, nationally, has not attained to righteousness, yet many in the nation cannot be included in this sweeping assertion. The nation, as such, not the faithful remnant, has stumbled. It is Israel as God's national witness in the earth which is figured by the olive tree. Some of the branches (the unbelieving majority) are broken off. The nations as a whole (the wild olive tree) are grafted into the cultivated olive tree. Now that the nations, as such, are apostatizing, they are about to be cut out. Individual believers in the nations will not be cut out, for their faith would keep them in.

PAUL TO THE ROMANS

<sup>3</sup> The evangel is not concerning the sinner but concerning God's Son. Like all men, He was a union of two elements, flesh and spirit. As to His flesh He was a descendant of David, but as to His spirit, He was from God. This is powerfully evidenced by the fact that His Father has given Him life in Himself (Jn.5<sup>26</sup>) so that He never entered the presence of death without vanquishing it. The fact that He raised Jairus' daughter (Mk.5<sup>35,42</sup>), the widow of Nain's son (Lu. 7<sup>11-16</sup>), and Lazarus (Jn.11<sup>44</sup>) proves conclusively that He is the Son of God.

<sup>5</sup> Paul had obtained this unparalleled grace from the risen Son of God when he met Him on the road to Damascus and, later, was given a distinct commission, in accord with this grace, to evangelize all the nations, to whom the twelve apostles were not sent (Gal. 2<sup>9</sup>). James and Peter wrote to their Jewish brethren among the nations, but none of the Circumcision, not even Christ Himself, was sent to any nation but Israel. Paul alone, of those whose writings we have, was the minister of Christ Jesus to the nations (15<sup>16</sup>).

<sup>8</sup> The emphasis on faith is characteristic of this and its companion epistles. The Circumcision mixed faith and works, but Paul insists on sheer, unassisted faith, on which alone can be founded the pure, unadulterated grace which he is dispensing.

<sup>9</sup> Cut off, in large measure, from the ceremonial worship of his nation at Jerusalem, Paul carries it on wherever he is, in spirit, by the proclamation of this evangel, for the exaltation of Christ's sacrifice in the evangel is a far sweeter fragrance to God than the literal offerings of the law.

PAUL, a slave of Christ Jesus, a called apostle, having been severed for God's evangel (which He promises before through His prophets in the holy scriptures), concerning His Son (Who comes of the seed of David according to the flesh, Who is being designated Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection of the dead), Jesus Christ, our Lord, through Whom we obtained grace and apostleship for faith obedience among all the nations, for His name's sake—among whom are you also, the called of Jesus Christ, to all who are in Rome, beloved by God, called saints:

Grace to you and peace from God, our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>8</sup> FIRST, indeed, I am thanking my God through Jesus Christ concerning you all, that your faith is being announced in the whole world.
<sup>9</sup> For God is my witness, to Whom I am offering divine service in my spirit in the evangel of His Son, how unintermittingly I am making mention of you, always in my prayers beseeching, if somehow, sometime, at length I shall be prospered, in the will of God, to come to you. For I am longing to see you, that I may be sharing some spiritual grace with you for you to be established: yet this is to be consoled together among you through one another's faith—yours as well as mine.

<sup>13</sup> Now I do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, that I oftentimes purposed to come to you (and was prevented hitherto) that I should be having some fruit among

14 The "Greek" must not be confounded with the so-called "gentile", or man of the nations. The Greek is the cultured, refined person, sometimes in contrast with the Jew, the religious man, but here in contrast with the uncultured or "barbarian".

14 "Barbarian" seems to be the only available term in English for this Greek word. It denoted especially one who did not speak Greek, the language which nearly all the world spoke at that time.

16 The evangel is God's power for salvation—nothing else can take its place. There is no other power in the universe which can turn men to God. All the modern substitutes and expedients, sanitary or social, impassioned oratory or emotional excitement, cannot save or make men right before God. The evangel alone, without any additions or apologies, is able to justify anyone who believes.

17 This evangel imparts God's own righteousness to those who accept it. This is unspeakably more than the pardon or forgiveness proclaimed at Pentecost by the twelve apostles.

17 When the law failed utterly, and Israel was far gone in apostasy, the prophet fell back upon God's unconditional promises, and made the memorable statement "The just by faith shall live" (Hab.24). Now that Israel is again apostate, this rule once more supersedes the law.

THE CONDUCT OF MANKIND

18 The apostle now takes up the conduct of those of mankind who had no written revelation. Nature alone ought to teach them much about the Deity. His attributes are in some degree revealed in His works in creation.

21 Such a knowledge of God called for worship and thanksgiving. Instead, they degraded His glory by making images of Him like themselves or even the lower orders of creation. Idols may be nothing in themselves, but, as they are supposed to represent the Deity, it is of the utmost importance that they do not suggest false ideas about Him. Hence He abhors all images and would not allow His people to harbor them. Christ is the One Image that truly represents Him.

24 There is no surer road to degradation than to degrade the object of our worship.

you also, according as among the rest of the nations.

14 To Greeks as well as to barbarians, to the wise as well as to the foolish, am I a debtor. Thus this eagerness of mine to preach the evangel to you also, who are in Rome. For I am not ashamed of the evangel, for it is God's power for salvation to everyone who is believing—to the Jew first, and to the Greek as well. For in it God's righteousness is being revealed out of faith for faith, according as it is written: "Now the just by faith shall be living."

18 For God's indignation is being revealed from heaven on all the irreverence and injustice of men who are retaining the truth in injustice, because that which is known of God is apparent among them, for God makes it manifest to them. 20 For His invisible attributes are described from the creation of the world, being apprehended by His achievements, as well as His imperceptible power and divinity, for 21 them to be defenseless. Because, knowing God, they do not glorify or thank Him as God, but were made vain in their reasonings, and their unintelligent heart is darkened. 22 Alleging themselves to be wise, they are made stupid, and they change the glory of the incorruptible God into the likeness of an image of a corruptible human being and flying creatures, and quadrupeds and reptiles.

24 Wherefore God gives them up, in the lusts of their hearts, to the uncleanness of dishonoring their bodies among themselves, who alter the truth of God into the lie, and

<sup>25</sup> There may be an allusion here to the prevalent custom of worshipping the Roman emperor. It has often occurred that, when men have attained to great eminence, they have demanded and received divine honors. Alexander the Great claimed such homage.

<sup>26</sup> The prevailing immorality in ancient times was largely attributable to the character of the gods they worshipped. The younger race of gods who held sway on Olympus were usurpers who had murdered the older gods, and were guilty of innumerable deeds of violence and full of sensuality and injustice. If their gods behaved so, it was not difficult for men to emulate their example and endorse such actions in others as well.

The failure of Christendom is largely due to the fact that God is unknown, and His place filled by a fierce, vindictive caricature, who is restrained from his thirst for vengeance by the intervention of an effeminate mediator who takes the place of the Christ of God.

<sup>1</sup> The argument here is inexorable. The man who judges others must be prepared to submit to the same judgment himself. There is no surer way of condemning himself than by sitting in judgment on those who commit the sins of which he is guilty.

In the day of judgment there will be little need to call witnesses against mankind, for their own reasonings among themselves and the standards of justice, however low, which they apply to their neighbors, are sufficient to condemn all.

The constant effort to uplift humanity ignores the true cause of human depravity. These things are the result of refusing to recognize God. One of the most alarming signs of modern times is the increasing desire to eliminate all reference to God in every sphere of life. Education must be strictly Godless, business has no place for the Deity, society shuns all mention of Him, and even many of the so-called churches have little more than a formal recognition of an unknown God. We must be prepared for more and more of the crime waves which periodically surge over the earth, as well as the complete break-down of the moral fibre of so-called civilization.

are venerated, and offer divine service to the creature beside the Creator, Who is blessed for the eons! Amen! <sup>24</sup>

<sup>26</sup> Therefore God gives them over to dishonorable passions, for their females, as well, alter the natural use into that which is beside <sup>27</sup> nature. Likewise even the males as well, deserting the natural use of the female, were inflamed in their craving for one another, males with males effecting indecency, and getting back in themselves the retribution of their deception which must be. And according as they do not test God, to have Him in recognition, God gives them over to a disqualified mind, to do that which is not befitting,
<sup>30</sup> implacable, unmerciful: who, recognizing God's just statute, that those committing such things are deserving of death, not only are doing them, but are endorsing also them that are committing them.

<sup>2</sup> Wherefore you are defenseless, O man!—everyone who is judging—for in what you are judging another you are condemning yourself, for you who are judging are committing the same. Now we are aware that God's judgment is in accord with the truth against those who are committing such things.

<sup>3</sup> Yet are you counting on this, O man, who are judging those committing such things, and are doing

<sup>3</sup> Is it not most unreasonable for the sinner to suppose that God's judgment of him will be less searching than his condemnation of the sins of his fellow men? The fact that His judgment is delayed and that He continues to give the blessings of creation with a bountiful hand should lead to reconsideration and amendment.

<sup>6</sup> It is well to consider the basis on which the judgment of mankind will proceed. It is not all one-sided. God will not only sentence the evil, but reward the good—if such there be. That there are none to claim His rewards does not alter the great fact which is here laid down as the just basis of God's dealings with mankind. He will be paying each one according to his acts. No one can say this is not just and right. He is just as ready to reward the good as to punish the bad. All that is needed is someone to live up to the standard, and He will give such a one life for the eons—the same life which those who believe get through Christ as a gratuitous gift. To say that it is idle to speak thus, since no one can possibly claim such an award, betrays a misapprehension of the underlying purpose of judgment. This is not, as commonly supposed, the condemnation of wrongdoers, but rather the payment of what is due, good as well as bad, that so the justice of God's character may be revealed. Judgment, as a revelation of God, would be most misleading if it made no provision for reward as well as punishment. If no one is able to claim the reward it will not change the essential fact that such a righteous foundation underlies God's throne.

the same, that you will be escaping the judgment of God? Or are you despising the riches of His kindness and forbearance and patience, being ignorant that God's kindness is leading you to repentance? Yet, in accord with your hardness and unrepentant heart you are hoarding for yourself indignation in the day of indignation and revelation of the just judgment of God, Who will be paying each one in accord with his acts: to those, indeed, who by endurance in good acts are seeking glory and honor and incorruption, eonian life, yet to those of faction, and stubborn, indeed, as to the truth, yet persuaded to injustice, indignation and fury, affliction and distress, on every human soul which is effecting evil—of the Jew first and of the Greek as well—yet glory and honor and peace to everyone who is working at that which is good—to the Jew first, and to the Greek as well.

<sup>11</sup> For there is no partiality with <sup>12</sup> God, for as many as sinned without law shall be lost also without law, and as many as sinned in law <sup>13</sup> will be judged through law. For the listeners to law are not just with God, but the doers of law will be justified. 3:26

<sup>14</sup> For whenever they of the nations, having no law, may be doing by nature what the law demands, these, having no law, are <sup>15</sup> a law to themselves, who are displaying the action of the law written in their hearts, their conscience joining its witness, and their reasonings between one another accusing or defending them, in the day <sup>16</sup> when God will be judging the hidden things of humanity, accord-

<sup>16</sup> Much of the judgment which obtains among men is unjust and oppressive because of their inability to uncover the real truth: But in the divine judgment the hidden things will be revealed and a just sentence will be based on all the facts. Doubtless the motives will be laid bare as well as the acts themselves and thus the quality of each action will receive due recognition.

<sup>17</sup> Now the apostle is about to devote particular attention to the Circumcision. Hitherto he has appealed to nature, or instinct, and to conscience. All these combine to condemn those who had no access to the revealed will of God. The Jew, who had the law, considered himself in an entirely different class, so the apostle devotes a considerable section to prove to him that the possession of the law did not make him immune from judgment, but rather invited a severer sentence.

<sup>23</sup> The responsibility of being the repository of the form of knowledge and truth was very lightly felt by the Jew. He did not realize the gravity of his position. His conduct was now no longer a matter of private concern; it involved the name and honor of God. If he kept the law it would mark him as a just and holy man, and God and His law would receive praise. As it was, however, his actions did not comport with the light in which he boasted, and as a result God's name was brought into dishonor among the nations.

<sup>25</sup> God's judgment, let us remember, is based on acts; His gifts are granted to faith. We have not yet come to the bestowal of gifts. The rite of circumcision was the outward sign, in the first place, of an inward faith, but it degenerated into a mere mark of privilege. But misused privilege is of no avail at the bar of God.

<sup>28</sup> In the judgment the outward visible tokens will count for nothing. Only that which is vital, in spirit, which will meet the scrutiny of God, will receive recognition. Men may applaud many an action which God detests, and may condemn that which God approves. Human standards and outward appearances will weigh little in the judgment.

ing to my evangel, through Jesus Christ. <sup>16:26</sup>

<sup>17</sup> Lo! you are being denominated a Jew, and are resting on law, and are boasting in God, and know the will, and are testing what things are of consequence, being instructed <sup>18</sup> out of the law. Besides, you have confidence in yourself to be a guide <sup>19</sup> of the blind, a light of those in darkness, a discipliner of the imprudent, a teacher of minors, having the form of knowledge and truth in the law.

<sup>21</sup> You, then, who are teaching another, are you not teaching yourself? who are proclaiming not to be stealing, are you stealing? who are saying not to be committing adultery, are you committing adultery? who are abominating idols, are you despoiling the sanctuary? who are boasting in a law, through the transgression of the law are you dishonoring God? For because of you the name of God is being blasphemed among the nations, according as it is written.

<sup>25</sup> For circumcision, indeed, is of benefit if you should be putting law into practise, yet if you should be a transgressor of law, your circumcision has become uncircumcision.

<sup>26</sup> If the Uncircumcision, then, should be maintaining the just requirements of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision? And the Uncircumcision who, by instinct, are discharging the law's demands, shall be judging you, who through letter and circumcision, are a transgressor of law.

<sup>28</sup> For not what is apparent is the Jew, nor yet what is apparent is <sup>29</sup> flesh circumcision; but that which is hidden is the Jew, and circumcision is of heart, in spirit, not in

1 It would almost seem, from the preceding argument, that the advantages enjoyed by the Jews brought them no real benefit. But this seems to be true only of those who disbelieved and abused the advantages accorded them. Those of faith among them received untold benefit, like their father Abraham.

2 The greatest treasure in all the world was once the exclusive possession of the Jews. To them were confided the oracles of God. Today we, who in that day had no revelation from God, are entrusted with the same treasure, yet with jewels infinitely more precious than were ever in their care. This epistle is one of them. Have we anything like a true sense of our responsibility? Have we explored and enjoyed these treasures in any measure as they deserve? May God grant that the present attempt to open this treasure house to all His saints from the highest to the humblest, may lead to a greater appreciation of the infinite value of this sacred deposit.

5 The painful contrast between the fearful failures of His people and His holy law had one good effect. It magnified His righteousness. The question arises whether, since their unrighteousness commends His righteousness, He has the right to be indignant at it. Indeed (we might add) since all sin is a foil for His glory, how can He condemn it? But, how then can there be any judgment at all? That God is able to bring good out of evil is no excuse for the commission of evil, far less an incentive to do evil.

9 In the judgment there will be no privileged class. Religious Jews as well as cultured Greeks are all under sin. The proof of this for the Jews is found in the very oracles in which they boast.

10 These passages are all quoted in support of the charge that the Jew, equally with those of other nations, is subject to the judgment of God.

10-18 The whole quotation is taken from the Septuagint of Ps. 142-3 except that it begins "The Lord out of heaven stoops over the sons of mankind, to perceive if they are understanding or seeking out God".

letter, whose applause is not of men, but of God.

3 What, then, of the Jew's prerogative, or what is the benefit of 2 circumcision? Much in every manner. For first, indeed, that to them were entrusted the oracles of 3 God. For what if some disbelieve? Shall not their unbelief nullify
4 the faith of God? May it not come to that! Now let God be true, yet every man a liar, even as it is written:

"That so Thou shouldst be justified in Thy sayings,
And shalt be conquering in Thy judgment."

5 Now if our injustice is recommending God's righteousness, what shall we assert? Not that God Who is bringing on indignation is unjust (I am saying it as a man)?
6 May it not come to that! Else how shall God be judging the world?
7 Yet if the truth of God superabounds in my lie, for His glory, why am I also still being judged as a 8 sinner, and not (according as we are calumniated and according as some are averring that we are saying) that "We should be doing evil that good may be coming" (whose judgment is just)?

9 What then? Are we privileged? Undoubtedly not, for we previously charge Jews as well as Greeks to 10 be all under sin, according as it is written:

"Not one is just—not even one.

11 Not one is understanding, not one is seeking out God,

12 All avoid Him:

At the same time they were useless.

Not one is doing kindness:

There is not even one!

13 Their throat is an open sepulcher;
They defraud with their tongues;
The venom of asps is under their lips;

The Conduct of Mankind

19 The passages from the Psalms might be turned by the Jews to apply to the nations. But the apostle rightly insists that what is written in the law is binding upon those under the law. Having previously silenced the non-Jew and now effectually included the Jew in the same condition, Paul arrives at the grand conclusion of this section of the epistle, that the whole world is subject to the just verdict of God.

JUSTIFICATION

INDIVIDUAL

21 The previous section found no one just but God Himself. No one has been able to attain God's standard by doing good or keeping the law. How then may we become just before God? Only by becoming partakers of His righteousness.

22 The channel through which we may obtain this righteousness is the faith of Jesus Christ. He alone of all mankind, not only did good and kept the law, but He believed God even when He smote Him for our sins. It is out of His faith for our faith (1:7).

24 They hated Him without a cause—gratuitously. Such is the meaning of this precious word. Justification on any other ground than the free and unforced favor of God is impossible, for none deserve it. But now Christ Jesus has effected a deliverance from all judgment, which is absolutely free to all who believe.

25 The important point in this passage, however, is not our justification, but God's, for it is His righteousness which we receive. In Israel He had made provision for atonement, or a shelter from sins. This was not strictly just, for the penalty of these sins was still due. The answer to this, as well as the answer to His present work is found in the blood of Christ. That settles for sins, past, present and future. That vindicates God's justice and makes it possible for Him to be the Justifier of all who are of the faith of Jesus.

27 Such a deliverance, entirely on the ground of grace, bars all boasting, unless it be in Christ and in His God, Who has become our Justifier.

14 Whose mouth is crammed with imprecation and bitterness.
15 Sharp are their feet to shed blood.
16 Bruises and wretchedness are in their paths
17 And the path of peace they know not.
18 There is no fear of God in front of their eyes." After deliverance

19 Now we are aware that, as much as the law is saying, it is speaking to those under the law, that every mouth may be barred, and the entire world may be becoming subject to the just verdict of God, because, by works of law, no flesh shall be justified before Him, for through law is the recognition of sin. 2:13, 4:15

21 Yet now, apart from law, a righteousness of God has been manifested (being testified to by the law and the prophets), yet a righteousness of God, through Jesus Christ's faith, for all and on all who are believing, for there is no distinction, for all sinned and are wanting of the glory of God. Ex 25: 17-22

24 Being justified gratuitously by His grace, through the deliverance which is in Christ Jesus (Whom God purposed for a Propitiatory, through faith in His blood, for a display of His righteousness because of the passing over of the penalty of sins which occurred before in the forbearance of God), toward the display of His righteousness in the current era, for Him to be just and a Justifier of the one who is, of the faith of Jesus.

27 Where, then, is boasting? It is debarred! Through what law? Of works? No! but through faith's law. For we are reckoning mankind to be justified by faith apart from works of law.

29 Or is He God of the Jews only? Is He not of the nations also? Yes,

Justification—Individual

<sup>30</sup> The Circumcision who have believed before and have received a pardon, receive this greater boon because of the faith they have. The Uncircumcision use faith as the channel in receiving it.

<sup>1</sup> The kingdom proclamation reverts to David, for it is founded on the covenant made with him. The evangel of God, dispensing justification, takes us back to Abraham, with whom the covenant to bless all the families of the earth was made. The far greater grace of conciliation goes back still further, and engages us with Adam and his offense.

As this gift of justification was first given to Abraham and he is its great example, the apostle takes up his case at length to show its absolutely gracious character.

<sup>4</sup> It is important to remember that, while God's future judgment is based on acts, His present gifts are absolutely spoiled the moment we connect them with any suspicion of merit or work. Justification is as free, or freer, than sunlight. In judgment He will pay everyone who is entitled to wages. He will not be in debt to anyone. But when He gives He gives, and refuses to allow His gifts to be paid for, even if anyone could pay the price. Justification is for him who is not working, but who is believing. This distinguishes the gospel from all religion, divine or pagan.

<sup>7</sup> Pardon is the exercise of executive clemency, and is connected with the kingdom. The covering of sin is an act of the priest who made atonement by the blood of the sacrifices, under the law. But justification is the judicial act of the Judge, and far surpasses both pardon and atonement. Only the guilty can be pardoned. Atonement only covers sin from God's sight. Justification, or vindication, is a complete acquittal from all guilt, the pronouncing of the verdict "not guilty".

<sup>8</sup> The fact that Abraham was justified while still uncircumcised opens the door of justification to the Uncircumcision. They, too, may claim him as their father, for they have the reality of which circumcision was but the outward sign.

<sup>30</sup> of the nations also, if so be that God is One, Who will be justifying the Circumcision out of faith and the Uncircumcision through the <sup>31</sup> faith. Are we, then, abrogating law through faith? May it not come to that! Nay, we are sustaining law.

<sup>4</sup> What, then, shall we assert Abraham, our forefather according to flesh, to have found? For if Abraham was justified by his acts, he has something to boast in, <sup>3</sup> but not toward God. For what is the scripture saying? "Now Abraham believes God and it is reckoned to him for righteousness."

<sup>8</sup> Happy the man to whom the Lord by no means Should be reckoning sin!"

<sup>9</sup> This happiness, then, is it for the Circumcision, or for the Uncircum- <sup>10</sup> cision also? For we are saying, "To Abraham faith is reckoned for righteousness". How, then, is it reckoned? Being in circumcision or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumci- <sup>11</sup> sion. And he obtained the sign of circumcision, a seal of the faith righteousness which was in uncircumcision, for him to be the father of all those who are believing through uncircumcision, for right- <sup>12</sup> eousness to be reckoned to them, and the father of the Circumcision, not

Justification—Individual

<sup>13</sup> As further developed in Galatians, the law was not given till hundreds of years after Abraham was counted righteous. The promises he received in connection with it were unconditional, dependent only on God's faithfulness. They were given without any reference to the law and do not depend on any legal observance for fulfillment. When the law did come it did not confirm these promises. It was brought in to show how impotent their own efforts were when they sought to attain to Abraham's divinely given righteousness by the keeping of the law. The law hindered rather than helped. Instead of making them just, it drew down God's indignation for their failure to live up to it.

<sup>16</sup> Faith has not the least merit. We do not deem it meritorious to believe an honest man. It is no effort. It is not work. It is the simplest, easiest, freest channel God could choose to convey His righteousness to us. Let us exult in His explanation that it is of faith that it may accord with grace. In Ephesians we have the further truth that such a salvation—through faith—calls for further favor in the future (Eph.2<sup>8</sup>).

<sup>17</sup> Abraham believed God when all the evidence was against Him. He was, for all practical purposes, as good as dead himself, and Sarah, his wife, was worse, if that could be. He faced the facts. He considered his own condition as well as that of his wife, yet never doubted that God could and would do as He had said. He believed in a God Who was superior to death, and thus made it possible for God to vindicate him. Apart from death we can see how God could pardon his sins, or cover them by means of atonement, but it is only as having died to sin, and being alive in resurrection, that we can realize that Abraham is justified.

<sup>23</sup> Thus, we, too, are justified, by the simple process of believing God. We do not believe concerning our seed, as Abraham did, but concerning his Seed, our Lord Jesus Christ, Who actually died for our sins and was roused because the sin He bore was all gone, and we were vindicated.

to those of the Circumcision only, but to those also who are observing the fundamentals of faith in the footprints of our father Abraham, in uncircumcision.

<sup>13</sup> For not through law was the promise to Abraham, or to his Seed, for him to be enjoyer of the allotment of the world, but through <sup>14</sup> faith righteousness. For if those of law are enjoyers of the allotment, faith has been made void and the <sup>15</sup> promise has been abrogated, for the law is producing indignation. Now where no law is, neither is there transgression.

<sup>16</sup> Therefore it is of faith that it may accord with grace, for the promise to be confirmed to the entire seed, not to those of the law only, but to those also of the faith of Abraham, who is father of <sup>17</sup> us all, according as it is written that "I have appointed you to be a father of many nations"—facing which, he believes the God Who is vivifying the dead and calling

<sup>18</sup> what is not as if it were—who, being beyond expectation, believes with expectation, for him to become the father of many nations, according to the assertion, "Thus will <sup>19</sup> your seed be." And not being infirm in faith, he considers his own body already dead (existing somewhere about a hundred years) and the deadening of Sarah's matrix, <sup>20</sup> yet God's promise was not doubted in unbelief, but he was invigorated <sup>21</sup> in faith, giving glory to God, being fully assured also that what He has promised He is able to do also.

CONCILIATION

INDIVIDUAL

1. Justification is the ground of peace. Sin no longer bars us from the presence of God. Yet peace is a favor infinitely beyond justification. God's affections are not satisfied with clearing us from all guilt. He craves our love and our adoration. Righteousness alone does not give us a passport into His presence, but this further grace of reconciliation urges us into full and affectionate fellowship with Him. And we are aware that He will not rest in having us clothed in forensic righteousness only, but will make us all that He desires, to satisfy His own love.

5 His way of winning our response is to pour His own love into us first, as exemplified in the death of Christ for us while we were most undeserving of His favor. The grace of it lies in the entire lack of anything in us to draw out His affections toward us.

9 The blood of Christ is a memorial of the abiding efficacy of His death. It tends us from all future indignation. If Christ died for us as sinners, surely we have no need to fear aught now that we are justified!

10 We now take up the new subject of conciliation. We leave the atmosphere of the court for the closer ties of the family circle. Now it is not Christ dying for sinners, but God's Son dying for His enemies. The effect is not justification, but conciliation, peace. Furthermore, we are not only unafraid of future wrath, because of the abiding value of His death, as figured by the blood, but we have the living Son of God Himself as the surety of our salvation. We shall be saved by His life.

11 Christ did not obtain "atonement". That was a mere temporary covering for sin made by the blood of bulls and goats, and utterly failed to take away sin. Let us not degrade Christ's work by calling it an "atonement". But let us glory in conciliation, the ripened fruit of God's great effort to win the fealty and affection of His creatures. Few things indicate more clearly the apostasy of Christendom than the constant reference to the work of Christ as "the atonement".

24 him, but because of us also to whom it is about to be reckoned, who are believing on Him Who rouses Jesus our Lord from among the dead, 17, 25 Who was given up because of our offenses, and was roused because of our justification.

5 Being, then, justified by faith, we may be having peace toward God, through our Lord, Jesus Christ, through Whom also we have had the access, in faith, into this grace in which we stand, and we may be glorying in expectation of the glory of God.

3 Yet not only so, but we may be glorying also in afflictions, having perceived that affliction is producing endurance, and endurance testedness, and testedness expectation. Now expectation is not mortifying, seeing that God's love has been poured out in our hearts, through the holy spirit which is being given to us.

6 For Christ, while we are still infirm, still in accord with the era, died for the sake of the irreverent. 7 For hardly for the sake of the just will anyone be dying: for, for the sake of the good, perhaps, some may even be daring to die, yet God is recommending this love of His to us, seeing that, when we are still sinners, Christ died for our sakes. 9 Much rather, then, being now justified in His blood, we shall be saved from indignation through Him.

10 For if, being enemies, we were conciliated to God through the death of His Son, much rather, being conciliated, we shall be saved in His life. Yet not only so, but we are glorying also in God, through our Lord, Jesus Christ, through Whom we now obtained the conciliation.

12 Death entered through sin at first, but now sin is transmitted through death. All sin because they are mortal. Christ brings life, which disposes of both death and sin.

14 The type here is the period of time up to the giving of the law, from Adam to Moses. During this period there was no transgression, for there was no law. So it is today. The law was not given to the nations, hence they do not transgress it. Nevertheless death reigns, even as it did before the law was given. The type, however, is in the nature of a shadow, whose dark outlines do not clearly depict the present grace. The reign of Sin corresponds to the reign of grace, Adam's single offense to Christ's one just act on Calvary, bringing life where Adam brought death. But the type fails utterly in a number of particulars.

15 A simple reversal of the offense would put us where Adam was before he transgressed. But the gratuity through Christ is infinitely more than a mere recovery from the effects of Adam's offense.

16 One sin brought condemnation to all mankind. Grace recovers, not from one sin only, but from many offenses.

17 Adam enthroned death, but Christ gives believers not only a full vindication from all guilt, but life and the right to reign with Him.

18 The parallel here is perfect. Adam's one offense is counteracted by Christ's one just award. The act of Adam actually affects all mankind. So Christ's work, eventually, must also actually justify all mankind. This cannot be during the eons, hence will not be fully accomplished until after the eons are past, when all are made alive in Christ (1Cor.15<sup>22</sup>). If Adam's offense only gave each one an opportunity to sin, so that some become sinners and others not, then we might say that Christ's work brings justification to all subject to their acceptance. But we must acknowledge that man has no choice in becoming a sinner, thus also will it be through the work of Christ. Both are actual and universal.

19 The contrast here is between one and many, not between the many and the all of the previous statement. The many here are the all of verse eighteen.

12 Therefore, even as through one man sin entered into the world, and through sin death, and thus death came through into all mankind, on which all sinned—for until law sin was in the world, yet sin is not being taken into account when there is no law, but death reigns from Adam unto Moses, over those also who do not sin after the likeness of Adam's transgression, which is a type of that which is about to be.

15 But not as the offense, thus also the grace. For if by the offense of the one the many died, much rather the grace of God and the gratuity in grace, which is of the One Man, Jesus Christ, to the many superabounds.

16 And not as through one sinning, is the gratuity. For, indeed, the judgment is out of one into condemnation, yet the grace is out of many offenses into a just award. For if by the offense of the one, death reigns through the one, much rather, those obtaining the superabundance of grace and the gratuity of righteousness shall be reigning in life through the One, Jesus Christ.

18 Consequently, then, as it was through one offense for all mankind for condemnation, thus also it is through one just award for all mankind for life's justifying. For even as through the disobedience of the one man the many were constituted sinners, thus also through the obedience of the One the many shall be constituted just.

20 Yet law crept in that the offense should be increasing. Yet where sin

<sup>20</sup> Here we have the true character and function of the law. It crept in. It was not a normal necessity, nor did it make any vital change. Its effect was to alter the character of sin so that it became an offense. Just as Adam's sin was against God's expressed command, and thus was a personal affront to God as well as a misdeed bringing harm on his own head, so those under the law, by sinning against light, greatly increased the sinfulness of sin. Obedience to the law would have banished sin and death. Disobedience enhanced their power. But grace not only exceeds the effects of sin, but superexceeds the offenses of those under law, so that now, Grace has dethroned Sin.

<sup>1</sup> The absolute despotism of Grace is set forth in the startling suggestion that if we should be persisting in sin, grace would increase. While the following argument is against persistence in sin, it confirms the sovereignty of grace. Let us not deny this marvelous doctrine. It will give us rich, exultant liberty, ridding us of the thralldom of Sin, and giving us power to avoid the very sins which unnatural logic supposes we would eagerly follow, now that there is no condemnation even if we should sin.

<sup>2</sup> Deliverance from sin comes, not through victory over it, but through death to it. It is useless to struggle against sin, or to fight with its practices. Rather we should acknowledge its force and reckon ourselves as dead through it and to it, yet alive in resurrection, where sin has no place.

<sup>3</sup> Doubtless some to whom Paul wrote had been baptized under his earlier ministry. At this time he no longer baptized (1Cor.1<sup>17</sup>). He appeals to their experience. Baptism was not merely a burial into death, but indicated a resurrection from the dead.

<sup>8</sup> As we did not die, but Christ was crucified for us, we may reckon His death as ours, fully finishing our connection with sin, and His resurrection as ours also, for in Him we enjoy an unclouded life in the presence of God.

<sup>21</sup> increases, grace superexceeds, that, even as Sin reigns in death, thus also Grace should be reigning through righteousness, for eonian life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord.

<sup>6</sup> What, then, shall we assert? That we may be persisting in sin that grace should be increasing?

<sup>2</sup> May it not come to that! We, who died to sin, how shall we still <sup>3</sup> be living in it? Or are you ignorant that as many as are baptized into Christ Jesus, are baptized into His <sup>4</sup> death? Then we were entombed together with Him through baptism into death, that, even as Christ was roused from among the dead through the glory of the Father, thus also we should be walking in <sup>5</sup> newness of life. For if we have become planted together in the likeness of His death, nevertheless we shall be of the resurrection also,
<sup>6</sup> knowing this, that our old humanity was crucified together with him, that sin's body may become inert, for us to be by no means still slaving for Sin, for the one dying has been justified from sin.

<sup>8</sup> Now if we died together with Christ, we believe that we shall live
<sup>9</sup> together with Him also, having perceived that Christ, being roused from among the dead, is no longer dying; Death is mastering Him
<sup>10</sup> no longer, for He Who died, died to Sin once, yet He Who is living
<sup>11</sup> is living to God. Thus you also be reckoning yourselves to be dead, indeed, to Sin, yet living to God, in Christ Jesus our Lord.

<sup>12</sup> Let not Sin, then, be reigning in your mortal body, for you to be

<sup>12</sup> A realization of our death to sin and life in Christ will give us power to cope with sin, always remembering that sin cannot bring us into disfavor because of the superexceeding grace.

<sup>14</sup> Law, as we shall see in the next chapter, not only cannot deliver from sin, but actually forges the fetters of sin, and makes sin's bondage more cruel and galling.

<sup>15</sup> The law said, "Cursed is everyone who is not continuing in all the things written in the scroll of the law, to do them". Grace says, Blessed are you, whatever you may do, for Christ has justified you and not one dare bring anything against you. The fallacious logic of the old humanity immediately imagines that this gives license and encouragement to sin. But its actual effect is quite the opposite. Grace, not law, has power to deter us from sinning. No one who has an actual experience of grace, reasons that, because there is immunity, therefore he will sin. The offender against law flies in the face of law. Its austere threats do not hinder him. But the offender against grace feels the heinousness of his offense and flies from it.

<sup>16</sup> All of us are slaves, however much we may vaunt our liberty. We are controlled either by Sin or by Obedience. It is a cause of thankfulness that we all have had service under Sin, for only so could we realize the nature of such slavery. But we have not been taken from Sin's service to become idle. We have been transferred to the service of Righteousness.

<sup>20</sup> Slaves of Sin can produce only the fruits of sin and know that the only possible outcome is death. But slaves of Righteousness have a brighter outlook. They are not ashamed of their deeds and look for life eonian.

<sup>23</sup> Sin, like slave holders, does not pay wages, but only supplies rations. This consists, at present, in an attitude toward God which is the equivalent of death, for all Sin's slaves avoid God's presence. And their deeds will also result in death. Neither do we, as slaves, look for wages. God not only gives, but gives graciously, or gratuitously, the very reward which is only for those whose endurance in good acts merits it—eonian life, or life for the eons (27).

<sup>13</sup> obeying its lusts. Neither be presenting your members to Sin, as implements of injustice, but present yourselves to God as if alive from among the dead, and your members as implements of

<sup>14</sup> righteousness for God. For Sin shall not be mastering you, for you are not under law, but under grace.

<sup>15</sup> What then? Should we be sinning, since we are not under law but under grace?

<sup>16</sup> May it not come to that! Are you not aware that to whom you are presenting yourselves as slaves for obedience, his slaves you are whom you are obeying, whether of Sin for death, or Obedience for <sup>17</sup> righteousness? Now grateful are we to God that you were Sin's slaves, yet you obey from the heart the type of teaching to which you <sup>18</sup> were given over. Now, being freed from Sin, you are enslaved to Righteousness.

<sup>19</sup> I am speaking as a man because of the infirmity of your flesh: for even as you present your members as slaves to Uncleaness and to Lawlessness for lawlessness, thus now present your members as slaves to Righteousness for holiness.

<sup>20</sup> For when you were slaves of Sin you were free as to Righteousness.

<sup>21</sup> Then what fruit had you then?—of which you are now ashamed, for, indeed, the consummation of those <sup>22</sup> things is death. Yet now, being freed from Sin, yet enslaved to God, you have your fruit for holiness, and the consummation, eonian

<sup>23</sup> life. For the ration of Sin is death, but God's gracious gift is eonian life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Conciliation—Individual

1 The apostle now addresses particularly those who have been under law, that is, who were of the Circumcision. His appeal however, is not to the law itself, but to the nature of all law, that it has jurisdiction only over those who are alive.

2 The law of wedlock is given as a well known example. A woman's subjection to her husband lasts only for his life. During his life she may have no relations with other men. After his death the ties which bind her to a new husband are just as sacred as those which united her to the former one.

4 A wife and her husband are one flesh (Gen.2<sup>24</sup>), hence the wife dies with the husband, but the woman remains. Those united to Christ under law died with Him to the law. Union with Christ in resurrection is a new relationship beyond the sphere of the law.

6 Exemption from the law applies only to those who were under the law. As the law is not unjust, like Sin, but just and holy, they continue to serve, no longer in letter, but in spirit.

7 The mistaken deduction from the foregoing is that the law itself is sin. Else why cease to serve its letter? Or else how does it make sin more sinful and transform it into an offense? Sin is not known in its true character except through law. Instead of sin being ignorant inability, it becomes the opposite. It is active hostility. The law which seemed to be given to regulate, only roused it. Sin is dormant or dead until law comes and gives it life. The law which should have given the sinner life, gave life to sin. It should have been the death blow of sin, but it became the death of the sinner. All this shows how futile it is to try to reform or regulate or conquer sin. It not only acts in darkness and ignorance but transforms the very light into an agent of death. The law offered life to those under it, on terms which, apart from sin, were all that could be desired. But sin not only disabled them so that they could not take advantage of its provisions, but involved them in its condemnation by stirring their passions against its just decrees.

7 Or are you ignorant, brethren (for I am speaking to those who know law), that the law is mastering a man for as much time as he is living?

2 For a woman in wedlock is bound to a living man by law. Yet if the man should be dying, she is exempted from the law of the man.

3 Consequently, then, if the man is living she will be styled an adulteress if she should be becoming another man's, yet if the man should be dying, she is free from the law, being no adulteress, on becoming another man's.

4 So that, my brethren, you also were caused to die to the law through the body of Christ, for you to become Another's, Who is roused from among the dead, that we should be fruitful to God. For when we were in the flesh, the passions of sins, which were through the law, operated in our members to be fruitful to Death. Yet now we were exempted from the law, when dying in that in which we were retained, so that it is for us to be slaving in newness of spirit and not in oldness of letter.

7 What, then, shall we assert? That the law is sin?

May it not come to that! But sin I knew not except through law. For besides, I had not been aware of coveting except the law said, "You shall not be coveting". Now Sin, getting an incentive through the precept, produces in me all manner of coveting. For apart from law Sin is dead. Now I lived, apart from law, once, yet at the coming of the precept Sin revives. Now I died, and it was found that, to me, the precept for life, this is for death. For Sin, getting an incentive through the precept, de-<sup>13</sup> From the supposition that the law, being holy and just and good, involved him in death, it seems that what is good may become the cause of death. But such is not the case. It was not the law which produced death, but sin, misusing law. The real law and apparent functions of the law are very different. And, in order to effect its real object, it was necessary that it should not appear on the surface. The apparent object of the law was to give life to all who consistently and constantly kept it. As it never gave life to anyone, for no one was able to fulfil its demands, it appears as if the law has failed of its primary object. And, further, as it revived the passions of sin which were dormant, it seems to have defeated its own aim. But the real object of the law was to reveal the inordinate sinfulness of sin, and in this it was most successful.

Conciliation—Individual

<sup>15</sup> This is the experience of one who does not realize his death to sin and the law, but who is endeavoring to keep the letter of the law. He finds that the law of sin in his members is far more potent than the law of God which appeals to his mind. He wants to do good, but cannot. He does things which he hates to do, hence charges his misery to the indwelling sin which has taken possession of his body. He is a wretched captive. This will be the experience of all who make an earnest effort to please God by obeying the letter of that law which was broken even before it reached the people (Ex.32:19).

<sup>24</sup> What is the answer to this wretched man's cry? It is grace. There is no other deliverance possible. This brings us back to where this digression began, the reign of grace at the end of the fifth chapter. It is only as we recognize the imperial sway of grace, putting us beyond all possibility of condemnation, whether we sin or not, that we have real liberty and power sufficient to effect not only what was demanded by the law, but those higher duties which far transcend the righteous requirements of Sinai. Then we will not be wretched and self-occupied, but happy and exulting in God, in Whose favor we are basking, and Whose delight we are, in Christ.

ludes me, and through it, kills me.

<sup>12</sup> So that the law, indeed, is holy, and the precept holy and just and good.

<sup>13</sup> Became good, then, death to me?

May it not come to that! But Sin, that it may appear Sin, is producing death to me through good, that Sin, through the precept, should

<sup>14</sup> become an inordinate sinner. For we are aware that the law is spiritual, yet I am fleshly, having been

<sup>15</sup> disposed of by Sin. For I know not what I am effecting, for not what I am willing, this I am putting into practise, but what I am

<sup>16</sup> hating, this I am doing. Now if what I am not willing, this I am doing, I am conceding that the

<sup>17</sup> law is ideal. Yet now it is no longer I who am effecting it, but Sin making

<sup>18</sup> its home in me. For I am aware that good is not making its home in me (that is, in my flesh), for to be willing is lying beside me, yet to be effecting the ideal is not.

<sup>19</sup> For it is not the good that I am willing that I am doing, but the evil that I am not willing, this I am

<sup>20</sup> putting into practise. Now if what I am not willing, this I am doing, it is no longer I who am effecting it, but Sin which is making its home in me.

<sup>21</sup> Consequently, I am finding the law that, at my willing to be doing the ideal, evil is lying beside me.

<sup>22</sup> For I am gratified with the law of

<sup>23</sup> God as to the inner man, yet I am observing a different law in my members, warring with the law of my mind, and leading me into captivity to the law of Sin which is in my members.

<sup>24</sup> A wretched man am I! What will rescue me out of this body of

<sup>25</sup> death? Grace! Now I am thanking

Conciliation—Individual

<sup>1</sup> Condemnation is utterly out of the question for all in Christ Jesus. This is infinitely more than the atonement or shelter provided for sin by the sacrifices offered under the law. It is far beyond the pardon, or forgiveness, contained in the proclamation of the kingdom. The atonement needed to be renewed year by year, the pardon might be recalled, but the justification we have in Christ Jesus is nothing less than God's righteousness, which is absolutely inviolable. It was not secured by any act of ours and cannot be marred by aught that we can do. Sin only enhances the graciousness of it, but cannot sully or impair it.

<sup>2</sup> The spirit's law of life, in Christ Jesus, is the opposite of the law of Sinai. That said: Obey, and live; disobey, and die. The spirit's law imparts life for the eons as God's gracious gift, apart from obedience or disobedience.

<sup>4</sup> We do not fulfill the law in its letter. Grace leads us to act far beyond its spirit. Its just requirements, love to God and man, are fulfilled only by those who walk in spirit.

<sup>5</sup> The flesh is not able to be subject to God's law. It is useless to try to train it to please Him. We are not justified in flesh. It is only in spirit that we can count ourselves as beyond all condemnation. The flesh is after the things of flesh and leads to death. But the spirit is concerned with spiritual things and makes for life and peace.

<sup>9</sup> All who believe Him are indwelt by God's spirit. Christ, by His spirit, is in us. Consequently, our spirit is life, yet our body, being absolutely unresponsive to their presence, is death. Thus, while we have but one body, it is the home of three spirits—God's spirit, Christ's spirit, and our spirit. As a result the spiritual force at our disposal is far greater than the flesh. Our own spirit is the seat of our new life, because of righteousness. Christ's spirit gives us communion with Him. God's spirit gives us power over our dead bodies, just as, in the case of Christ, He roused His body from among the dead. He is able to vivify these death-doomed bodies, so that they respond to the dictates of the spirit.

God, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Consequently, then, I myself, indeed, with the mind am slaving for God's law, yet with the flesh Sin's law.

<sup>8</sup> Nothing, consequently, is condemnation now to them that are in Christ Jesus. They are not walking according to flesh, but according to <sup>2</sup> spirit, for the spirit's law of life in Christ Jesus frees you from the <sup>3</sup> law of Sin and Death. For at the law's impotence (in which it was infirm through the flesh), God, when sending His own Son in the likeness of sin's flesh and concerning sin, condemns sin in the flesh, <sup>4</sup> that the just requirement of the law may be fulfilled in us, who are not walking in accord with flesh, but in accord with spirit.

<sup>5</sup> For those who are in accord with flesh are disposed to that which is of the flesh, yet those who are in accord with spirit to that which is of the spirit. For the disposition of the flesh is death, yet the disposition of the spirit is life and peace, <sup>7</sup> because the disposition of the flesh is enmity to God, for it is not subject to the law of God, for neither is it <sup>8</sup> able. Now those who are in the flesh are not able to please God.

<sup>9</sup> Yet you are not in flesh, but in spirit, if so be that God's spirit is making its home in you. Now if anyone has not Christ's spirit, <sup>10</sup> this one is not His. Now if Christ is in you, the body, indeed, is dead because of sin, yet the spirit is life <sup>11</sup> because of righteousness. Now if the spirit of Him Who rouses Jesus from among the dead is making its home in you, He Who rouses Christ Jesus from among the dead will also

<sup>11</sup> Mortal bodies are such as are dying, in a physical sense. Their vivification cannot refer to the future resurrection, but to the present power of God's spirit to use an utterly unresponsive, hostile instrument, as our bodies, and constrain its members to do the bidding of our spirits.

<sup>12</sup> We owe the flesh nothing, and it promises us nothing but death. But we do owe it to the spirit to put the practises of the body to death and thus enjoy the life which the spirit makes ours in Christ Jesus.

<sup>14</sup> To be a son of God implies more than belonging to Him. As the Son of God manifests Him so we are sons only inasmuch as we display His character in our words and ways.

<sup>15</sup> The law led to slavery, not sonship. Fear is not for us. Justification and reconciliation lead us unafraid into the Father's presence. Just as the little Hebrew child would lisp its "Abba" in the familiar Aramaic household speech, or, as our children say trustingly, "Papa", so we are without constraint in the august presence of the Divine Majesty.

<sup>16</sup> God's spirit says we are His children. Our spirits claim Him as our Father. If this be the case, then, even as our children have the enjoyment of all that is ours, so all that is God's is for us. Indeed, even the great glories in store for Christ are ours if we, too, tread the path of suffering which led Him to them.

<sup>18</sup> The creation has been involved in the treadmill of corruption through the sin of man. We are associated with the creation on the physical side. When our bodies are delivered from their present slavery and death at our Lord's descent from heaven, He will transfigure them to conform them to His body glorious (Phil. 3<sup>21</sup>). Later, when we are unveiled, the creation will be set at liberty from the bondage which now enthralls it. How it ought to comfort us to know that the patient, suffering creatures, who had no hand in their own degradation, will yet find a real release from the pain and sorrow from which they have no escape now! Its physical aspect waits until our Lord's return.

vivify your mortal bodies because of His spirit making its home in you. Consequently, then, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to be living in accord with flesh, for if you are living in accord with flesh, you are about to be dying. Yet if in spirit you are putting the practises of the body to death, you will be living. For as many as are being led by God's spirit, these are sons of God. Gal 3:26

<sup>15</sup> For you did not get slavery's spirit again to fear, but you got the spirit of sonship, in which we are crying, "Abba, Father!" The same spirit is joining its witness with our spirit that we are children of God. Yet if children, enjoyers also of an allotment, enjoyers, indeed, of God's allotment, and joint enjoyers of Christ's allotment, if so be that we are suffering together, that we should be glorified together also.

<sup>18</sup> For I am reckoning that the sufferings of this current era do not deserve the glory about to be revealed for us. For the premonition of the creation is awaiting the unveiling of the sons of God. For the creation was subjected to vanity (not voluntarily, but because of Him Who is subjecting it) in expectation that the creation itself also shall be freed from the slavery of corruption into the glorious freedom of the children of God. For we are aware that the entire creation is groaning and travailing together until now. Yet not only so, but we ourselves also, who have the firstfruit of the spirit, we ourselves also, are groaning in ourselves, awaiting the sonship, the deliverance of our body. For we were saved in expectation. Now expectation, being observed, is not ex-

Conciliation—Individual

<sup>26</sup> Here is the true "form" for acceptable prayer in this economy. It is not definite persistence, like the importunate widow. It is acknowledged weakness and ignorance casting itself on God, urged on by His spirit, knowing only the need and the One Who can meet it in His own way.

<sup>28</sup> Though we know not what to pray for, this is not at all necessary, for we do know that God is making everything co-operate for our welfare. No matter how things appear, they can work no ill to us who love God, for He first loved us, and has included us in His vast purpose, of which we form a vital part.

<sup>29</sup> Our destiny was fixed by God from the beginning, long before we could have any part in it. It is higher than our highest dreams, for it is nothing less than conformity to the image of His Son. And, better still, our exaltation is the means of putting Him in the place supreme. He cannot be Firstborn without brethren. Thus we are essential to His glory!

GOD'S SOVEREIGNTY

INDIVIDUAL

<sup>30</sup> Here we have the golden chain of God's sovereignty forged for our blessing. Its four links cannot be separated. He has designated us and called us and justified us. Three links are forged. The next is glory!

<sup>31</sup> Nothing can compare with the sublime consciousness of a place in God's heart. If He is for us, even those who would be against us work our weal. No one can be against us.

<sup>32</sup> God has given His best gift when He spared not His Son. Nothing else can compare with Him. He will withhold no good thing from those who have received His Beloved.

<sup>33</sup> We can challenge the universe to find a single thing against us! Whatever we may be in ourselves, in Christ God has justified us. And not only that, but all judgment has been committed to the Son, the very Christ Who died for us and lives to plead for us at God's right hand! God, the Judge of all, Who alone can acquit, has become our Vindicator! Christ, Who alone has the right to condemn, is our Saviour!

pectation, for what anyone is observing, why is he expecting it?

<sup>25</sup> Now if we are expecting what we are not observing we are awaiting it with fortitude.

<sup>26</sup> Now, similarly, the spirit also is aiding our infirmity, for we are not aware what we should be praying for, to accord with what must be, but the spirit itself is pleading for us with inarticulate groanings. Now He Who is searching the hearts is aware of the spirit's disposition, seeing that it is pleading for the saints in accord with God.

<sup>28</sup> Now we are aware that God is working all together for the good of those who are loving God, who are called according to the purpose that, whom He foreknew, He designates beforehand also to be conformed to the image of His Son, for Him to be the Firstborn among many brethren. Now whom He designates beforehand, these He calls also, and whom He calls, these He justifies also: now whom He justifies, these He glorifies also.

<sup>31</sup> What, then, shall we assert to these things? If God is for us, <sup>32</sup> who is against us? Surely, He Who spares not His own Son, but gives Him up for us all, how shall He not, together with Him also, be graciously granting us all?

<sup>33</sup> Who will be indicting God's chosen ones? God is the Justifier! <sup>34</sup> Who is the Condemner? Christ Jesus, the One dying, yet rather being roused, Who is also at God's right hand, Who is pleading also for our sakes!

<sup>35</sup> What shall be separating us from the love of God in Christ Jesus? Affliction, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or danger, or sword! According as it is written, that 13: 6

God's Sovereignty—Individual

<sup>37</sup> God's love never lets us go. The trials and tribulations we endure are not tokens of His displeasure. They are all tempered by His loving heart. A sense of His love hovering over us in the midst of our distresses is the most blessed of all balms and will enable us not only to endure them but to enjoy them.

<sup>38</sup> Here all the great forces of the universe are arrayed, and none of them, no, nor all of them together, can come between us and the unconquerable love of our God as displayed in Christ Jesus. Death will be swallowed up by life. Life may lead us far from Him, but not beyond the reach of His love. The present perplexes us, the future fills us with fear, but only when we lose the sense of His love. Powers, celestial or terrestrial, are subject to His sway. Nothing above or beneath, nothing at all has the power to break the bond that binds the humblest and most unworthy saint to the throbbing breast of our great and glorious God. This is more than salvation from sin! This is reconciliation!

NATIONAL

<sup>1</sup> Paul was in acute sympathy with his brethren according to the flesh, for he himself had been the most rabid of all in opposing the Christ he now adored. This is a most apt confession, as he is about to introduce the great doctrine of the divine Sovereignty, for he is the star example of God's sovereign grace.

<sup>4</sup> Physically, Israel has the monopoly of the eight blessings here recorded. In flesh, Christ belongs exclusively to them; no other nation can lay claim to the fathers. The covenants, the law, the priestly worship, and the promises do not belong to the church, but to Israel according to the flesh. The sonship and the glory are ours only in spirit, not in flesh.

<sup>5</sup> Christ, in flesh, is the God of the eons. All eonian blessing is through Him and for Him.

<sup>6</sup> Ishmael was Abraham's son as well as Isaac, but he was born of the flesh, not of the promise. This shows that mere physical descent is not enough to give a title to the blessing of Abraham (Gen. 17<sup>18-20</sup>; 21<sup>12</sup>).

"On Thy account we are being put to death the whole day, We are accounted as sheep for slaughter."

<sup>37</sup> Nay! in all these we are more than conquering through Him Who loves us.

<sup>38</sup> For I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor messengers, nor sovereignties, nor the present, nor the future, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus, our Lord. 9-11. The evangelic relation to Israel castings aside.

<sup>9</sup> I am telling the truth in Christ, I am not lying, my conscience joining its witness with me in holy spirit, that my sorrow is great, and unintermittent pain is at my heart <sup>3</sup> (for I myself wished to be anathema from Christ) for my brethren, my kin according to the flesh, who are Israelites, whose is the sonship and the glory and the covenants and the legislation and the divine service and the promises; whose are the fathers, and out of whom is Christ according to the flesh, Who is over all, God blessed for the eons. Amen! 4:6-11

<sup>6</sup> Now it is not as though the word of God has lapsed, for not all those out of Israel, these are Israel; neither that Abraham's seed are all children, but "In Isaac shall your seed be called". That is, that the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God, but He is reckoning the children of the promise for the seed.

<sup>9</sup> For the word of the promise is this: "At this season I shall come and Sarah shall have a son". Yet not only so, but Rebecca also is having her bed of one, our father Isaac. For, not as yet being born, nor yet putting anything into

God's Sovereignty—National

11 The futility of fleshly precedence is next shown in the case of Jacob and Esau. This is full of comfort for those of us today who feel like classing ourselves with crooked Jacob, who did all he could to buy God's blessing, and stupidly hindered it. Yet, being the object of God's elective purpose and love, all his perverse ways could not set aside God's predetermined outcome. Esau was Jacob's senior and superior, yet he became his slave. This ought to appeal powerfully to the sons of Israel (for whom this section is especially intended), for they are his descendants.

14 The usual deduction from this is that God is not just. In a man this would not be right, but it is God's sovereign privilege to display Himself through any of His creatures, in any way best suited to the purpose. Love needed a Jacob for its display. Power needed a Pharaoh for its foil. Man cannot turn the tide of God's affections in his favor nor can he stem the torrent of His wrath. In God's great purpose to eventually bless all mankind it is His prerogative to form and use suitable vessels to convey His mercy. Of such was Jacob. Esau was needed to emphasize Jacob's unworthiness. Pharaoh was elevated by God, not that his name might be great, but that God's name might be made known through all the earth. A great man was needed for this or God could not have made His power known.

19 The questioner persists in looking at God's sovereignty from the human standpoint of the individual, when it should be viewed from the divine, national vantage. God has a large purpose which will eventuate in the blessing of all. But in the process of its fulfillment it demands the temporary use of some as foils to set forth His indignation and power, that He may make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy. This chapter does not deal with the destiny of the individual. That has been settled. All mankind will be justified eventually (5:18). It is not difficult to see how God can justify Pharaoh, whom He hardened, lest his heart should soften and he should fail to oppose Him further.

practise, good or bad, that God's purpose may remain as a choice, not out of acts, but of Him Who is calling, it was declared to her that "The greater shall be slaving for the inferior," according as it is written "Jacob I love, yet Esau I hate". Gen 29:30-33.

14 What, then, shall we assert? Not that there is injustice with God! May it not come to that!

15 For to Moses He is saying, "I shall be merciful to whomever I may be merciful, and I shall be pitying whomever I may be pitying". Consequently, then, it is not of him who is willing, nor yet of him who is racing, but of God, the Merciful. For the scripture is saying to Pharaoh that "For this selfsame thing I rouse you up, that so I should be displaying My power in you, and so My name should be published in the entire earth".

18 Consequently, then, to whom He is willing He is merciful, yet whom He is willing, He is hardening.

19 You will be protesting to me, then, "Why, then, is He still blaming? for has anyone withstood His intention?" O man! who are you, to be sure, who are answering again to God? That which is molded will not protest to the molder, "Why do you make me thus?" Or has not the potter the right over the clay, out of the same kneading to make one vessel, indeed, for honor, and one for dishonor? Now if God, wanting to display His indignation and to make His power known, carries on, with much patience, the vessels of indignation adapted for destruction, it is that He should also be making known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which

<sup>25</sup> A comparison of Hos. 2<sup>23</sup> with Hos. 19.<sup>11</sup> shows that this is not an interpretation but an illustration. God, in His sovereign mercy, will reverse the sentence which He pronounced against Israel. In the very same place in which they were named "Lo-ammi", there they shall be called sons of the living God. He deals with the nations as this. <sup>27</sup> Isaiah's testimony is to the same effect. A remnant in Israel shall be saved in the coming time of reckoning. These are seen in the Unveiling as the hundred and forty-four thousand and the vast throng (Un.74,9).

NATIONAL

<sup>30</sup> God's sovereignty is further illustrated in the dispensation of justification. Normally, Israel, seeking to keep a just law, should have attained righteousness. Yet the nations, who made no effort to attain righteousness, grasp it because they find it on the principle of faith. The pursuit of righteousness by means of the law led Israel to refuse the grace of Christ and the righteousness which comes apart from the keeping of the law.

It is evident that this is true only in a national way, for not all of Israel stumbled, neither did all among the nations find the righteousness of faith. This must be constantly borne in mind in studying this entire division of Romans. It deals, not with individuals, but nations. Israel, as a whole, is apostate, yet some among them are brilliant examples of faith. The nations, who never before had any part in God's blessings, except as they became proselytes and identified themselves with Israel, now believe God in considerable numbers. Paul becomes the apostle of the nations and thus inaugurates the present secret economy (Eph.3<sup>1</sup>).

<sup>1</sup> Intense zeal, religious fervor, coupled with self-righteousness, does not lead to salvation. God demands subjection to His righteousness in Christ. The law should establish their *un*righteousness and thus reveal God's righteousness, which is manifested in Christ. Israel, as a nation, will be saved when they see Him Whom they pierced, and recognize Him as their Righteousness.

out of the Jews, but out of the nations also. As He is saying in <sup>25</sup> Hosea also:

"I shall be calling those who are not my people 'My people',
And she who is not beloved 'Beloved';
<sup>26</sup> And it will be, in the place where it was declared to them, 'You are not My people',
There they will be called 'sons of the living God'."

<sup>27</sup> Now Isaiah is crying over Israel, <sup>19: 22-23</sup> "If the number of the sons of Israel should be as the sand of the sea,

The residue will be saved,
<sup>28</sup> For the Lord will be doing a conclusive and concise accounting on the earth."

<sup>29</sup> And according as Isaiah declared before,

"Except the Lord Sabaoth conserved us a seed, <sup>1:9</sup> Jas 5:4
We were become as Sodom,
And were likened to Gomorrah."

<sup>30</sup> What, then, shall we assert? That the nations who are not pursuing righteousness grasped righteousness, yet a righteousness which <sup>31</sup> is out of faith. Yet Israel, pursuing a law of righteousness, has no foretaste of a law of righteousness. <sup>32</sup> Why? Since it is not out of faith but as out of law works, they stumble on the stumbling stone, <sup>33</sup> according as it is written: <sup>2sa 28:16</sup> "Lo! I am laying in Zion a stumbling stone and a snare rock,

And the one believing on Him shall not be disgraced."

<sup>10</sup> Indeed, brethren, my heart's delight and petition to God for them <sup>2</sup> is for salvation. For I am testifying to them that they have a zeal of God, but not in accord with recognition. For they, being ignorant of the righteousness which is of God, and seeking to establish their own righteousness, were not subject <sup>4</sup> to God's righteousness. For Christ is the consummation of law

 5 JUSTICE THE OUT OF-LAW

Justification—National

6 The law demanded obedience first and promised life to those only who continued to keep it. But even in the law there was provision for faith. It taught that Jehovah Himself, He was their life (Deut.30<sup>20</sup>). In the day when He gathers them out of the peoples and brings them back into the land He will bring the word of faith very near to them (Deut.30<sup>1-14</sup>). In place of their own efforts He will put the humiliation and resurrection of Christ before them. Salvation will depend on the avowal of His lordship and resurrection.

13 There is here an allusion to the ancient custom, still in vogue in eastern lands, of the right of sanctuary. One who is in danger of death by the hands of the blood avenger, if he cannot reach a safe place in time, may invoke the name of some great and powerful person, and thus find salvation through his name. If the avengers of blood refuse to listen to his appeal, and take his life, it devolves upon the person on whose name he has called to take swift and summary vengeance. He gathers together all his friends and allies to assist him in punishing the outrage and in defending the honor of his name. For three and one third days he executes <sup>Isa</sup> vengeance on all who were concerned in killing the one who had invoked his name. In this way "all who invoke the name of the Lord shall be saved". When vengeance visits the earth, the only shelter will be the name of Jehovah. Therefore it will require not only heart belief, but the avowal of the mouth. Thus it is that Israel will be saved and all others who, in that day, will seek refuge in His name.

14 The refugee does not need to know his protector personally, yet would hardly call on one in whom he had no faith. He could not invoke one of whom he had not even heard. Hence it will be necessary to proclaim Christ, and even before that God will need to commission His heralds.

17 For Israel in that day the declarations of Christ, the great Protector, will be presented to them for their belief. Thus their salvation will be a simple matter of faith in His great name.

for righteousness to everyone who is believing. Lev. 18:5

5 For ~~Moses~~ <sup>is</sup> writing of the righteousness which is of law, that a man who does the same shall be living in 6 it. Yet the righteousness which is of faith is saying thus: "You may not be saying in your heart, 'Who will be ascending into heaven?' (that is, to be leading Christ down),
7 or 'Who will be descending into the abyss?' (that is, to be leading Christ up from among the dead)."

8 But what is it saying? "The declaration is near you, in your mouth and in your heart" (that is, the declaration of faith which we are 9 proclaiming) that, if you should be avowing by your mouth the declaration that Jesus is Lord, and should be believing in your heart that God rouses Him from among 10 the dead, you shall be saved. For with the heart it is believed for righteousness, yet with the mouth 11 it is avowed for salvation. For the scripture is saying: "Every-12 one who is believing on Him shall not be disgraced." For there is no distinction, Jew as well as Greek, for He is Lord of all, being rich for all those who are invoking 13 Him. For "whoever should be invoking the name of the Lord shall be saved."

14 How, then, should they be invoking One in Whom they do not believe? Yet how should they be believing One of Whom they do not hear? Yet how should they be hearing apart from a proclamation? Yet how should they be proclaiming if they should not be commissioned? According as it is written, Isa. 52:7

"How beautiful are the feet of those preaching an evangel of good".

16 But not all obey the evangel, for Isaiah is saying,

Justification—National

18 The proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom, beginning in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, spread to the limits of the land (Ac.1<sup>8</sup>), and reached beyond it to the Dispersion. Israel was not disobedient through lack of tidings.

19 Israel should have known that, as a nation, they would apostatize, for both Moses and Isaiah foretold it.

CONCILIATION

NATIONAL

1 It would seem from the foregoing that God was through with His ancient and beloved people and was thrusting them away. But the apostle hastens to deny this assumption. God is not thrusting away His people whom He foreknew. Their apostasy is only in part, and the term of it is temporary. That not all of Israel are thrust away is evident from his own case. He, of all Israelites, most deserved to be thrust from God's presence and blessing. Yet he is not included in the national defection. And he is not alone. Elijah thought that he was the only one in all Israel who did not bow the knee to Baal. But God, in His sovereign dealings, restrains seven thousand from worshipping the idol. Neither was Paul alone, for there was then, as always, a remnant reserved by God. These, however, are not those who are more faithful than the rest, or more deserving than the mass of the nation. If it had not been for God's choice in grace, there never would have been a remnant.

6 Grace and works will not mix. The moment works are merged with grace it becomes mere mercy and loses its essential nature. You cannot earn or deserve grace any more than you can do anyone a favor by paying him for services rendered. The sinner or saint who seeks to buy or deserve the favor of God will find that it cannot be purchased. Grace is only for those who merit the opposite. Paul's is the pattern case. As he excelled all in persecuting God's saints, he deserved the direst doom. Yet he received the greatest grace!

7 Israel sought blessing through law keeping, but did not get it. Those chosen in grace alone found it.

53:1 "Lord, who believes our tidings?"

17 Consequently faith is out of tidings, yet the tidings through a declaration of Christ.

18 But, I am saying, "Do they not hear?" To be sure!

"Their utterance came out into the entire land,

And their declarations into the ends of the inhabited earth."

19 But, I am saying, "Did not Israel know?" First Moses is saying,

"I shall be provoking you to jealousy by those not a nation;
By an unintelligent nation shall I be vexing you."

20 Yet Isaiah is very daring and is saying, 65:1-2

"I was found by those who are not seeking Me:

I was disclosed to those who are not inquiring for Me."

21 Now to Israel He is saying, 65:2

"The whole day I spread out My hands to a stubborn and contradicting people!"

11 I am saying, then, "Does not God thrust away His people?"

May it not come to that! For I also am an Israelite, out of Abraham's seed, Benjamin's tribe. God does not thrust away His people whom He foreknew.

Or have you not perceived in Elijah what the scripture is saying, as he is pleading with God against

3 Israel? "Lord, they kill Thy prophets, they dig down Thine altars, and I only was left, and they are seeking my soul!" But

4 what is that which apprises saying to him? "I left seven thousand men for Myself, who do not

5 bow the knee to Baal." Thus, then, in the current era also, there has come to be a remnant according

6 to the choice of grace. Now if it is by grace, it is no longer out of works, else grace is coming to be no

Conciliation—National

<sup>9</sup> The blessing they coveted on the ground of law keeping blinded their eyes to grace, and loaded their backs with legal burdens.

<sup>11</sup> The temporary nature of Israel's defection is strikingly illustrated by the figure of a man who trips yet recovers himself before he falls prostrate. Israel has not fallen. The book of Acts is full of the jealousy of Jews whenever they see the nations receiving God's gifts.

<sup>12</sup> Israel is God's appointed channel of blessing to the nations. If, then, their failure brings the storehouse of God's grace to the world, what will occur when they take their true place? Then the world will be blessed far beyond what is possible now. Now only spiritual blessing comes to the nations. Then, through Israel, physical blessing will flow out to them, as well.

<sup>15</sup> With Israel aside, God no longer puts barriers between Himself and the nations, but is conciliated to the whole world. When men receive this conciliation, then there is mutual reconciliation.

<sup>17</sup> It is a remarkable fact, generally unknown, that a very old olive tree, no longer capable of bearing, may be rejuvenated by a wild graft. This has been done only in those Mediterranean countries where the olive has been cultivated for many centuries. Israel is the old olive tree which becomes almost incapable of bearing the olives from which the light-giving oil was obtained. Some of the branches were broken out and the nations were grafted in, and, through living contact with its root, become God's testimony in the earth. The light of God is now no longer with Israel, but with the nations. But all the light is derived from the scriptures which came through Israel. Apart from the sacred scrolls, the nations shed no light.

<sup>19</sup> The apostle is dealing with Israel and the nations—not individuals. No individual believer will be broken out of the olive tree. The nations, however, as such, no longer believe, and are due to be cut out of the olive tree. Jehovah is already gathering Israel back to their land with a view of once more grafting them into their own olive tree.

longer grace. Now if it is out of works it is no longer grace, else work is no longer work.

<sup>7</sup> What then? What Israel is seeking for, this she has not encountered, yet the chosen encountered it. Now the rest were cal-
<sup>8</sup> loused, even as it is written,

Deut. 29:4 "God gives them a spirit of stupor,
Eyes not to be observing,
And ears not to be hearing,
Till this very day."

<sup>9</sup> And David is saying,

"Let their table become a trap,
89:22-23 and a mesh,
And a snare and a retaliation to them:

<sup>10</sup> Let their eyes be darkened, not to be observing,
And bow their backs together continually."

<sup>11</sup> Am I, then, saying, "Do they not trip that they should be falling?" May it not come to that! But their offense is salvation to the nations, to provoke them to jealousy.

<sup>13</sup> rather that which fills them! Now I am saying to you, the nations, inasmuch as, indeed, then, I am the apostle of the nations, I am glori-

<sup>14</sup> fying my dispensation, if somehow I should be provoking those of my flesh to jealousy and should save

<sup>15</sup> some of them. For if their casting away is the conciliation of the world, what will their taking back be if not life from among the dead?

<sup>16</sup> Now if the firstfruit is holy, the kneading is also; and if the root is

<sup>17</sup> holy, the boughs are also. Now if some of the boughs are broken off, yet you, being a wild olive, are grafted among them, and became joint-participant of the root <sup>18</sup> and fatness of the olive, be not vaunting over the boughs. Yet if

Conciliation—National

22 Nothing shows the blindness of Christendom more than their severe denunciation of faithless Israel, yet they are following precisely the same course and have not the slightest idea that God will deal with them as He did with Israel.

24 If a wild graft can be introduced into a cultivated tree with good results, how much better will it be to graft back the good branches!

25 The secret that Israel's present condition is not permanent, but only until all who were chosen are called out of the nations, has never been generally believed, hence the haughty attitude of Christendom toward Israel.

26 Only a few, comparatively, are being saved among the nations, but when Israel again regains its proper place, all Israel shall be saved. Then the whole nation, from the least to the greatest, will know God. And they will become the light of the world, as they were always intended to be.

28 Let us always remember that Israel is still beloved, whatever its present attitude toward God.

29 God never regrets any favor He has shown. No individual or nation whom He calls ever disappoints Him, for He knows full well what they are and what they will do. This alone proves that Israel will yet fulfill the part He has prepared for it.

30 Mercy can be shown only to those who are in need of it. So God plays Israel and the nations against one another that each in turn may taste of His mercy.

32 God's purpose includes all nations. No matter what their present attitude toward Him, it is all a part of His plan and a preparation for the display of His mercy. Here we have the real reason why all, in turn, become stubborn. God Himself locks them up to it, not that He may condemn them, but that He may have occasion to manifest His mercy.

33 God's judgments and ways are too deep for human perception, but we can grasp His purpose. We do not know how fruit is made, but we can plant a tree and enjoy its product. We can grasp God's goal, but the process by which He attains it is too complex for our feeble minds.

you vaunt, you are not bearing the root, but the root you.

19 You will be asserting, then, "Boughs are broken off that I

20 might be grafted in." That is ideal! By unbelief they are broken off, yet you stand in faith.

21 Be not haughty, but fear. For if God spares not ~~some~~ of the natural boughs, neither will He be sparing

22 some of you! Perceive, then, the kindness and severity of God! On those, indeed, who are falling, severity, yet on you, God's kindness, if you should be persisting in the kindness: else you also will be

23 hewn out. And they, if they should not be persisting in unbelief, will be grafted in, for God is able to 24 graft them in again. For if you were hewn out of an olive wild by nature, and beside nature are grafted into a cultivated olive tree, how much rather shall these, in accord with nature, be grafted into their own olive tree?

25 For I am not willing for you to be ignorant of this secret, brethren, lest you may pass for prudent among yourselves, that Israel, in part, has become calloused until the complement of the nations may be entering. And thus all Israel shall be saved, according as it is written, Isa. 59. 20-21

"The Rescuer shall be arriving out of Zion,

He will be turning irreverence from Jacob.

27 And this is My covenant with them

Whenever I should be eliminating their sins."

28 As to the evangel, indeed, they are enemies because of you, yet, as to choice, they are beloved because of the fathers. Deut 15: 60

29 For God's graces and calling are unregretted. For even as you

Num. 23: 9

Conciliation—National

<sup>28</sup> This is the most comprehensive statement which can be uttered. God is the source of all, the channel of all, and the object of all. The universe sprang out of Him, it has its course in Him and He will be its ultimate. This settles all speculation as to the origin of all things. Creation is out of God, not out of nothing. This explains universal history. God is the One back of all the movements of mankind. This reveals the goal of all things. God is so guiding all His creatures that, eventually, He will become their All. To Him, indeed, be glory for the eons!

THE CONDUCT OF THE SAINTS

<sup>2</sup> On the manward side our conduct is not to look like that of the world. There is to be a transformation wrought by means of our minds, through the influence of God's revelation. We can never be like the world at heart, so we are not to appear to be like it. We are to become more and more unlike it by contact with the mind of God.

<sup>4</sup> Our behaviour toward one another is based on the marvelous figure of the human body. We all have distinct functions, designed not merely for our own use, but for the edification of all. This is the key to conduct among our fellow-saints. As the body is a vital unity, so the saints are one in Christ.

once are stubborn toward God, yet now were shown mercy by their stubbornness, thus these also are now stubborn to this mercy of yours, that now they also may be shown mercy. For God locks all up together in stubbornness, that He may be merciful to all.

<sup>33</sup> O, the depth of the riches and of the wisdom and of the knowledge of God! How inscrutable are His judgments, and untraceable His ways! For who knew the mind of the Lord? or who became His adviser? or who gives to Him first, and will be repaid by Him? seeing that all is out of Him and through Him and for Him: to Him be glory for the eons! Amen!

<sup>12</sup> I am entreating you, then, brethren, by the pities of God, to present your bodies a sacrifice, living, holy, well pleasing to God, your logical divine service, and not to be configured to this eon, but to be transformed by the renewing of your mind, for you to be testing what is the will of God, good and well pleasing and mature.

<sup>3</sup> For I am saying to everyone who is among you, through the grace which is given to me, not to be overweening, beyond what your disposition must be, but to be of a sane disposition, as God parts to each the measure of faith. For even as, in one body, we have many members, yet all the members have not the same function, thus we, who are many, are one body in Christ, yet severally members of one another. Now, having graces excelling, in accord with the grace which is given to us, whether prophecy, it is in accord with the analogy of the faith; or dispensing, in the dispensation; or he who is teaching, in the teaching; or he

<sup>14</sup> The conduct of the saints in any given economy is based on God's dispensation. If He dispenses law, He requires conduct in accord with law. Mercy calls for a higher standard, while grace appeals for the highest type of loving deportment under even the most trying circumstances. The law allowed men to hate their enemies, to exact an equivalent, as an eye for an eye, and, indeed, to act toward one another as God dealt with them. God's grace, then, is the model after which we may pattern our conduct. As He never curses now, we may not curse, but bless even those who are persecuting us.

<sup>18</sup> If God should avenge Himself on His enemies where would we be? We were His enemies and as such we were conciliated by the death of His Son. Hence we should never avenge ourselves.

<sup>20</sup> An enemy in distress, instead of calling for hate and vengeance, is a special opportunity for the display of God's grace. The "morsel", <sup>Ps. 136</sup> a special portion of food with which a host favored an honored guest, was a token of esteem and consideration. Mercy might provide an enemy with food, but grace accompanies the gift with every mark of love and honor. This is the way in which God vanquished our enmity, hence we should do likewise.

<sup>1</sup> Unlike Israel, we do not come into conflict with the rulers of the world. The setting up of the kingdom will involve the subjection of them all to the suzerainty of Christ. But we have no place in that earthly kingdom. <sup>Prov. 15:1-12</sup> While Israel is thrust aside we must recognize the existing authorities. <sup>13:15</sup> God is not at variance with present governments. It is not a question of obeying God rather than man, as when Peter refused the orders of the Sanhedrin. We must not withstand regularly constituted magistrates, but depend on God to overrule their acts, if they seem to conflict with our duty to God or our convictions of His truth. <sup>1 Pet. 2:13</sup> Our conflict is with the sovereignties, and the authorities and the world-mights, the spiritual forces of wickedness among the celestials. We are to be sandaled with the evangel of peace (Eph. 6:12-15).

who is entreating, in the entreaty; he who is sharing, with generosity; he who is presiding, with diligence; he who is merciful, with glee. <sup>Mat. 6:1</sup>

<sup>14</sup> Bless those who are persecuting <sup>15</sup> you: bless, and curse not. Be rejoicing with those rejoicing, be lamenting with those lamenting, being mutually disposed to one another, not being disposed to that which is high, but being led away with the humble. Do not pass for prudent <sup>17</sup> with yourselves. Now be rendering <sup>18</sup> to no one evil for evil. Be making idéal provision before all mankind, if possible. Those among you, being at peace with all mankind, are not avenging yourselves, <sup>19</sup> beloved, but be giving place to anger, for it is written, "'Avenging is Mine; I shall be retaliating', the Lord is saying". But "If <sup>20</sup> your enemy should be hungering, give him the morsel, if he should be thirsting, give him to drink, for in doing this you will be heaping <sup>21</sup> embers of fire on his head." Be not vanquished by evil, but vanquish evil with good.

<sup>13</sup> Let every soul be subject to the superior authorities, for there is no authority except under God. Now those which are, are set under <sup>2</sup> God, so that he who is resisting an authority has withstood God's mandate. Now those who have with-

5 The true believer should make the most exemplary citizen, for he has a deeper motive and a more powerful impulse to obedience than the unbeliever. He recognizes the civil authorities as God's servants and has a conscience which should make him most law abiding. The unbeliever is deterred from evil by fear and respect for a human institution. We recognize existing governments as of divine origin.

6 It may seem a strange paradox, yet it is a sad fact that many who are ministers of God in name, are not so in truth, and many a magistrate, who would not dare consider himself a minister of God, is such in fact, in the execution of his office.

8 The debtor is the servant of the lender. The servant of God should never be under obligation to another. Love alone is the great debt which never can be fully discharged. Law is useless where there is love, for every precept is more than met by the dictates of love. Apart from love law is a broken fragment, incomplete, unsatisfactory. Love is its complement, and rounds it out to a satisfactory, complete whole.

11 Time, in scripture, is variously characterized. We make an effort to distinguish between the various terms used. The longest divisions of time are the five great eons or ages. The present eon stretches all the way from the flood to the coming advent of Christ. But there are shorter divisions of time, often spoken of under the term SEASON. Sometimes this refers to a literal season of the year, as the harvest season (Mt.13<sup>30</sup>). Usually, however, it denotes some characteristic period or era, as in this scripture. It is illustrated by the dawning of the day. Deeds of darkness are done at night. But this is not the era of darkness but of light. The full day is approaching when our salvation will be complete at His advent. Just as we rouse ourselves in the morning, preparatory to the duties of the day, so, in this larger sense, our conduct should reflect the coming of the light and not be tainted with the dark doings which seek the shades of night to hide their shame.

stood will be getting judgment for themselves, for magistrates are not a fear to the good act, but to the evil. Now you do not want to be fearing the authority. Be doing good, and you will be having applause from it. For it is God's servant for your good. Now if you should be doing evil, fear, for it is not wearing the sword futilely. For it is God's servant, an avenger for indignation to him committing evil. Wherefore it is a necessity to be subject not only because of indignation, but because of conscience also.

6 For because of this you are settling taxes also, for they are God's ministers, perpetuated for this very thing. Be rendering to all their dues, to whom tax, tax, to whom tribute, tribute, to whom fear, fear, to whom honor, honor.

8 Be owing no one anything, except to be loving one another, for he who is loving another has fulfilled law. For "You shall not be committing adultery, you shall not be murdering, you shall not be stealing, you shall not be testifying falsely, you shall not be coveting," and if there is any other precept, it is summed up in this saying, in this, "You shall be loving your associate as yourself." Love is not working evil to an associate. The complement, then, of law, is love.

11 This, also: being aware of the era, that it is already the hour for us to be roused out of sleep (for now is our salvation nearer than when we believe: the night progresses, yet the day has drawn near), then we should be putting off the acts of darkness, yet should be putting on the armor of light. We should be walking respectably as in the day, not in revelry and drunken-

<sup>1</sup> Fellowship among God's saints should not be based on knowledge or ignorance. God receives us even when we are feeble in faith. We should not cut from our fellowship one who does not follow all our deductions from the scriptures. Neither should we make light of his scruples. No foods are forbidden now. Yet the undoubted wisdom of the food regulations under the law may well help us to determine what is best, without abridging our liberty to eat all things with a good conscience. We may not dictate to one another in these things. They are to be settled by the individual conscience before God.

<sup>5</sup> The observance of days is also a matter of individual preference. It is abundantly evident that no day is above another, so far as the scriptures are concerned. The seventh day, the sabbath, was never given to the nations. To observe it is to put ourselves under the curse of the law. The first day of the week, called Sunday, is never once referred to in the scriptures, properly translated. The phrase should always be rendered "one of the sabbaths". In order to get "the first day of the week" it is necessary to alter one to first, to insert the word day, and change the plural sabbaths to the singular week. It is a desperate attempt to find some scriptural excuse for the prevalent observance of Sunday. There is nothing wrong in the setting aside of a day to the Lord. Custom has made Sunday the most convenient for this purpose. But let us not mar the word of God in order to uphold the practise. Neither should we ride rough shod over the religious scruples of those who look upon Sunday as a day sanctioned by God for divine worship. They have no basis for their belief, nevertheless their conscience demands consideration.

<sup>10</sup> It is not ours to pass judgment in these matters. It is not the place of the church to fix any days and condemn those who do not observe them. Only the observance of days as a matter of law keeping is condemned. There is nothing wrong in working on Sunday. It is utterly wrong to keep it as a means of salvation. The same is true of the seventh day, or sabbath.

ness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and jealousy, <sup>14</sup> but put on the Lord Jesus Christ, and be making no provision for the lusts of the flesh. Gal. 3: 27.

<sup>14</sup> Now take to yourselves the feeble in faith, not for discrimination of reasonings. One, indeed, is believing to eat all things, yet he <sup>2</sup> who is feeble is eating greens. Let not him who is eating be scorning him who is not eating. Yet let not him who is not eating be judging him who is eating, for God took him <sup>3</sup> to Himself. Who are you who are judging Another's domestic? To his own Master he is standing or falling. Now he will be made to stand, for the Lord is able to make him stand.

<sup>5</sup> One, indeed, is deciding for one day against another day, yet one is deciding for every day. Let each one be fully assured in his <sup>6</sup> own mind. He who is disposed to a day is disposed to it to the Lord; and he who is eating is eating to the Lord, for he is thanking God. <sup>7</sup> And he who is not eating, is not eating to the Lord, and is thanking God. For none of us is living to himself, and no one is dying to <sup>8</sup> himself. For, as well, if we should be living, we are living to the Lord, if we should be dying, we are dying to the Lord. Then, as well, if we should be living as we should be <sup>9</sup> dying, we are the Lord's. For for this Christ died, and lives, that He should be Lord of both the dead and the living.

<sup>10</sup> Now why are you judging your brother? Or why are you also scorning your brother? For we shall all be presented at the dais of <sup>11</sup> God, for it is written: Psa. 45: 23

"Living am I," the Lord is saying,
'For to Me every knee shall be

<sup>14</sup> The distinctions instituted by the law between things which are to be reckoned clean and unclean have no place in the economy of grace. God has no hesitancy in associating with us, sinners of the nations. A strict Jew could not eat our food without being contaminated. Yet, before God, we are holy and the Jew is unclean! Hence no food is ceremonially unclean. It is only an uninstructed conscience which counts things common.

<sup>15</sup> The liberty to eat anything should not be allowed to infringe on the prejudices of others. Those who have a conscience about partaking of certain foods are easily offended. We should not stand on our rights but seek rather to restrain our liberty to conform to the religious scruples of our fellow believers.

<sup>17</sup> This is not a definition of the kingdom of God, but a statement of its bearing on this subject. The distinctive truth for the present economy was not yet known, and the saints were included in the kingdom of God in its widest aspect as denoting the sphere of God's rule.

<sup>19</sup> These are safe tests to apply to all our intercourse with our fellow saints. Will it provoke strife? If so, let us avoid it. Will it edify? If not, let us forego it. Peace and the edification of others, rather than our own privileges should be pressed. Things which we can do with a good conscience before God, may give dire offense if done before some of His saints.

<sup>1</sup> Knowledge puffs up. There is a prideful tendency to make a show of our liberty in Christ. But grace considers the weak rather than the strong. If there is to be peace and unity it must come from the condescension of those who are able. The weak in faith are not asked to consider the strong. Christ is the most brilliant example in this as in all else. What marvelous condescension He displayed in His dealings with His disciples, whose weakness and lack of faith was a constant source of distress to Him! If He could bridge the great gulf between Him and His disciples, surely we can bear with those whose infirmities we all share.

And every tongue shall be acclaiming God'."

<sup>12</sup> Consequently, then, each of us shall be giving account of himself to God.

<sup>13</sup> Then by no means should we still be judging one another, but rather judge this, not to place a stumbling block or a snare for a brother.

<sup>14</sup> I have perceived and am persuaded in the Lord Jesus that nothing is common of itself, but to one counting anything to be common,

<sup>15</sup> to that one it is common. For if, because of food, your brother is sorrowing, you are no longer walking according to love. Be not, by your food, destroying that one for

<sup>16</sup> whose sake Christ died. Then let

<sup>17</sup> not your good be calumniated, for the kingdom of God is not eating food and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in holy

<sup>18</sup> spirit. For he who in this is slaving for Christ, is well pleasing to God and attested by men.

<sup>19</sup> Consequently, then, we are pursuing that which makes for peace and that which edifies one another.

<sup>20</sup> On account of food do not be demolishing the work of God. All, indeed, is clean, but it is evil to the man to whom eating is a stumbling-

<sup>21</sup> block. It is ideal neither to be eating meat, nor to be drinking wine, nor yet a single thing which is stumbling your brother, or is snaring or weakening him.

<sup>22</sup> The faith which you have, have to yourself before God. Happy is he who is not judging himself in <sup>23</sup> that which he is attesting. He who is doubting if he should be eating has been condemned, seeing that it is not out of faith. Now everything which is not out of faith is sin.

<sup>15</sup> Now we, who are able, ought to be bearing the infirmities of the impotent, and not to be pleasing

PAUL'S PREVIOUS MINISTRY

<sup>8</sup> Contrast the two ministries of Christ and Paul (<sup>16</sup>). Christ was the Servant of the Circumcision. Paul was a minister for the nations. Christ confirms the patriarchal promises. Paul acts as a priest in the evangelism of God. Christ never went outside the land of Israel. He was not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Paul, on the contrary, was not called until he had left the land of Israel. He was sent to the Uncircumcision. It is of the utmost importance that we recognize these distinctive ministries, for the distinction has been virtually ignored. Christ is taken as the minister to the nations and Paul is forgotten. Yet throughout the Lord's public life He emphasized the fact that His mission was to Israel exclusively. A few proselytes, indeed, received blessing, but they were counted as one with the favored nation. The Syro-Phoenician woman had to take the place of an outcast before she could get a crumb from Israel's board.

Paul is a direct contrast to all this. Later he describes himself as the apostle of the nations (2Tim.1:11). He made an agreement with Peter and John that they should go to the Circumcision while he went to the nations (Gal.2:9). He was severed from the rest in order to fulfill this ministry. As a result all the truth for the nations at the present time comes only through the apostle Paul. Those who wish to be established in present truth should master his epistles, especially Ephesians. After they have learned the mysteries or secrets in his writings and scaled the heights to which he alone can guide them, they never will be tempted to descend to the level which is found in our Lord's earthly ministry and in its continuation by the twelve, as recorded in the book of Acts and in the epistles from their pens.

<sup>9</sup> Mercy for the nations "with His people" is not in force now, for His people are not blessed. We are blessed because of their defection. In the millennial age, however, the nations will be abundantly blessed through the restored nation of Israel, with Christ on the throne.

<sup>2</sup> ourselves. Let each of us be pleasing his associate, for his good, toward his edification. For Christ also pleases not Himself, but, according as it is written, "The reproaches of those who are reproaching Thee fall on Me". For as much as was written before was written for our teaching, that through the endurance and consolation of the scriptures we may have expectation.

<sup>5</sup> Now may the God of endurance and consolation grant you to be mutually disposed to one another, according to Christ Jesus, that, with one accord, with one mouth, you may be glorifying the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. <sup>7</sup> Wherefore be taking one another to yourselves according as Christ also took you to Himself, for the glory of God.

<sup>8</sup> For I am saying that Christ has become the Servant of the Circumcision, for the sake of the truth of God, to confirm the patriarchal promises. Yet the nations are to glorify God for His mercy, according as it is written:

"Therefore I shall be acclaiming Thee among the nations,
And playing [music] to Thy name."

<sup>10</sup> And again He is saying:

"Make merry, ye nations, with Deut.32:43 His people!"

<sup>11</sup> And again He is saying:

"Be praising the Lord, all nations,
And let all peoples laud Him."

<sup>12</sup> And again Isaiah is saying:

"There will be a root of Jesse
And He Who is arising to be Chief of the nations:

On Him shall the nations rely."

<sup>13</sup> Now may the God of expectation be filling you with all joy and peace in believing, for you to be superabounding in expectation, in the power of holy spirit.

<sup>14</sup> Now I myself also am persuaded

Paul's Previous Ministry

<sup>16</sup> While the priests at Jerusalem still offered the sacrifices according to the law, their ministrations were not acceptable to God, for they had rejected the true Lamb of God. God had no pleasure in the blood of slain beasts, for the hearts of the offerers were far from Him. Is it not a marvel how God, in His wisdom, finds true worshipers among the despised aliens, who offer themselves as living sacrifices well pleasing to Him? In spirit, Paul's ministry among the nations takes the place of the divine ritual at Jerusalem. He officiates as a priest. Though not sanctified by the altar at Jerusalem, they were hallowed by the holy spirit. So it ought to be today. Though the temple worship has ceased, it is our privilege so to walk as to be a sweet savor of Christ.

<sup>17</sup> Paul labored more than all of the other apostles, and, before this crisis in his ministry, performed greater miracles than the rest. In Acts, every sign in the first part, by Peter, is duplicated in the last part, by Paul. This ministry he has now completed.

<sup>19</sup> The completion of the proclamation of the evangel of Christ marks the central crisis in Paul's ministries. The first was his severance from the rest at Antioch. The last was at Rome, and was followed by the writing of his prison epistles. This crisis lies between, after the completion of his Antioch commission, and is marked by the expression of his desire to go to Rome. In Acts his previous ministry is declared to be fulfilled (Ac. 19:21). In Corinthians he would henceforth know no one after the flesh. He had been proclaiming Christ after the flesh—as Israel's Messiah—but he would now do so no longer (2Cor. 5:16). It is at this crisis also that the conciliation is first revealed (2Cor. 5:17-20).

His second ministry was concerned with justification (Ac. 13:39). After this crisis, his third ministry is characterized by conciliation, which is first set forth in the fifth to the eighth chapters of this epistle in its individual aspect, and in the eleventh chapter, in its national aspect. His final ministry was carried on at Rome, which he plans to visit at this crisis. It was carried on almost entirely by means of the Perfection Epistles.

ed concerning you, my brethren, that you yourselves also are bulging with goodness, having been filled with all knowledge, able also to be admonishing one another. Yet I write to you more daringly, in part, as prompting you, because of the grace given to me from God, for me to be the minister of Christ Jesus for the nations, acting as a priest of the evangel of God, that the offering of the nations may be becoming well received, having been hallowed by holy spirit. 12:1

<sup>17</sup> I have, then, in Christ Jesus, a boast in what is toward God. For I am not daring to speak any of what Christ does not effect through me for the obedience of the nations, in word and work, in the power of God's spirit, so that, from Jerusalem and around as far as Illyricum, I have completed the evangel of Christ. Yet thus, I am ambitious to be preaching the evangel where Christ is not named, lest I may be building on another's foundation, but, according as it is written,

"They who were not informed concerning Him shall be viewing, And they who have not heard be understanding."

<sup>22</sup> Wherefore, I was much hindered also in coming to you. Yet now, having by no means still place in these regions, yet having for many years a longing to come to you, as I should be going into Spain (for I am expecting, while going through, to gaze upon you, and by you to be sent forward there, if I should first be filled, in part, by you)—yet now I am going to Jerusalem, dispensing to the saints. For it delights Macedonia and Achaia to

Paul's Intended Journey

<sup>28</sup> During Paul's first three ministries the nations were dependent on Israel, and received of their spiritual things. Hence they were indebted to them and sought to pay by sending them relief in time of famine. But after this Paul makes known the present secret economy, in which the nations are no longer guests of Israel (Eph.2<sup>12,19</sup>), but receive their own spiritual blessings direct from God. Their destiny is changed to heaven, where Israel has no possessions. At the close of the book of Acts the pre-eminence of the Jew vanished, and since then there is a new humanity in which all physical distinctions are done away.

<sup>29</sup> The blessing of Christ which fills doubtless is an intimation of the transcendent truths which were made public by Paul after his arrival at Rome. None of the blessings before bestowed filled, in the sense of completing and perfecting. The full-orbed presentation of truth in the Ephesian epistle, written at Rome, fully meets the anticipation here expressed by the apostle.

<sup>30</sup> Paul's apprehension lest he should not be well received in Judea was well founded, as events proved. Though he came bringing gifts to his people, his later teaching seemed to them to be directed against the people and the law and Jerusalem. Indeed, he did teach that God would be worshiped in any place, and he did lead out from under the bondage of the law (Ac.21<sup>28</sup>). Tens of thousands of Jews believed, yet they were all zealous of the law (Ac.21<sup>20</sup>). They would not hear of blessing to the nations apart from the law. Later, <sup>4:17</sup> when Paul spoke to them, they did not object to his own call, but could not bear to hear of his commission to the nations (Ac.22<sup>21</sup>).

make some contribution for the poor saints who are in Jerusalem. For they are delighted, and they are their debtors, for if the nations participate in their spiritual things, they ought to minister to them in <sup>28</sup> fleshly things also. When, then, performing this, and sealing to them this fruit, I shall be coming away <sup>29</sup> through you into Spain. Now I am aware that, in coming to you, I shall be coming with the blessing of Christ which fills.

<sup>30</sup> Now I am entreating you, brethren, through our Lord, Jesus Christ, and through the love of the spirit, to struggle together with me in prayers to God for me, that I should be rescued from the stubborn in Judea, and my dispensation for Jerusalem may be becoming well received <sup>32</sup> by the saints, in order that I may be coming to you with joy through the will of God, and I should be resting together with you. Now the God of peace be with you all! Amen! <sup>16:26</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Now I am commending to you Phœbe, our sister, being a servant <sup>2</sup> of the ecclesia in Cenchrea, that you should be receiving her in the Lord worthily of the saints, and may stand by her in whatever matter she may have need of you, for she, too, has become a patroness of many, and of me also.

<sup>3</sup> <sup>2 Tim. 4:19</sup> Greet Prisca and Aquila, my fellow workers in Christ Jesus (who, for my soul's sake jeopardize their own necks, whom not I only, but all the ecclesias of the nations also are <sup>5</sup> thanking) and the ecclesia of their house.

Greet Epanetus, <sup>12</sup> my beloved, who is the firstfruit of the [province of]

Greetings

7 The term "relative" is an elastic expression, used sometimes in a broad sense of all Israelites (9<sup>a</sup>) yet more usually in a restricted sense of a closer blood relation (Jn.18<sup>26</sup>). Paul mentions six of his relatives in the course of these greetings (7,11,21), besides his mother. Very few of them are ever spoken of again in the scriptures. Some of them, notably Andronicus and Junius, seem to have been very prominent and faithful. They were in Christ before him and suffered imprisonment with him. Indeed, it is not at all improbable that we are to understand them to be apostles, not indeed of the twelve, but such as Barnabas (Ac.14<sup>14</sup>).

10 "Of Aristobulus" seems to denote those associated with his establishment. Perhaps this is the grandson of Herod the Great who was later given the government of Lesser Armenia.

11 Narcissus is probably one of Nero's favorites, for even Nero's household was invaded by the power of the evangel (Phil.4<sup>22</sup>).

13 Rufus is probably the same one whose father Simon was compelled to bear the cross (Mk.15<sup>21</sup>). If so, he must have been of some prominence among early believers, for Mark is content to identify his father by referring to him and his brother Alexander. It is touching to see the apostle especially single out his mother, the wife of him who had the honor of bearing our Saviour's cross.

17 How soon dissension and division crept in among the saints! Even before they had received the truth in its fullness, men came with smooth words to draw them from it. Hence the necessity for some authoritative written standard, as this epistle, to which appeal could be made when the truth was in danger.

22 Tertius was probably a professional scribe, such as to this day are employed to write letters in the East. Paul, however, usually penned the concluding words of his epistles.

7 toils much for you. Greet Andronicus and Junias, my relatives and my fellow captives, who are notable among the apostles, who also came
8 to be in Christ before me. Greet Amphiatos, my beloved in the Lord.
9 Greet Urbanus, our fellow worker in Christ, and Stachys, my beloved.
10 Greet Apelles, attested in Christ. Greet those who are of Aristobulus. Greet Herodian, my relative. Greet those of Narcissus who are 12 in the Lord. Greet Tryphena and Tryphosa, who are toiling in the Lord. Greet <sup>As My Female</sup> Persis, beloved, who 13 toils much in the Lord. Greet Rufus, chosen in the Lord, and his 14 mother and mine. Greet Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermes, Patrobas, Hermas, and the brethren with 15 them. Greet Philologos and Julia, Nereus and his sister, and Olympas
16 and all the saints with them. Greet one another with a holy kiss. All the ecclesias of Christ are greeting you. J. S.

17 Now I am entreating you, brethren, to be noting those who are making dissensions and snares beside the teaching which you learned,
18 and avoid them, for such are not slaving for our Lord Christ, but for their own bowels, and through compliments and adulation are deluding the hearts of the innocent.
19 For your obedience reached out to

<sup>25</sup> The importance of this closing benediction is apparent from the fact that it was written by the apostle with his own hand after Tertius had finished the epistle. Paul characterizes the great themes of his epistle, my gospel and the proclamation of Jesus Christ, <sup>15:33</sup> in accord with the revelation of a secret hushed in times eonian (conciliation), in contrast with the gospel of God (<sup>11</sup>) which He promised before. The conciliation was not made known through the (Hebrew) prophets, but through prophetic writings, such as this epistle and 2 Corinthians. It is of principal importance that we see the point the apostle makes here, for otherwise we shall not appreciate the unique, distinctive character of the conciliation, which is first set forth in this epistle. The teaching of the fifth to the eighth chapters and especially the eleventh chapter is absolutely unknown in the prophets. In the latter all blessing comes to the nations through Israel as the channel. The conciliation comes because Israel is thrust aside. The prophets would lead us to infer that Israel's apostasy would bar all possibility of blessing to the nations. The conciliation was a secret they knew nothing of, for it makes Israel's defection the ground of worldwide, unbounded blessing to the nations until Israel is again in God's reckoning.

all. Over you, then, I am rejoicing. Now I am wanting you to be wise, indeed, for good, yet artless for evil. Now the God of <sup>20</sup> peace will be crushing Satan under your feet swiftly. The grace of our Lord Jesus be with you!

<sup>25</sup> Now to Him Who is able to establish you in accord with my evangel, and the proclamation of Christ Jesus in accord with the revelation of a secret hushed in times eonian, <sup>1:12</sup> yet manifested now, through prophetic scriptures as well, according to the injunction of the eonian God being made known to all nations for the obedience of faith—to God only <sup>27</sup> wise, through Christ Jesus, be glory for the eons of the eons. Amen!

I CORINTHIANS

PAUL's first epistle to the Corinthians is a divine commentary on the conduct inculcated in the epistle to the Romans. The secret of a life well pleasing to God lies in the crucifixion of the flesh and resurrection by the power of the spirit (Rom. 6<sup>8-11</sup>). The Corinthians failed in both of these requisites, as will be seen by the framework. The first part of the epistle shows that though the apostle had pressed the preaching of the cross, which puts an end to all physical pretensions, they persisted in making much of men, and thus created divisions among themselves. The close of the epistle shows also that some denied the resurrection, though the resurrection of Christ was fundamental to the evangel and an absolute necessity to acceptable conduct.

As is the case with so many of the epistles, each subject is taken up twice, as shown in the framework, dividing the epistle into two distinct parts, each having the same general subjects, but discussing them from distinct standpoints. In the first half all is personal. In the second all is ecclesiastical. The gifts in the former portion are men, Paul and Apollos. In the latter they are spiritual endowments, which were exercised in the ecclesia. Thus also, the abuse of the physical body is balanced by the abuse of the Lord's body. The private conduct of the marriage relation is replaced by their conduct in the public meetings of the saints. Idol sacrifices are discussed in their relation to the individual and as they affect the ecclesia, especially the Lord's table.

The central subject is the question of Paul's apostolic authority. First he discusses his personal rights, but then waives them all in his desire for the welfare of others.

Thus we see a marvelous symmetry and balance of thought in an epistle which is usually supposed to be without method.

This epistle is a severe rebuke to the present day ecclesiastical systems. If division was a proof of carnality in Corinth, what does the multiplication of sects with which we are afflicted prove? There is far more need today of the salutary correctives in this epistle than there was in Corinth. There is need to proclaim, not only the death of Christ, but the manner of His death. A crucified Christ is the answer to the worldly wisdom and religious carnality of those who profess the name of God.

This epistle shows why so few are able to apprehend the marvelous mysteries of Paul's later epistles. If the Corinthians were so carnal that the apostle could not reveal these to them, it is no marvel that they are hid from the immature believer of today. Yet the apostle did disclose to them the secret of the resurrection.

In the midst of all the gifts the apostle points them to the transcendent grace which has since become ours by a later revelation. The gifts have ceased. Faith, expectation and love remain. Let us hope that soon faith will be lost in sight and expectation in realization. Then love alone will abide. May we give it the place pre-eminent!

PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS (1)

1 This is not the first time the apostle has written to the Corinthians. He had written a letter to them (5<sup>a</sup>) and they had written one in return (7<sup>1</sup>). This epistle is partly a reply to their letter. So that it is not to be taken as first Corinthians in the absolute sense, but in relation to the second epistle.

2 It is worthy of note that this epistle, like the Thessalonian and Galatian epistles, is written to a corporate ecclesia. Indeed, the whole of the latter half treats of ecclesiastical relations.

2 The name Sosthenes recalls much of Paul's career in Corinth. Crispus, the chief of the synagogue, believed and probably lost his place immediately, for we next read that Sosthenes was the chief of the synagogue. When Gallio refused to interfere, the crowd took Sosthenes and beat him in front of the dais. It may be that this man was also reached by the evangel, and became Paul's companion in Ephesus, where this epistle was, in all probability, penned. If so, it is a notable triumph of grace.

4 Corinth was the first place, after Paul's severance from the rest at Antioch, where he was allowed to continue long enough to teach and establish the saints in the truth. He was there a year and a half (Ac.18<sup>11</sup>), and many of the Corinthians not only believed, but were recipients of many spiritual graces looking forward to the day of Christ's unveiling.

9 What a marvelous privilege and honor is involved in fellowship with the Son of God! Yet this is the portion of everyone who is His.

10 It should be an occasion of gratitude to God that the correction of the Corinthians, though of temporary and local interest at the time, still provides guidance on many points of practical importance. Thus their very divisions not only exposed their own carnality, but are the sure sign of the prevailing lack of spirituality today. Few, indeed, would rebuke allegiance to themselves, yet Paul, first of all, objects to anyone saying "I am of Paul". No matter what name is used, schism is indefensible and deplorable.

PAUL, a called apostle of Christ Jesus, through the will of God, and Sosthenes, a brother, to the ecclesia of God which is in Corinth, hallowed in Christ Jesus, called saints, together with all in every place who invoke the name of our Lord Jesus Christ—theirs as well as ours:

3 Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I AM THANKING my God always concerning you for the grace of God which is given you in Christ Jesus, seeing that you are enriched in everything in Him, in all expression and all knowledge, according as the testimony of Christ was confirmed among you, so that you are not deficient in a single grace, awaiting the unveiling of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who will be confirming you also to the consummation, unimpeachable in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ. God is faithful, through Whom you were called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord.

10 Now I am entreating you, brethren, through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that all may be saying the same thing, and there may be no schisms among you, but you may be attuned to the same mind and of the same opinion. For it was made evident to me concerning you, my brethren, by those of Chloe, that there are strifes among you. Now I am saying this, that each of you is saying "I, indeed, am of Paul", yet "I of Apollos", yet "I of Cephas", yet "I of Christ". Has Christ been parted? Was Paul crucified for

<sup>17</sup> Baptism, like circumcision, was a physical rite, and seemed to give the flesh a place before God. The entire tenor of Paul's commission was against this. He draws a sharp line between baptizing and evangelizing.

THE WORD OF THE CROSS

<sup>18</sup> The "word of the cross" has a far deeper significance than the death of Christ for our sins. It brings before us the manner of His death. The curse of the law was attached to such a death. It brought down the curse of God. On the human side, however, it showed what human religion and human wisdom can do. When God's Image was present among men they not only failed to appreciate Him, but displayed the innate hatred of their carnal religious hearts by dooming Him to the death of the vilest criminal. He Who spoke as never man spoke should have been welcomed by the wise men of the world, but they showed the essential stupidity of human wisdom by gibbeting the embodiment of all wisdom upon the ignominious cross. Yet God has made that scene of weakness and shame the brightest exhibition of His power and glory. Though it seems to sound the depths of powerless infamy, it eclipses all the power and wisdom of men. The word of the cross is still despised, but its proclamation is salvation to all who believe. The height and summit of man's wisdom cannot reach to the divine folly.

your sakes? Or are you baptized into the name of Paul? I am thanking God that I baptize none of you except Crispus and Gaius, lest any should be saying that you are baptized into my name. Yet I baptize the household of Stephanas also. Furthermore, I am not aware if I baptize any other. For Christ does not commission me to be baptizing but to be preaching the evangel, not in wisdom of word, lest the cross of Christ should be made void.

<sup>18</sup> For the word of the cross is stupidity, indeed, to those who are being destroyed, yet to us who are being saved it is the power of God.
<sup>19</sup> For it is written, "I shall be destroying the wisdom of the wise, and the understanding of the intelligent shall I be repudiating." Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the discussor of this eon? Does not God make stupid the wisdom of this world? For since, in fact, in the wisdom of God, the world through wisdom knew not God, God delights, through the stupidity of a proclamation, to save those who are believing, since, in fact, Jews are requesting signs and Greeks are seeking wisdom, yet we are proclaiming Christ crucified, to Jews, indeed, a snare, and to the nations stupidity, yet to those who are called, Jews as well as Greeks, Christ, the power of God and the wisdom of God, seeing that the stupidity of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men.
<sup>26</sup> For you are observing your calling, brethren, that there are not many wise according to the flesh; not many powerful, not many no-

<sup>27</sup> To this day the great, the noble, and the wise are a small minority among the true saints of God. It is a matter of extreme thankfulness that this is so. If high birth or wisdom or any other attainment were necessary to His choice, how few would be able to measure up to His standard, and how little glory would there be for Him! Yet now we see those mentally deficient, chosen by Him, acting more wisely than the philosophers who shut God out of their lives. Here in Corinth we see the trembling apostle, scorned even by those whom he has been the means of blessing, doing a work which has brought more glory to God and good to man than all the efforts of the might and nobility of all time!

<sup>30</sup> Would that we would cease looking for anything in ourselves! Let us not boast in our wisdom, or our holiness, but find these only in Christ. Then let us boast to our heart's content in that which we have in Him.

<sup>1</sup> Eloquent appeals, logical arguments, or profound philosophy, have no place in the proclamation of the evangel. We are to proclaim the word, testify to the truth. The subject matter is all provided by God. Nothing would have appealed to the Corinthians better than some new philosophy, or some astute line of reasoning. But faith does not rest on reason but on a message backed by the power of the spirit of God. What is needed today is a return to the simple, unadorned proclamation of the evangel, the death of Christ on the cross for our sins and the resurrection of Christ because of our justification. The power of this good news is as great today as it proved to be in Corinth.

<sup>7</sup> Though God has repudiated the world's wisdom, there is a divine wisdom, of which the world knows nothing, which even the saints do not apprehend until they attain maturity. This wisdom is fully unfolded in Paul's later epistles to the Ephesians, Philipians and Colossians. It cannot be grasped, even today, by carnal saints. It is for the spiritual, who have seen the end of the flesh.

<sup>7</sup> "Before the eons" shows that the eons or ages are not eternal in the past, but had a definite beginning.

<sup>27</sup> ble, but God chooses the stupid of the world that he may be disgracing the wise, and God chooses the weak of the world that He may
<sup>28</sup> be disgracing the strong, and the ignoble of the world, and those who are scorned, God chooses, and those who are not, that He should be dis-
<sup>29</sup> carding those who are, so that no flesh should be boasting before God.
<sup>30</sup> Yet you, of Him, are in Christ Jesus, Who became to us Wisdom from God, besides Righteousness
<sup>31</sup> and Holiness and Deliverance, that, according as it is written, "He Who is boasting, let him be boasting in the Lord."

2 And I, coming to you, brethren, came not with superiority of word or of wisdom, announcing to you the <sup>2</sup> testimony of God, for I decide not to perceive anything among you except Jesus Christ, and Him crucified.
<sup>3</sup> And I came to be with you in weakness, and in fear, and in <sup>4</sup> much trembling, and my word and my proclamation were not with persuasive [words] of human wisdom, but with demonstration of the
<sup>5</sup> spirit and of power, that your faith may not be in the wisdom of men but in the power of God.

<sup>6</sup> Yet we are speaking wisdom among those who are mature, yet not the wisdom of this eon, neither of the chief men of this eon, who are <sup>7</sup> being discarded, but we are speaking God's wisdom in a secret, which has been concealed, which God designates before the eons for our
<sup>8</sup> glory, which not one of the chief men of this eon has known, for if they know, they would not crucify

<sup>9</sup> We need only consider our own desire to surprise and gratify those who love us to realize a little of what is in God's heart toward us. God gives of His spirit that we may apprehend His further gifts. The secret here hinted at by Paul can be none other than the secret economy unfolded in his Ephesian epistle, which is based upon the secret of Christ, or His exaltation as the Head of the whole universe. As such He is the Lord of glory, for no one on earth, or in the heavens, approaches the honor and dignity which will be His in the eons of the eons.

<sup>11</sup> The apostle appeals to our own experience. Human beings can understand one another because they have the same spirit. But animals cannot enter into the recesses of human experience. No more can a man apprehend things divine without the interpretive presence of God's holy spirit.

<sup>13</sup> The scriptures often lay stress on the character of the words employed by the spirit of God. A large measure of the current confusion may be traced to the loose, unscriptural terms which are used. Timothy was urged to hold to the pattern of sound words. If this is true in the original language, how much more should we endeavor to fulfill this charge!

<sup>13</sup> The term "matching" has been rendered "comparing". But the thought of the passage is not the agreement between spiritual things, but the adaptation of spiritual things to mankind. It is useless to teach a soulish man spiritual things, for he has no means of grasping them.

<sup>1</sup> Doubtless the apostle would gladly have instructed the Corinthians in the deep things of God, but they were not able to bear them. And what was the sure sign of their carnality? Division. While some were the partisans of Paul, who planted, and some of Apollos, who watered, and strove about God's gifts in the person of His servants, they were effectually frustrating any further outflow of His favor. And so it is today. If any yearn to know the deep secrets of God, let them purge themselves of all party spirit, and thus open their hearts to the great Giver Himself.

it is written, "That which the eye perceived not, and the ear hears not, and to which the heart of man ascended not — whatever God makes ready for those who are loving Him." Yet God reveals it to us through His spirit, for the spirit is searching all, even the depths of God.

<sup>11</sup> For what in humanity is acquainted with that which is human except the spirit of humanity which is in it? Thus also, that which is of God no one has known

<sup>12</sup> except the spirit of God. Now we obtained, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God, that we may be perceiving that which is graciously given to us

<sup>13</sup> by God, which we are speaking also, not with words taught by human wisdom, but taught by the spirit, matching that which is spiritual with those who are spiritual.

<sup>14</sup> Now the soulish man is not receiving that which is of the spirit of God, for it is stupidity to him, and he is not able to know it, seeing that it is spiritually examined.

<sup>15</sup> Now he who is spiritual is, indeed, examining all, yet he is being examined by no one. For did any-

<sup>16</sup> one know the mind of the Lord? Who will be deducing from Him? Yet we have the mind of Christ.

<sup>3</sup> And I, brethren, could not speak to you as to spiritual, but as to fleshly, as to minors in Christ. I give you milk to drink, not solid food, for you were not as yet able. Nay, now you still are not able, for you are still fleshly. For where there is jealousy and strife among you, are you not fleshly and walking according to man? For whenever anyone should be saying, "I, indeed, am of Paul", yet an-

<sup>5</sup> Apollos was a Jew of Alexandria, a scholarly man, and able in the scriptures. He came to Ephesus, full of zeal, but versed only in the baptism of John. Priscilla and Aquila heard him speak boldly in the synagogue, so they took him to themselves and expounded the way of God more accurately to him. On his way back he passed through Achaia and doubtless spent much time in Corinth. While there he parleyed much with the believers and strenuously and thoroughly confuted the Jews, publicly exhibiting, through the scriptures, that Jesus is the Christ (Ac.18<sup>24-28</sup>).

<sup>8</sup> There is little doubt but that Apollos taught precisely as Paul did. They were one. Indeed, Apollos received much of his teaching indirectly from Paul, through Priscilla and Aquila.

<sup>9</sup> Paul seeks to draw their hearts from occupation with men, by comparing them with a farm on which he was merely a laborer, or a building on which he was only a craftsman. He did the first work. He planted. Apollos gave the crop water. But they could not make a single seed grow. Growth is due to God alone.

<sup>14</sup> Let all who teach take this to heart: their work will be tested to see what kind it is. It is better to have a little after the fire than much before it.

<sup>15</sup> The question here is not salvation, but service. It is not concerned with the conduct of the believer but with the doctrine of those who teach.

other, "I, of Apollos", is he not fleshly?

<sup>5</sup> Who, then, is Apollos? Now who is Paul? Servants through whom you believe, and each as the Lord gives. I plant, Apollos irrigates, but God makes it grow. So that, neither is he who is planting anything, nor he who is irrigating, but God Who makes it grow. Now he who is planting and he who is irrigating are one. Yet each will be getting his own wages according to his own toil. <sup>9</sup> For we are fellow workers of God. You are God's farm, God's building.

<sup>10</sup> According to the grace of God which is granted to me, as a wise foreman I lay a foundation, yet another is building on it. Yet let each one beware how he is building. For other foundation can no one lay beside that which is laid, <sup>12</sup> which is Jesus Christ. Now if anyone is building on this foundation gold and silver, precious stones, <sup>13</sup> wood, grass, straw, each one's work will become apparent, for the day will make it evident, seeing that it is revealed by fire. And the fire will be testing the work <sup>14</sup> of each one—what kind it is. If anyone's work which he builds on it <sup>15</sup> shall remain, he will get wages. If anyone's work shall burn up, he will forfeit it, yet he shall be saved, yet thus, as through fire.

<sup>16</sup> Are you not aware that you are a temple of God and the spirit of God is making its home in <sup>17</sup> you? If anyone is corrupting the temple of God, God will be corrupting him, for God's temple is holy, which you are.

<sup>18</sup> Now let no one be deluding himself. If anyone among you is presuming to be wise in this eon, let

<sup>18</sup> The wisdom of the world is a far greater menace today than in the days of the apostle. The nominal church has no hesitancy in following, not only the wisdom of the world, but its folly as well. On every hand we are assured that the church must get on a business basis and use modern methods. The aim of the preacher is popularity, the confidence of the multitude is in men. Proclaim a great truth, freshly found in the word, and who will listen? Set up a great leader and men will flock to hear his eloquence. God is forgotten in the church more grievously than in the world.

<sup>22</sup> The cure for a partisan spirit is the recognition that the men who are given by God to edify His saints are all ours. We should not single out a single one, but include them all. We should not say "I am of Paul", so as to exclude Apollos or Cephas, but realize that they are all ours, and a gift from God, not to quarrel about, but to appreciate and enjoy. The heritage of Huss and Luther and Darby has descended to us, though we may not belong to their party.

<sup>1</sup> Doubtless those who were not of the Pauline party were inclined to be captious and question his motives or his methods. But Paul will not allow this. He did not receive his commission from them and refuses to acknowledge their right to examine him. What if they did? Their standards were not God's, and their surface knowledge was no basis for any decision. This is man's day. The current of the world's affairs is contrary to God and any arraignment of God's servants now will need very much revision indeed when freed from the prejudice and baneful influence of the day of man.

<sup>4</sup> The possession of a good conscience is no justification. Paul knew that he had a good conscience even when he was a bitter opponent of Christ.

<sup>5</sup> When the time for examining the service of God's stewards comes it will be based on truth. Not only the outward act but the inward motive will be brought to light. Many who seem to accomplish little, purposed greatly in their hearts, and will be rewarded according to their intention, rather than their failure to fulfill.

him become stupid, that he may <sup>19</sup> be becoming wise, for the wisdom of this world is stupidity with God. For it is written, "He Who is clutching the wise in their craftiness." And again, "The Lord
<sup>20</sup> knows the reasonings of the wise, that they are vain". So that, let no one be boasting in men, for all is
<sup>21</sup> yours, whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or the present, or the future
<sup>22</sup> —all is yours, yet you are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

<sup>3</sup> Now to me it is the least trifle that I may be being examined by you or by man's day. But neither am I
<sup>4</sup> examining myself. For I am conscious of nothing as to myself, but I have not been justified by this. Now He Who is examining me is <sup>5</sup> the Lord. So that, be not judging anything before the appointed time, till the Lord should be coming, Who will also illuminate the hidden things of darkness and manifest the counsels of the hearts. And then applause will be coming to each one from God.

<sup>6</sup> Now these things, brethren, I transfer in a figure to myself and Apollos because of you, that in us you may be learning not to be disposed above what is written, that no one may be puffed up for one against another. For who <sup>7</sup> is discriminating between you? Now what have you which you did not obtain? Now if you obtained it also, why are you boasting as <sup>8</sup> though not obtaining? You are sated already, you are rich already,

<sup>8</sup> The sharp contrast between the carnal Corinthians and the faithful apostle loses none of its force if we compare him with the church of today. We need not go outside of Protestantism to find churches sated, rich, and avowedly endeavoring to influence the world by political means. Every charge against the Corinthians in this passage is tenfold more applicable today. Those organizations which are not strong and glorious make every effort to become so. We have drifted far from our true place in the world. The world that hated our Lord and put Him to the accursed death, that hounded His apostle until he, too, was ready to be offered up, has not changed. It still persecutes those who want to live godly.

<sup>11</sup> What a contrast between Paul and the dignitaries of the church today! Though loaded with the care of all the churches among the nations, he lacks every sign of such an exalted position. In actual want at times, and toiling for his subsistence at others, without sufficient clothing for comfort, undergoing all sorts of indignities, with no settled habitation, the apostle presents an abject, almost pitiable picture. Nothing could be worse than his own summary: "We became as the offscourings of the world, the scum of the universe."

<sup>15</sup> It was a custom among the higher classes to employ a slave in escorting the boys of a family to and from school. It would seem that the apostle is using this term to characterize those who had followed him in leading the Corinthians. They could not take the place of the one who had first brought them to the knowledge of Christ.

<sup>16</sup> We need not stumble at Paul's putting himself forward for imitation, rather than the example of Christ. Since the Lord's ascension and the call of Paul there has been a radical change in the character of God's dealings with the nations. Paul's pattern call, and his later conduct, is the example for us to follow in this day of grace. The Circumcision follow in our Lord's steps. If we followed the example given by our Lord to His disciples we would proclaim the gospel to none but Jews (Ac.11<sup>19</sup>).

you reign apart from us. And surely you ought to reign, that we also should be reigning with you.

<sup>9</sup> For I suppose that God demonstrates with us, the last apostles, as death-doomed, seeing that we became a gazing stock to the world and to messengers and to men. We are stupid because of Christ, yet you are prudent in Christ. We are weak, yet you are strong. You are glorified, yet we are dishonorable. Until the present hour we are hungering and thirsting, and are naked and are buffeted and <sup>12</sup>unsettled and toiling, working with our own hands. Being reviled, we are blessing, being persecuted, we are bearing with it, being calumniated, we are entreating. We became as the offscourings of the world, the scum of the universe, till the present.

<sup>14</sup> It is not to be abashing you I am writing these things, but as my beloved children I am admonishing <sup>15</sup>you. For if you should be having ten thousand escorts in Christ, but not many fathers, for in Christ Jesus I beget you through the evangel. <sup>16</sup>I am entreating you, then, <sup>17</sup>become imitators of me. Therefore I send Timothy to you, who is my beloved and faithful child in the Lord, who will be reminding you of my ways which are in Christ Jesus, according as I am teaching everywhere in every ecclesia.

<sup>18</sup> Now some were puffed up as though I were not coming to you. <sup>19</sup>Yet I shall be coming to you swiftly, if the Lord should be willing, and I will know, not the word of those who are puffed up, but <sup>20</sup>the power. For the kingdom of

<sup>21</sup> It was some time before Paul came to Corinth. This epistle was probably written at Ephesus, whence Paul went to Macedonia. While there he wrote the second epistle to the Corinthians in which he lays aside the rod and manifests that spirit of love and meekness which he longed to show toward them.

<sup>1</sup> Even when we remember the extreme laxity of morals which prevailed in many of the large and luxurious cities of the Roman empire at that time, the corrupting influence of the heathen deities which they had so recently served, and the eagerness with which they sought to right this wrong, we can hardly see how such a state of affairs could exist in Corinth, and, at first sight, it seems even more difficult to see why it should have been incorporated in holy writ, to be the butt of infidels and the sport of the ungodly. Yet such is all of God's word. It is a light which does not shun to expose all the shame and dishonor of the very ones who are declared to possess the righteousness of God. And it is full of comfort for those who fall, for if His grace was sufficient in such a case, it will suffice for all.

<sup>5</sup> It will be noticed that the punishment, of being given up to Satan, was with a view to salvation. Thus are all of God's judicial acts. They are not vindictive, without any consideration for the welfare of those involved, but are of such a nature as to correct the evil.

<sup>9</sup> The apostle had already written on this subject to the Corinthians. The state of society may well be imagined when he tells them that, should they refuse to have dealings with all such immoral persons, they would need to leave the world entirely. Now he makes it clear, however, that immorality will not be tolerated among those in the ecclesia. All such should be excluded. They are subject to the judgment of their brethren. Immorality outside the ecclesia is not a matter for the saints. God is judging those who are outsiders.

<sup>13</sup> There is a striking contrast between the methods of dealing with moral evil and doctrinal heresy. There were those in Corinth who held fundamental

God is not in word, but in power.

<sup>21</sup> What do you want? That I may be coming to you with a rod, or in love as well as a spirit of meekness?

<sup>5</sup> Actually, prostitution is heard of among you, and such prostitution as is not even named among the nations, as that anyone has his father's wife. And you are puffed up, and mourn not rather, that the one committing this act may be taken away from your midst. For I, indeed, being absent in body, yet present in spirit, have already, as if present, judged the one effecting this, thus: In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, you being assembled, and my spirit, together with the power of our Lord Jesus, to give up such a one to Satan for the extermination of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

<sup>6</sup> Your boast is not ideal. Are you not aware that a little leaven is leavening the whole kneading?

<sup>7</sup> Clean out, then, the old leaven, that you may be a fresh kneading, according as you are unleavened. For even Christ, our Passover, was sacrificed for our sakes, so that we may be keeping the festival, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of evil and wickedness, but with unleavened sincerity and truth.

<sup>9</sup> I write to you in the epistle not to commingle with paramours. And undoubtedly it is not as to the paramours of this world, or the greedy and extortionate, or idolaters, else as a consequence you ought to come out of the world.

<sup>11</sup> Yet now I write to you not to commingle with anyone who is named a brother, should he be a paramour, error, for they denied the resurrection. The apostle reasons with them and shows them the consequences if their heresy were true, but he never suggests their excision. But when the behaviour of a brother became such that he brought reproach upon the holy brotherhood of believers, he was summarily expelled. This was the surest way of bringing him to repentance. By sending him back into the world, he realized the gravity of his misconduct.

1 It is unfortunate that our word "judge" usually takes on the sense of condemnation. The saints are not to condemn the world but to rule it during the eons. Saints in Israel will possess the kingdom on earth. We shall administer the rest of the universe. This destroys utterly the crude conceptions of "heaven" usually entertained. We shall not be idle, but, as members of Christ's body, will direct and control the angels, including the utmost bounds of the empyrean.

If, then, such a future is for the saints, how incongruous for us to appeal to the unjust to settle our differences!

It is a deplorable state of affairs when brethren in Christ go to law against one another. It shows that one or the other is unjust and so is not a fit subject for the sphere of God's rule. When the kingdom is established there will be no room for those whose conduct is contrary to the strict justice which will be its chief characteristic.

If a believer has a case against another believer he should never have it tried before unbelievers. If they cannot settle it between themselves, they should choose some wise man, a believer in whom there is mutual confidence, and submit their case to him, and abide by his decision.

If this is impracticable, it rests with the aggrieved one to submit to the injury or loss rather than bring disgrace on the name of Christ. All that we do should be done with the single object of glorifying God, even if it entails shielding one who has wronged us, because his reputation cannot but affect the estimate with which the saints are held by the unbelievers in the world. We are not under law, but under grace. Let us use this rule in dealing with our brethren.

or greedy, or an idolater, or a reviler, or a drunkard, or an extortioner. With such a one you are 12 not even to be eating. For what is it to me to be judging those outside? You are not judging those 13 within! Now those outside God is judging. Expel the wicked one from among yourselves.

6 Dare any of you, having business with another, be judged by the unjust, and not by the saints? Or are you not aware that the saints shall be judging the world? And if the world is being judged by you, are you unworthy of the least tribunals?
3 Are you not aware that we shall be judging messengers,
4 not to mention life's affairs? If indeed, then, you should have tribunals for life's affairs, are you seating these who are scorned in the ecclesia? I am saying this to abash you. Thus is there not even one wise one among you who will be able to adjudicate in the midst
6 of his brethren, but brother is suing brother, and this before unbelievers?
7 Already, indeed, then, it is actually a discomfiture for you that you have lawsuits with yourselves. Wherefore are you not rather being injured? Wherefore are 8 you not rather being cheated? But you are injuring and cheating, and 9 this brethren! Or are you not aware that the unjust shall not be enjoying the allotment of God's kingdom? Be not deceived. Neither paramours, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor catamites, nor sodomites, nor thieves, nor greedy, nor drunkards; no revilers, no extortioners shall be enjoying the allotment of God's kingdom. <sup>11</sup> The city of Corinth was noted for its profligacy and, as the evangel makes its special appeal to sinners, some of the Corinthian saints could look back at a past of very doubtful character. But the evangel they received had cleansed and sanctified and acquitted them. In God's sight, at any rate, they no longer bore these characters, and His grace would constrain them to conduct themselves accordingly.

<sup>12</sup> This is a necessary consequence of justification and the reign of grace. All is allowed to the one who has been vindicated by God. Nothing can ever touch his position before God in Christ. But this knowledge will not lead us to be lax in our conduct, as some might suppose.

<sup>15</sup> The exalted honor of being members of Christ is the most powerful incentive to keep our bodies free from the gross sin which still afflicts humanity as it did in the days when this epistle was penned.

<sup>18</sup> Wherever God dwells is the temple of God, and is hallowed by His presence. It was not the stately buildings or the sacred ritual or even the sacrifices which hallowed the sanctuary, but the presence of the glory of God in the holiest of all. The very ground of the desert was holy where Moses met Jehovah (Ex.35). So our body, whatever its physical appearance or condition, has become a temple by virtue of the divine spirit which indwells us. It is no longer ours, but His, and like the tabernacle in the wilderness and the temple in Jerusalem, should allow nothing that defiles to enter its precincts. God does not dwell in temples made with hands, but in the bodies of His saints. Holy conduct and loving acts are the ritual.

It will be noted that conduct pleasing to God always conforms to the divine activities. When God deals out justice He requires the same in His saints. When He is gracious, as in this economy, He is pleased when we deal with one another according to the our Lord Jesus Christ and by the spirit of our God.

<sup>12</sup> All is allowed me, but not all is expedient. All is allowed me, but I shall not be under the authority

<sup>13</sup> of anything. Foods for the bowels and the bowels for foods, yet God will be discarding both these and those. Now the body is not for prostitution, but for the Lord, and

<sup>14</sup> the Lord for the body. Now God rouses the Lord also, and will be rousing us up through His power.

<sup>15</sup> Are you not aware that your bodies are members of Christ? Taking, then, the members of Christ away, should I be making them members of a prostitute? May it

<sup>16</sup> not come to that! Or are you not aware that he who is joined to a prostitute is one body? For, He is averring, the two will be one

<sup>18</sup> Lord is one spirit. Be fleeing from prostitution. The penalty of every sin which a man may be doing is outside of the body, yet he who is committing prostitution is sinning

<sup>19</sup> in his own body. Or are you not aware that your body is a temple of the holy spirit in you, which you have from God, and you are not <sup>20</sup> your own? For you are bought with a price. By all means glorify God in your body.

<sup>7</sup> Now concerning what you write to me: It is ideal for a man not to

higher dictates of grace. Perhaps we can carry this even further. Redeemed Israel is the bride of the Lambkin. His relation to them is figured by the marriage tie. The present ecclesia, however, is His body, a much closer and more vital union. Hence the ideal for the present time is to remain as Paul was. It was doubtless ideal, in this sense, for Peter to have a wife. Paul's celibacy is undoubtedly in accord with the great truths with which he was commissioned, which disregard all physical relationships, being spiritual conditions to be realized among the celestials, where marriage has no place. Perhaps these considerations account for the undecided tone and temporary character of this chapter.

8 It is evident that the preceding concession is only a general rule, not applicable to those not then married. Their relations are to be regulated by mutual consideration, but the unmarried need to consult only their own condition.

10 The law of divorce, in Scripture, varies according to the character of God's ways in each economy. Because of the hardness of their hearts God gave them the provisions in the law. This is no rule for us today. Where both are believers there is no divorce in this economy. The reason for this is evident, even as the reason for divorce in Israel. Israel was married to Jehovah, but He had to divorce her for her sins. But we are the body of Christ, and no one can be separated from His own body! Our union with Him is unbreakable. This should be reflected in our earthly relationships.

11 When there has been a separation, a woman may not marry again so long as her husband is living.

12 The rule where one is an unbeliever is modified to suit conditions. The believer is to make no move toward separation, but if the unbeliever obtains a divorce the believer is entirely free.

13 While it is not right for a believer to marry an unbeliever, grace makes ample provision for such, especially as many are called while married to an unbeliever. Just as everything which touched the altar was holy (Ex.29<sup>37</sup>), so the unbeliever is hallowed by association with one of God's saints.

depriving one another, except it should be by agreement for a period, that you should have leisure for fasting and prayer, and you may be the same again, lest Satan should be trying you because of your incontinence. Now this I am saying as a concession, not as an injunction. For I want all men to be as I myself also, but each has his own gracious gift from God, some, indeed, thus, yet some, thus.

8 Now I am saying to the unmarried and widows, that it is ideal for them if they should be remaining even as I. Yet if they are not controlling themselves, let them marry, for it is better to marry than to be on fire.

10 Now to the married I am charging, not I, but the Lord: A wife is not to be separated from her husband. Yet if she should be separated also, let her remain unmarried or be conciliated to her husband. And a husband is not to desert a wife.

12 Now the rest I am saying, not the Lord. If any brother has an unbelieving wife, and she approves of making a home with him, let him not be deserting her. And a wife who has an unbelieving husband, and he approves of making a home with her, let her not be deserting her husband. For the unbelieving husband has been hallowed by the wife, and the unbelieving wife has been hallowed by the brother, else, consequently, your children are unclean. Yet now they are holy. Yet if the unbeliever is separating, let them be separating. A brother or a sister is not enslaved in such a case. Now God has called us in peace. For what are you aware, O wife, if you will be saving your husband, or what are you aware,

<sup>17</sup> It is evident that God plans the time to call each of His saints. Some are in one station in life and some in another; some in one occupation and others in a different one. An important principle is laid down here which it were well for the saints to heed. It is this: The occupation and condition in which we were when God called us indicates, in a general way, what He would have us be. There is to be no radical change except in the case of those called in idleness or questionable occupations. There should, however, be a great change in our conduct, for we are to remain in our vocations with God. This it is which transforms the slave into the Lord's freedman, and makes the freeman a slave of Christ. This is the vital principle which replaces the outward rite of circumcision. It is not of great moment what a man may do for a livelihood, if he does it in such a way as to please God and bring no reproach on His name.

<sup>23</sup> Slavery has quite gone out of fashion, but those who have been bought with the blood of Christ should not be slow to acknowledge that in their case, it still exists. We are not our own. Let us glory in this. Not only are we His servants, but we are His slaves. We have no right to our own will and way. We are slaves of the Lord Christ, but not of any man, though he be Christ's apostle.

<sup>25</sup> The record of Paul's opinion is as much inspired as the injunction of the Lord. It is evident that no set rule can be laid down for the regulation of such matters which would not lead to license or undue restraint. So we have only the apostle's opinion, based on the condition of affairs in Corinth at the time. There was evidently much laxity of morals, due perhaps to the fact that the members of the Corinthian ecclesia had been themselves involved in the loose manners for which the city was noted, and to the low level of conduct prevailing all about them. This opinion does not apply at all times or places, for it would lead to monasticism. Hence the apostle is careful to add that those who do not follow his advice are not guilty of any wrong action.

O husband, if you will be saving
<sup>17</sup> your wife, except as the Lord parts to each?

Each as God has called him, thus let him be walking. And thus am I <sup>18</sup> prescribing in all the ecclesias. Was anyone called having been circumcised? Let him not be de-circumcised. Has anyone been called in uncircumcision? Let him not be
<sup>20</sup> God. Each one in the calling in which he was called—in this let him
<sup>21</sup> be remaining. Were you called a slave? You need not care. But if you are able to become free also,
<sup>22</sup> use it rather. For the slave being called in the Lord is the Lord's freedman. Likewise, he who is called, being free, is a slave of

<sup>25</sup> Now concerning virgins [or celibates] I have no injunction of the Lord. Yet I am giving an opinion as one who has obtained mercy of
<sup>26</sup> the Lord to be faithful. I am inferring, then, this to belong to the ideal, because of the present necessity, seeing that it is ideal for a
<sup>27</sup> person to be thus. Have you been bound to a wife? Be not seeking to be loosed. Have you been loosed from a wife? Be not seeking <sup>28</sup> a wife. Yet even if you should be marrying, you did not sin. And if a virgin should marry, she did not sin. Yet such will be having affliction in the flesh. Yet I am sparing you.

<sup>29</sup> Now this I am averring, brethren, the era is limited; that, furthermore, even those having wives

 ones-JOYING AS NO JOYING

<sup>31</sup> The transient, fleeting character of all of this world's relationships and experiences should warn us not to let them take an undue hold upon our hearts. We cannot but use the world to a limited extent. Its joys and sorrows affect us, whether we will or no. If it were a permanent system instead of a temporary stage in the process of God's plan, our attitude would be different. In the semi-permanent millennial system, the saints will not be restrained from the full use of the world of that day. But the present system is distinctly hostile to God and occupation with it is calculated to interfere with our fellowship with God and the enjoyment of His permanent purpose.

<sup>32</sup> No doubt both Paul and Peter were representative men whose personal affairs were in accord with the dispensations given them by the Lord. Peter went about with a wife, for the relationship between the Lord and the remnant in Israel, to whom Peter belonged, was figured by the marriage tie. They were the bride of the Lamb. Paul, on the other hand, revealed a nearer and closer union, that of the human body, in which Christ was the head and His saints the members. Paul, consequently, never married, but devoted himself undistractedly to the Lord's service. This is the ideal for this economy, yet the apostle is most careful not to press it as an injunction, for, unless such a course is entered upon wholeheartedly and with faith and fortitude which few possess, it would lead only to failure.

<sup>33</sup> In this economy of grace there is no room for divorce. The marriage tie is binding for life. What Moses gave the hard-hearted sons of Israel is no rule for us. And even the single cause to which our Lord confined divorce was based on the kingdom code, not on the superabundance of grace in which we revel. Death alone can sever the marriage bond today, so far as two saints are concerned. If one, however, is an unbeliever, and deserts the believer, this also leaves the believer free. But, apart from this, it is entirely out of keeping with God's grace for two who have tasted of His favor, to seek to sever the tie.

<sup>30</sup> may be as not having them, and those lamenting as not lamenting, and those rejoicing as not rejoicing, and those buying as not retaining, and those using this world, as not using it up. For the fashion of this world is passing by.

<sup>32</sup> Now I want you to be without solicitude. The unmarried one is solicitous about the things of the Lord, how he should be pleasing the Lord. Yet he who marries is solicitous about the things of the world, how he should be pleasing his wife, and is parted. And the unmarried woman and the virgin: the unmarried one is solicitous about the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit, yet she who marries is solicitous about the things of the world, how she should be pleasing her husband. Now this I am saying with a view to your own expedience, not that I should be casting a noose over you, but with a view to that which is respectable and assiduous—to be undistractedly for the Lord.

<sup>36</sup> Now if anyone is inferring it to be indecent for his virgin, if she should be over her meridian, and thus it ought to occur, let him be doing what he will: it is not sinning. Let them be marrying. Yet he who stands settled in his heart, having no necessity, yet has authority over his own will, and has decided this in his own heart (to be keeping his own virgin) will be doing ideally. So that the celibate himself also who is marrying, will be doing ideally, yet he who is not giving in marriage will be doing better.

 WE-HAVE-PERCEIVED that ALL

<sup>1</sup> Except in heathen lands, the question of eating that which has been offered in sacrifice to idols, is no longer a pertinent one, but the principle handed down is quite as important as ever. Those who are advanced in the faith know that there is no difference between food offered to idols and any other. Before God they may freely eat, but not before their brethren whose faith is not established. So we may freely do many things before God which might offend our brethren and cause them to stumble. Let us not flaunt our liberty in their faces, but rather let us refrain from that which may result in harm to a weak brother. Let us walk in love.

<sup>6</sup> We have here a marvelously exact and concise definition of the relationship which we sustain to God and to the Lord, which, in turn, throws much light on their respective relationship to each other. Briefly put, God is the Source and Object of all; Christ is the Channel of all. Thus it is always found. We are never said to come out of Christ, but out of God. Indeed, Christ asserts that He Himself, came out of God (Jn.8<sup>42</sup>). All is out of God (Rom.11<sup>36</sup>). But God never deals with us except through His Anointed. Creation began in the Son of God and was carried out through Him. He has the same place in redemption. There is no conflict, for, while the Son, as the Image of the Father, is entitled to be called God and to receive the same honor as the Father, yet He Himself insists that His Father is greater than all (Jn. 10<sup>29</sup>). All that He had was received from His Father. His very life was a gift (Jn.5<sup>26</sup>), and He lived by the Father (Jn.6<sup>57</sup>). He did the Father's will, not His own. He sought the Father's glory, not His own. He was one with the Father, and desired that the disciples might become partakers of that unity (Jn. 17<sup>22</sup>). So that He Himself was in every way, out of the Father. On the other hand, He is the only Way to the Father, the only means through Whom we may know God. Hence, while all is sourced in God the Father, all is channeled through the Son. It is only by clinging closely to the exact language of holy writ that we may hope to gain a clear conception of the relation of the Father to the Son.

if the husband should be reposing, she is free to be married to whom she will, only in the Lord. Yet she is happier if she should be remaining thus, according to my opinion. Now I presume that I also have God's spirit.

<sup>8</sup> Now concerning the idol sacrifices: We are aware that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffs up, yet love edifies. If anyone is presuming to have known anything, he knew not as yet according as he ought to know. Now if anyone is loving God, he is known by Him. Then, concerning feeding on the idol sacrifices: We are aware that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no other God except One. For even if so be that there are those being termed gods, whether in heaven or on earth, even as there are many gods and many lords, nevertheless to us there is one God, the Father, out of Whom all is, and we for Him, and one Lord, Jesus Christ, through Whom all is, and we through Him. But in all there is not this knowledge. Now some, hitherto used to an idol, are eating of it as an idol sacrifice, and their conscience, being weak, is polluted. Now food will not give us a standing with God, neither, if we should not be eating are we in want, nor if we should be eating are we surfeited.

<sup>9</sup> Now beware lest somehow this right of yours should be becoming a stumbling block to the weak. For if anyone should see you, who have knowledge, lying down in an idol's shrine, will not his weak conscience be injured to the eating of the idol sacrifices? For the weak one is being destroyed also by your knowledge: the brother because of whom Christ died. Now in thus sinning against <sup>1</sup> The Corinthians questioned the apostleship of Paul. The phrase, "the twelve apostles" has been used to throw doubt on his commission, for if there were but twelve apostles, Paul could not have been one of them. He did not have the qualifications, and Matthias was duly chosen to fill Judas' place. Only one who had been with the Lord from John's baptism onward to His ascension was qualified to be counted with the twelve (Ac.12<sup>2</sup>). Paul did not meet the Lord until some years later. The kingdom apostles are limited to twelve, for there will be only twelve thrones provided for them when they rule the tribes of Israel in the kingdom (Mt.19<sup>28</sup>). It is evident that Paul and Barnabas and Timothy and Apollos will have no apostolic reward in that kingdom. Their apostleship is of an entirely different order. The gospel of the Uncircumcision was committed to Paul as that of the Circumcision had been to Peter. James, Cephas and John, chief of the twelve apostles, recognized this and gave Paul and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, that they should go to the nations. The twelve confined themselves to the Circumcision. Thus there are two distinct orders of apostles, the twelve to the Circumcision, connected with the kingdom on earth, and an indefinite number, of whom Paul was chief, sent to the nations and connected with the successive ministries of the apostle Paul. Though the Corinthians denied his apostolic authority, he was not a whit behind Peter, the chief of the Circumcision apostles.

<sup>3</sup> Paul had the undoubted right to do as the other apostles, but he chose the higher privilege of doing everything in his power to help the evangel. He worked with his own hands to supply his necessities when he might have demanded support.

<sup>8</sup> It is God's pleasure that His servants who minister spiritual things should be requited with carnal things. In the present low state of spirituality spiritual things are accounted of no value, while material things are held in high repute. To acquire a sum of money without recompense is a crime, but many receive vast spiritual wealth without any sense of obligation.

brethren, and beating their weak conscience, you are sinning against <sup>13</sup> Christ. Wherefore, if food is snaring my brother, I should under no circumstances eat meat for the eon, lest I should be snaring my brother.

<sup>9</sup> Am I not free? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesus, our Lord? Are you not my work
<sup>2</sup> in the Lord? If I am not an apostle to others, nevertheless I surely am to you. For you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

<sup>3</sup> My defense to those examining
<sup>5</sup> to eat and drink? Have we no right at all to be leading about a sister as a wife, even as the rest of the apostles and the brothers of the
<sup>7</sup> working? What soldier is at any time purchasing his own rations? Is anyone planting a vineyard and not eating of its fruit? Or is anyone tending a flock and not eating of the milk of the flock?

<sup>8</sup> Am I speaking these things according to man, or is not the law
<sup>9</sup> also saying these things? For in the law of Moses it is written: "You shall not be muzzling the threshing ox." Is God caring for oxen?
<sup>10</sup> Or is He undoubtedly saying it because of us? Because of us, for it was written that he who is plowing ought to be plowing in expectation, and he who is threshing, in his expectation of partaking in the
<sup>11</sup> expectation. If we sow the spiritual in you, is it a great thing if we shall be reaping of your fleshly
<sup>12</sup> things? If others are partaking of your right, are not we rather? Nevertheless we do not use this right, but we are foregoing all, lest we may be giving any hindrance to the evangel of Christ.

<sup>13</sup> God has always made due provision for the support of His servants. The priests and Levites were not concerned with their own livelihood, hence had no allotment of land to till, but depended on the labors of their brethren. They were wholly devoted to God's service. The same rule applies to the proclamation of the evangel.

<sup>15</sup> It seems a marvel that the saints who owed so much to the apostle would have allowed him to engage in menial labor, when they could easily have supplied his meager needs. Yet herein was his glory, that, though supporting himself, at least in part, he still found time and strength to do more than any other apostle. The natural course would have been to use his authority to the full so that he could give himself wholly to the work of the ministry. The marks of true greatness are apparent in his anxiety not to use his full authority, but to do everything which in any way may be a benefit to the evangel. Such a course as this ought to be all the more effective in these days when the stain of filthy lucre is a prominent mark on many religious enterprises. The world has learned to look upon religion as a means of gain. The history of the church has been one long endeavor on the part of the clergy (with many noble exceptions) to enrich themselves at the expense of the laity. Had Paul's spirit prevailed, what a different story there would be to tell!

<sup>19</sup> Many otherwise inexplicable events in Paul's career, as narrated in the book of Acts, are to be explained on the principle of conduct here laid down by the apostle. His course often seems to contradict the truth he had enunciated in the epistles he had penned. However strongly he insisted on freedom from the law, he could, nevertheless, take part in the rites and ceremonies of the temple when among his Jewish brethren. The whole narrative of Acts shows him becoming all things to all with whom he came in contact. On his journeys, in Jerusalem, in jail, on board the foundering ship—wherever he was he adapted himself to the men and means at his disposal to forward the claims of the evangel. The same principle should regulate our efforts that we also may gain some.

<sup>13</sup> Are you not aware that those who are working at the sacred things are eating of the things of the sanctuary? Those who are settled beside the altar have their <sup>14</sup> portion with the altar. Thus the Lord also prescribes that those who are announcing the evangel are to
<sup>15</sup> be living of the evangel. Yet I use none of these things. Now I do not write these things that it may be becoming thus with me, for it is my ideal rather to be dying, than that anyone shall be making my boast void.

<sup>16</sup> For if I should be preaching the evangel, I have nothing to boast of, for necessity is laid upon me, for it were woe to me if I should <sup>17</sup> not be preaching the evangel! For if I am engaging in this voluntarily, I have wages, yet if involuntarily, I have been entrusted with an administration. What, then, are my <sup>18</sup> wages? That, in preaching the evangel, I should be placing the evangel without expense, so as not to use up my authority in the evangel.

<sup>19</sup> For, being free of all, I enslave myself to all, that I should be gain-
<sup>20</sup> ing more. And I became to the Jews as a Jew, that I should be gaining Jews; to those under law as under law (not being myself under law), that I should be gaining <sup>21</sup> those under law; to those without law as without law (not being without God's law, but legally Christ's), that I should be gaining <sup>22</sup> those without law. I became as weak to the weak, that I should be gaining the weak. To all I have become all, that I should undoubt-
<sup>23</sup> edly be saving some. Now I am doing all because of the evangel, that I should be becoming a joint participant of it.

<sup>25</sup> Contestants in the Grecian games had to take an oath that they had been ten months in training, and that they would violate none of the regulations. They lived on a prescribed diet and exercised severe self-restraint. The wreath or "crown" was made of the leaves of the pine. Groves of these trees surrounded the stadium near Corinth. Other leaves were used in other cities. For some time parsley was substituted for pine, but it seems that, in the time of the apostle, they used the pine wreaths. To avoid confusing these chaplets with the symbol of regal authority they are never called a "crown" in this version.

<sup>26</sup> The subject before the apostle is not salvation, but service and reward. The apostle is not concerned lest he should be a "castaway", but whether he should win the prize. Two things are necessary, self-control and obedience to the rules of the game. Both are essential in order to win a wreath. In these days, when "success" is measured by human standards, it is of the utmost importance to press the fact that a violation of the rules absolutely bars the contestant from all hope of a prize. Service at the expense of truth or of conscience, to gain a livelihood or win popularity, no matter how strenuous, wins no prize. God looks on the motive and method, not on the apparent results. May we all so strive that He will be able to bestow the amaranthine wreath upon us!

<sup>1</sup> The redemption of Israel out of Egypt was typical of the spiritual deliverance which is ours in Christ. All, indeed, were redeemed by the blood of the paschal lamb, but not all by any means pleased God in the wilderness journey. They all went through the Red Sea dry shod, all were identified with Moses, all ate the manna, and all drank the water brought forth by Moses' rod in the desert. Yet, notwithstanding these privileges, they failed in self-control, they went back in heart to the flesh pots of Egypt, reverted to idolatry, sinned and murmured. These are the very sins into which some of the Corinthians were ensnared. And these things still have their appeal to us unless we, like the apostle, reduce our bodies to bondage.

<sup>24</sup> Are you not aware that those racing in the stadium are, indeed, all racing, yet one is obtaining the prize? Thus be racing that you may grasp it. Now everyone who is contending is controlling himself in all things; they, indeed, then, that they may be obtaining a corruptible wreath, yet we an incorruptible. Now then, thus am I racing, not as dubious, thus am I boxing, not as punching the air, <sup>27</sup> but I am belaboring my body and leading it unto slavery, lest somehow, when proclaiming to others, I may be becoming disqualified myself.

<sup>10</sup> For I do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, that our fathers all were under the cloud, and all came through the sea, and all are baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea, and all ate the same <sup>4</sup> spiritual food, and all drank the same spiritual drink, for they drank of the spiritual Rock following ~~them~~. Now the Rock was Christ.

<sup>5</sup> But God does not delight in the majority of them, for they were <sup>6</sup> strewn along in the wilderness. Now these things became types of us, so that we are not to be lusters after evil, according as they also lust. <sup>7</sup> Neither become idolaters, according as some of them, even as it is written, "The people are seated to eat and drink, and rise to sport." <sup>8</sup> Neither should we commit prostitution, according as some of them commit prostitution, and fall in one day, twenty-three thousand. <sup>9</sup> Neither may we be putting the Lord on trial, according as some of them put Him on trial, and were <sup>10</sup> destroyed by serpents. Neither be murmuring, even as some of them murmur, and were destroyed by the exterminator.

11 The eons are divided into two classes, the first three, which are preparatory, and the last two, called the "eons of the eons", which turn the evil of the first class into good. The last two eons, including the thousand years' reign and the reign of the saints in the new heavens and new earth, are the fruit and consummation of the evil eons. In spirit, Paul brought those under his ministry into the new creation, which is the spiritual counterpart of the eon inaugurated by the new heavens and new earth. It is only thus that the consummations of the eons had already reached the Corinthians.

12 Here again, the apostle is not considering salvation but the endurance of trial on the part of those who are saved. Salvation is entirely of God, through Christ. No one need be concerned about its efficacy or power. But beyond salvation there is the possibility of earning a reward, of winning a prize. This requires us to take due heed to our conduct.

13 God does not try us to break us down but to build us up. Hence He sends nothing insupportable. He does not however, make "a way of escape", as many of His saints have found by experience. If He did, why or how could that enable them to undergo it? They would not need to endure it if He took them out of it. He makes a sequel. This word occurs again in Heb. 13: "contemplating the sequel (A. V. end) of their behaviour". All the great examples of trial were sustained by a contemplation of its sequel. Joseph held the sceptre in the prison. David wore the crown in Adulam. Even Job knew that he would see his Redeemer. We should not try to escape trial, but seek grace to endure it. We should not occupy ourselves with it, but contemplate the blessed outcome which it is designed to produce.

20 There seems little doubt but that the heathen divinities were not mere myths, but actual demons. These are rampant today in Spiritism and often deceive the saints into believing that they are the holy spirit of God by mimicking the gifts which were bestowed during the proclamation of the kingdom.

11 Now all this befalls them typically. Yet it was written with a view to our admonition, to whom the consummations of the eons have attained. So that, let him who is supposing he stands beware that he should not be falling. No trial has taken you except what is human. Now God is faithful, Who will not be leaving you to be tried above what you are able, but, together with the trial, will be making the sequel also, to enable you to undergo it.

14 Wherefore, my beloved, be fleeing from idolatry. I am saying this as to the prudent: judge you what I am averring. The cup of blessing which we are blessing, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we are breaking, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? Seeing that we, who are many, are one bread, one body, for all are partaking of the one bread.

18 Observe Israel according to the flesh. Are not those who are eating the sacrifices participants with the altar? What, then, am I averring? That an idol sacrifice is anything? Or that an idol is anything? But that which the nations are sacrificing, they are sacrificing to demons and not to God. Now I do not want you to become participants with demons. You cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of demons. You cannot be partaking of the table of the Lord and the table of demons. Or are we making the Lord jealous? Are we stronger than He?

23 All is allowed me, but not all is expedient. All is allowed me, but not all is edifying. Let no one be seeking his own, but that which is another's. Be eating everything <sup>32</sup> It has been customary, in the study of "dispensational" truth, to divide the human race into "the Jew, the Gentile, and the church of God", and base the division on this passage. It is well, however, to note that the classification here is not Israel and the nations, but the Jew and the Greek. The Jew stands for the religious man, the Greek for the rationalist. One required signs, the other sought for wisdom. These, especially the Jew, would have a sensitive conscience on matters of small moment, and would be easily offended. Their modern representatives observe days, and abstain from foods, and have things sacred and profane. A tender solicitude for their conscience will keep us from becoming a stumbling block to them.

<sup>1</sup> Is it presumption on the part of Paul to set himself up for our imitation? Not at all, for he adds, as I also am of Christ. He knew how to follow Christ. He did not make the mistake of following "Jesus" in His earthly walk, before His death and resurrection, for he never knew Him then. He followed the Christ Who was in the glory, Whom He had met on the Damascus road. It is noteworthy that the Christ Whom Paul knew never appeared to the Circumcision after His ascension as He did to Paul. They were associated with His earthly career and its resumption when He reappears on the mount of Olives at His advent. Paul imitates Him in His gracious dealings with himself and the nations from His heavenly throne. This calls for conduct in many respects radically different from the example He left the twelve apostles. A single point will suffice to show this. The Lord Jesus never preached to any but Jews and proselytes. He warned His disciples not to go to the other nations. How could we imitate Him in this?

<sup>5</sup> The man should honor his head because it represents Christ. The woman should cover her head because it represents the man. It is a notable fact that, as men fail to subordinate themselves to Christ, women, in turn, refuse to be subordinate to them. And this is reflected, unconsciously, no doubt, in the matter of head dress. The lifting of the hat is a sign of man's headship over the woman.

<sup>26</sup> nothing because of conscience. For the earth and that which fills it is the Lord's.

<sup>27</sup> If any of the unbelievers is inviting you, and you want to go, be eating everything placed before you, examining nothing because of con-

<sup>28</sup> science. Yet if anyone should be saying to you, "This is a sacred sacrifice", do not eat, because of that one who divulges it, and con-

<sup>29</sup> science. Yet conscience, I am saying, not your own, but another's. For why is my freedom being de-

<sup>30</sup> cided by another's conscience? If I, with gratitude, am partaking, why am I being calumniated for that for which I am giving thanks?

<sup>31</sup> Then, whether you are eating or drinking, or whatever you are doing, be doing all for the glory of

<sup>33</sup> ecclesia of God, according as I also am pleasing all in all things, not seeking my own expedience, but that of the many, that they may be

11 saved. Become imitators of me, according as I also am of Christ.

<sup>2</sup> Now I am applauding you that you have been reminded of all of mine, and are retaining the traditions according as I give them over

<sup>3</sup> to you. Now I want you to be aware that the Head of every man is Christ, yet the head of the woman is the man, yet the Head of Christ is God.

<sup>6</sup> being shaven. For if a woman is not covered, let her be shorn also. Now if it is a shame for a woman

7 The modern disregard and ridicule of these wise customs is but a symptom of the prevalent apostasy and insubordination to the truth of God, as well as of the ignorance which does not appreciate the profound wisdom which underlies them. It would seem that the messengers, or angels, realize these various headships and the signs which should acknowledge them. Hence, though men have lost all appreciation of their significance, it is still due to these unseen observers to comply with a custom which is in accord with both nature and revelation. The covering of a woman's head is no disrespect to her. It signifies that her head—the man—should be covered when in God's presence. The uncovering of a man's head is no boast of his. It represents his Head—Christ—Who is the Image and Glory of God.

18 The schisms of that early day did not begin to reach the open rupture we see everywhere about us today. The sects in the Corinthian ecclesia doubtless all came together in one place. No such thing was known as believers in Christ actually divided into independent ecclesias, though living in the same locality. The sin of schism and sectarianism seems to be the most incurable affliction of the church. The later history of the Corinthians shows that, though they were purged of the various heresies and immoralities into which they had fallen, after Paul's death they once more broke up into rival factions, each of which followed some distinguished leader. In recent times, various efforts have been made to restore this outward unity, but, in each case, it has led to another division. The true course for those who wish to please God seems to be indicated by the apostle's charge to keep the unity of the spirit in the tie of peace (Eph.4<sup>3</sup>), and to have fellowship with all who invoke the name of the Lord out of a clean heart (2 Tim. 2<sup>22</sup>). The visible, outward unity of believers no longer remains. Let us cultivate fellowship with all, irrespective of the man-made walls which divide us. Soon we shall all be caught up into the presence of Christ and then every barrier will be banished. Let us do our share to realize this unity now.

to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered. For a man, indeed, possessing the image and glory of God, ought not to have the head covered. Yet the woman is the glory of the man. For man is not out of woman, but woman out of man. For man is not created also because of the woman, but woman because of the man. Therefore the woman ought to have authority on her head because of the messengers. However, neither is woman apart from man, nor man apart from woman, in the Lord. For even as the woman is out of the man, thus also the man is through the woman, yet all is of God.

13 Judge of them among you. Is it becoming in a woman to be praying to God uncovered? Is not the same instinct teaching you that if a man, indeed, should have tresses, it is a dishonor to him, yet if a woman should have tresses, it is her glory, seeing that tresses have been given her instead of clothing? Now if anyone is presuming to be rivalrous, we have no such usage, neither the ecclesias of God.

17 Now in giving this charge I am not applauding, seeing that you are coming together, not for the better, but for discomfiture. For first, indeed, at your coming together in the ecclesia I am hearing of schisms existing among you, and some part I am believing. For it must be that there are sects also among you, that those also, who are qualified, may be becoming apparent among you.

20 Then, at your coming together in the same place, it is not to be eating the Lord's dinner, for in the eating, each one is getting his own dinner before, and one, indeed, is

<sup>21</sup> The phrase "the Lord's supper" is misleading. Supper denotes an evening meal, but the word here employed has no such significance, though its first observance was at night. The word denotes the principal meal of the day, just as the word dinner does with us, without any reference to the time when it is eaten. The Corinthians brought their own dinners and ate them in the ecclesia. This custom was not approved by the apostle. He would have them eat at home.

<sup>25</sup> At this time the believers among the nations were still subordinate to Israel. They were still partakers of their spiritual things, hence they were considered as coming under the blessings of the new covenant. The later revelations contained in the Perfection Epistles, gave them an independent standing outside the new covenant which Jehovah made with Israel.

<sup>27</sup> The manner in which the Corinthians partook of the Lord's dinner was not in keeping with the august solemnity befitting such a sacred recollection. The powers of the kingdom were still present among them and led to the judgment of those who had offended. Some suffered from illness and some even died. Even thus, the apostle explains, it is that such should not be condemned with the world. The discipline of the Lord is always salutary, even though it may seem most severe.

<sup>22</sup> hungry, yet one is drunk. For have you no homes in which to eat and drink? Or are you despising the ecclesia of God, and mortifying those who have nothing? What may I be saying to you? Shall I be applauding you in this? I am not applauding.

<sup>23</sup> For I accepted from the Lord, what I give over also to you, that the Lord Jesus, in the night in which He was betrayed, took bread, and giving thanks, He breaks it and said, "This is My body which is broken for your sakes. Be doing this for a recollection of Me."

<sup>25</sup> Similarly, the cup also, after dinner, saying, "This is the cup of the new covenant in My blood. Be doing this, whensoever you should be drinking, for a recollection of Me." For whensoever you should be eating this bread and drinking this cup, you are announcing the Lord's death till He should be coming.

<sup>27</sup> So that, whoever should be eating the bread or drinking the cup of the Lord unworthily, will be liable for the body and blood of the Lord.

<sup>28</sup> Now let a man be testing himself first, and thus let him be eating of the bread and drinking of the cup. For he who is eating and drinking unworthily is eating and drinking judgment to himself, not discriminating the body of the

<sup>30</sup> Lord. Because of this many among you are infirm and ailing, and a considerable number are reposing.

<sup>31</sup> For if we adjudicated ourselves, we would not be judged. Yet, being judged, we are disciplined by the Lord, that we may not be condemned with the world.

<sup>33</sup> So that, my brethren, be waiting for one another when coming to-

<sup>4</sup> The threefold treatment of the subject of "spirituals" (as they are called in the Greek) is indicated in the opening sentence. First the graces are enumerated, as they are apportioned to each one by the spirit, in verses seven to eleven. Then the Lordship of Christ in the apportionment of service is illustrated by the figure of the human body, in verses twelve to twenty-seven. The rest of the chapter considers the operation of the graces under the disposition of God.

<sup>7</sup> The spirit we have received, though one, manifests itself in a variety of ways. This was far more manifest among the Corinthians than it is today, for the signs which characterized that immature economy were closely allied to the miraculous manifestations which accompany the proclamation of the kingdom. As the next chapter explains, now that maturity has arrived, such exhibitions of the spirit's power are not in keeping with the perfection or maturity of this secret economy.

Spiritual endowments were not confined to one member of an ecclesia, or even to a few. Each one was given some special evidence of the spirit's presence, with a view to the blessing of all. None of these endowments, whether wisdom, or healing, or languages, was the outgrowth of natural ability. Neither could any one acquire them. They were apportioned to each one quite apart from human instrumentality. Though these endowments are no longer given, the divine principle still remains, that God chooses His instruments quite apart from their natural qualifications.

<sup>12</sup> The figure of the human body is the most notable of all the illustrations of our relationship to Christ. It is the most marvelous example of unity with diversity in the realm of creation. Spirit baptism unites all who believe God to one another and to Christ, and dissipates all the physical distinctions which divide humanity into diverse and antagonistic classes, making them one in Him. In Christ there is no Greek and Jew, bond and free, male and female. In the Lord, however, in relation to service, these distinctions still remain.

<sup>24</sup> gether to eat. Now if anyone is hungry, let him be eating at home, that you may not be coming together for judgment. Now the rest I shall be prescribing as soon as I should be coming.

<sup>12</sup> Now concerning spiritual [endowments], brethren, I do not want you to be ignorant. You are aware that when you were of the nations you were led off to the voiceless idols as ever you were led. Wherefore I am making known to you that no one, speaking by God's spirit, is saying "Anathema Jesus". And no one is able to say "Lord Jesus" except by holy spirit.

<sup>4</sup> Now there are apportionments of graces, yet the same spirit, and there are apportionments of service, yet the same Lord, and there are apportionments of operations, yet the same God Who is operating all in all.

<sup>7</sup> Now to each one is given the manifestation of the spirit, with a view to expedience. For to one, indeed, through the spirit, is given the word of wisdom, yet to another the word of knowledge, according to the same spirit, yet to another faith by the same spirit, yet to another the grace of healing, by the one spirit, yet to another operations of powers, yet to another prophecy, yet to another discrimination of spirits, yet to another, species of languages, yet to another, translation of languages.

<sup>11</sup> Now one and the same spirit is operating all these, apportioning to each his own, according as it is intending.

<sup>12</sup> For even as the body is one and has many members, yet all the members of the one body, being many, are one body, thus also is the Christ. For in one spirit we all are

<sup>13</sup> The body of Jesus, or of the Lord, denotes His physical frame. The body of Christ, however, is quite a distinct thought. Christ, or the Anointed, is a title rather than a name. It suggests official position. We are not united to Him by physical ties, as Israel was, but by purely spiritual relationships. This is forcibly suggested by the two figures used, baptism, or dipping, and drinking. One spirit, within and without, binds us together and unites us to Christ. The true ecclesia, or "church", today is not to be seen in the multitudinous organizations of Christendom with their many heads, but in the one spiritual, invisible unity, composed of all who have God's spirit, by which they are vitally joined to the living organism of which Christ Himself is Head.

All the members of this spiritual body are mutually dependent on one another. Some perform one function, some another, but none can be dispensed with. No one can choose his own place in the body, for God reserves this entirely within His own power. It is futile to usurp some function for which we are not divinely endowed. It is failure when we do not exercise the function for which the spirit of God has fitted us. Each one should be deeply exercised to discover his own place in the body, whether high or low, respectable or mean, and seek, by God's grace, to fill it. None can be apostles or prophets now, for their work has been accomplished. Few can be teachers, but the work of a pastor, who shepherds the saints, or an evangelist, who proclaims the evangel, is, in measure, open to all in a private, if not in a public way.

<sup>25</sup> It is the privilege of all who love God to co-operate with Him in avoiding schism in the body of Christ, by cultivating a due sense of their dependence on all other members, and a godly solicitude and sympathetic regard for their welfare; and this, too, even when fellow members despise and oppose them and persecute them. The body is one. We need only act accordingly. Christ is its Head. We need only accord Him His place.

baptized into one body, whether Jews or Greeks, whether slaves or free, and all are made to imbibe one spirit.

<sup>15</sup> but many. If a foot should be saying, "Seeing that I am not a hand, I am not of the body," not for this
<sup>16</sup> is it not of the body. And if an ear should be saying, "Seeing that I am not an eye, I am not of the body," not for this is it not of the <sup>17</sup> body. If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where <sup>18</sup> were the scent? Yet now God placed the members, each one of them, in the body according as He wills. Now if it were all one member, where were the body?

<sup>21</sup> members, yet one body. Yet the eye cannot say to the hand, "I have no need of you", or, again, the head to the feet, "I have no need of you". Nay, much rather, the members belonging to the body supposed to be weaker are necessary,
<sup>23</sup> and which we suppose to be more to the dishonor of the body, these we are investing with more exceeding honor, and our indecent members have more exceeding respectability. Now our respectable
<sup>24</sup> members have no need, but God blends the body together, giving that which is deficient more exceeding honor, that there may be
<sup>25</sup> no schism in the body, but the members may be mutually solicitous over one another. And whether the lesser graces, such as powers, healing, and languages are omitted. That this would be the case is predicted in the next chapter (13<sup>a</sup>), where we are told of a time when the gift of languages would cease. The revised list given in Ephesians, however, looks backward as well as forward. Apostles and prophets are no longer necessary to the edifying of the body of Christ. We are distinctly told that prophecies will be abrogated (13<sup>a</sup>) when maturity arrives. They were needed only so long as God's written revelation was incomplete. So that, today, the special gifts have narrowed down to three: evangelists, pastors and teachers.
<sup>26</sup> one member suffers, all the members are sympathizing, or one member is being esteemed, all the members are rejoicing together.

<sup>31</sup> Most of the graces were transient, suited to immaturity, hence the apostle seeks to lead them up to those which will remain in the impending transcendent economy, in which we find ourselves today.

Even those high endowments, such as prophecy and knowledge, amount to nothing unless love regulates their exercise. Yes, and every personal sacrifice, even martyrdom itself is without value apart from the spirit of love.

first, apostles, second, prophets, third, teachers, thereupon powers, thereupon graces of healing, supports, pilotage, species of languages. Not all are apostles. Not all are prophets. Not all are teachers. Not all have powers. Not all have the graces of healing. Not all are talking languages. Not all are interpreting. Yet be zealous for the greater graces. And still I am showing you a path suited to transcendence.

13 If I should be talking the languages of men and of messengers, yet have no love, I have become resounding copper or a clanging cymbal. And if I should have prophecy and should be perceiving all secrets and all knowledge, and if I should have all faith, so as to transport mountains, yet have no love, I am nothing. And if I should be parceling out all my possessions, and if I should be giving up my body, that I should be boasting, yet have no love, I am nothing benefited. Love is patient, is kind. Love is not jealous. Love is not bragging, is not puffed up, is not indecent, is not self-seeking, is not incensed, is not taking account of evil, is not rejoicing in injustice, yet is rejoicing together with the truth, is foregoing all, is believing all, is expecting all, is enduring all.

<sup>8</sup> Love is never lapsing: yet, whether prophecies, they will be abrogated; whether languages, they will cease; whether knowledge, it will be abrogated. For we know out of an instalment, and we are prophesying out of an instalment. Now whenever maturity may be coming, that which is out of an instalment shall be abrogated. When

 S.O. BE-COMING THE mature THE OUT OF-PART

<sup>11</sup> The time came when the apostle admonished and taught in order that he should present every man mature in Christ (Col.1<sup>28</sup>). Epaphras struggled in prayers that they should stand mature and complete in all the will of God (Col.4<sup>12</sup>). It is evident that maturity came with the last ministry of Paul, when he was a prisoner at Rome. Till then the saints, as a whole, were in a state corresponding to a man who has not yet attained his majority. But then, as was the case when a boy assumed the duties of manhood, there was a vast revolution. As a man discards the toys of his childhood, so they discarded the marks of minority. Chief among these were the gifts, especially prophecy and languages. Those who claim these now cannot avoid marking themselves as immature.

<sup>12</sup> At this time the present secret administration (Eph.3<sup>9</sup>) had not been publicly revealed. The destiny of the saints who had received Paul's evangel was clouded in mystery. Only a little was known. Their celestial allotment was still concealed. Israel's fate was still in the balance. It was not till their final rejection at the close of the book of Acts, that the secret was revealed that the ecclesia which is His body, to which Paul ministered, was not to have a place on earth subordinate to Israel, but was to be blessed with transcendent spiritual blessings among the celestials. Now that maturity has come, we no longer are in an enigma, but realize something of the unutterable grace which is ours in Christ Jesus.

<sup>13</sup> Faith, expectation, and love are the abiding trinity in this administration of God's grace. Neither faith nor expectation will remain in the glory. Love alone will abide His coming. Let us believe God. Let us glory in expectation. But, above all, let us charge our hearts to love Him and His with a fervency which His love alone can inspire. These graces will not abide in heaven, to which they are usually relegated. Hope will then be past, faith unnecessary. This is the time of "perfection" or maturity.

I was a minor, I talked as a minor, I had a minor's disposition, I took account of things as a minor. Yet when I have become a man, I have discarded that which is a minor's.

<sup>12</sup> For at present we are observing by means of a mirror, in an enigma, yet then, face to face. At present I know out of an instalment, yet then I shall recognize according as I am recognized also.

Now be zealous for spiritual [endowments], yet rather that you may be prophesying. For he who is talking a language is not talking to men, but to God. For no one is hearing, but in spirit he is speaking secrets. Yet he who is prophesying is speaking to men to edification and consolation and comfort.

<sup>4</sup> He who is talking a language is edifying himself, yet he who is prophesying is edifying the ecclesia. Now I want you all to be talking languages, yet rather that you may be prophesying, for greater is he who is prophesying than he who is talking languages, outside and except he may be interpreting, that the ecclesia may be getting edification.

<sup>6</sup> Yet now, brethren, if I should be coming to you talking languages, what shall I be benefiting you if I should not be speaking either in revelation, or in knowledge, or in prophecy, or in teaching? Likewise, the sounds given by soulless things, whether flute or lyre, if it should not be giving a distinction to the utterances, how will the fluting or lyre playing be known?

<sup>8</sup> For even if a trumpet should give a dubious sound, who will be preparing for battle? Thus, you also, if

<sup>10</sup> Though without any manuscript evidence, it may be that the original reading of "nothing is soundless" was "none of them is senseless". This seems to be demanded by the context, which insists on sense as well as sound. A single letter P (which is the equivalent of our R) would change aphoonon, soundless, to aphroonon, senseless. As this version is founded on facts, rather than the judgment of its editor, he could not make this alteration, however much it may appeal to him.

<sup>12</sup> The gifts were given for mutual edification, not for entertainment or vain display. The misuse of the gift of languages was a clear indication of the childish immaturity of the Corinthians, for they were eager to display the possession of the gift without any regard for the edification of others. A foreign language is a mere babel of sounds to those who do not understand it. And even if it should be interpreted, of what real gain is it to use such a circuitous method when the same things could be told just as well without the need of interpretation? Such was not the divine intention in giving this gift. On the day of Pentecost this gift was used in a useful and rational way, for it was a sign that Jehovah was speaking to His people. Moreover, this sign is not for believers, or even to reach unbelievers, for it is written "neither thus will they be hearkening to Me". (Isa. 28<sup>12</sup>). Surely it is far better to speak five instructive words in the vernacular than any number in an unknown language, even if it be the exhibition of a spiritual endowment. The same argument applies with even more force to the use of a foreign language, which no one understands, in a church ritual. It may be imposing and spectacular but it fails utterly in edifying the saints.

<sup>22</sup> Paul's high regard for the gift of prophecy is founded on the fact that it was the chief means used to bring the saints to that maturity which he earnestly desired they should attain. The gift of teaching, the exposition of the scriptures, now takes the place of prophecy, for God has fully revealed His will in His word.

you should not be giving an intelligible expression through the languages, how will it be known what is being spoken? For you will be talking into the air. There are, perchance, so many species of sounds in the world, and nothing is soundless. If, then, I should not be perceiving the import of the sound, I shall be a barbarian to the one talking and the one talking a barbarian to me. Thus you also, since you are zealots for spiritual [endowments], seek that you may be superabounding to the edification of the ecclesia.

<sup>13</sup> Wherefore let even him who is talking a language be praying that he may be interpreting. For if I should be praying in a language, my spirit is praying, yet my mind is unfruitful. What is it then? Should I be praying in spirit, yet I will be praying with the mind also. In the spirit I will be playing, yet I will be playing with the mind also. Else, if you should be blessing in the spirit, how shall he who is filling the place of a plain man be declaring "Amen!" at your giving of thanks, since, in fact, he is not aware what you are saying? For you, indeed, are giving thanks ideally, but the other is not edified.

<sup>18</sup> I am thanking God I talk in a language more than all of you. But in the ecclesia do I want to speak five words with my mind, that I should be instructing others also, or ten thousand words in a language?

<sup>20</sup> Brethren, do not become little children in disposition. But in evil be minors, yet in disposition become mature. In the law it is written that, "By different languages and by different lips shall I be talking to this people, and neither thus

<sup>24</sup> Predicting, or foretelling, is not necessarily involved in the gift of prophecy. The prophet, in Scripture, is the mouthpiece or spokesman of God. He may speak of the past, the present, or the future. Prediction is incidental, not essential, to prophecy. Before the canon was complete it was needful for the saints to have some means of knowing the mind of God. The Scriptures fully meet that need now. What a decided contrast there would be between a meeting at which all declared God's mind in sober succession, so that all are helped, and one in which each seeks an opportunity to display a gift which is of no benefit to his fellow saints! Even unbelievers have discrimination enough to see how foolish it is to talk into the air, and can appreciate the solemn declaration of God's spokesmen.

<sup>27</sup> To curb their childish desire to talk in unknown languages the apostle lays down rules to govern the exercise of this gift. It was not to be exercised unless there was an interpreter, so that the message would not be lost on the meeting. Not more than two or three were to speak in unknown languages in succession, and their speaking was to be in instalments, that is, they were to pause at frequent intervals to allow for interpretation. If no one could interpret, they were not to speak in the ecclesia.

<sup>29</sup> Prophecy, also, was to be exercised within bounds. It was not to be like the turbulent, unrestrained ranting of the oracles of the false gods to which they were accustomed, whose spirits were beyond their control, but peaceful, discriminating discourse, two or three in succession, yet ready to yield to another who may receive a revelation. The spirits of the prophets of the Greek gods were not subject to them. They worked themselves into a frenzy, foaming at the mouth. They were controlled by demon spirits rather than the spirit of God.

<sup>34</sup> "Now if anyone is ignorant, let him be ignorant!" (14<sup>38</sup>) is the apostle's indignant protest to those who presume to oppose these words. And again "If anyone presumes to be a prophet or spiritual, let him be recognizing that what I am writing to you is a precept of the Lord."

will they be hearkening to Me', the Lord is saying". So that languages are for a sign, not to those who are believing, but to the unbelieving. Yet prophecy is not for the unbelieving but for those who are believing.

<sup>23</sup> If, then, the whole ecclesia should be coming together in the same place, and all should be talking languages, and should plain persons or unbelievers be entering, will they not be declaring that you are mad?

<sup>24</sup> Yet should all be prophesying, and some unbeliever or plain person be entering, he is convinced by all,

<sup>25</sup> he is examined by all. The hidden things of his heart are becoming apparent, and thus, falling on his face, he will be worshiping God, reporting that God really is among you.

<sup>26</sup> What is it, then, brethren? Whenever you may be coming together each of you has a psalm, has a teaching, has a revelation, has a language, has a translation. Let all occur with a view to edification.

<sup>27</sup> Whether anyone is talking a language, by two, or, at most, three, and by instalments, let one also be interpreting. Now if there should be no interpreter, let him hush in the ecclesia, yet let him be speaking to himself and to God.

<sup>29</sup> Now let the prophets be speaking by two or three, and let the

<sup>30</sup> others be discriminating. Yet if it should be revealed to another sitting by, let the first hush, for you can all be prophesying one at a time, that all may be learning

<sup>32</sup> and all be consoled. And the spirits of prophets are subject to the

<sup>33</sup> prophets. For God is not for turbulence, but peace, as in all the ecclesias of the saints.

<sup>1</sup> There is a notable contrast between the methods with which the apostle deals with fundamental doctrinal error and moral evil. The wicked man (<sup>55</sup>) is delivered to Satan, but those who denied the resurrection are not put away. In these days the contrary course is pursued. Doctrinal differences, not nearly so vital as the denial of the resurrection, are made the ground for disfellowshipping godly saints, while moral evil is often condoned and overlooked. Differences in doctrine do not demand a severance of fellowship, or Paul would have so dealt with the Corinthians who denied the one doctrine which, because it involves all others, has the right to be called "fundamental".

<sup>3</sup> The evangel which Paul preached was concerned with Christ. Not, however, with His life, but with His death, burial, and resurrection. These are the fundamental facts of the evangel. Not His death only, for that would be no evangel at all, but His burial and His resurrection.

<sup>5</sup> The evidence for the resurrection of Christ is as conclusive as it is possible for any evidence to be. There were over five hundred witnesses and some of these were especially appointed and given ample opportunity to convince themselves. But the crowning proof was the descent of the glorified Christ to call Saul, upon the Damascus road. Saul was His enemy, and would have done much to prove that He was not roused. His testimony is of special weight. The resurrection is of the utmost consequence to Paul, for he did not know the Lord before His death, like the twelve apostles. Consequently he never would have known Him nor would he have seen Him unless He had been raised. In a very special sense Paul is the apostle of the ascended and glorified Christ. He never bases his teaching on the life of Jesus before His death and resurrection.

<sup>9</sup> Paul's persecution of the ecclesia was the necessary prelude to the transcendent grace which called and sustained him so that he became at once the least and the greatest of the apostles. It was necessary that he should be the most undeserving in order that he might become the pattern for God's present dealings in grace.

<sup>34</sup> Let the women in the ecclesias be hushing, for it is not permitted to them to be talking, but let them be subject, according as the law <sup>35</sup> also is saying. Now, if they want to learn anything, let them be inquiring of their own husbands at home, for it is a shame for a woman to be <sup>36</sup> talking in the ecclesia. Or came the word of God out from you? Or <sup>37</sup> attains it to you only? If anyone presumes to be a prophet or spiritual, let him be recognizing that what I am writing to you is a pre- <sup>38</sup> cept of the Lord. Now if anyone is ignorant, let him be ignorant!

<sup>39</sup> So that, my brethren, be zealous to be prophesying, and do not forbid talking languages. Yet let all occur respectably and in order.

<sup>15</sup> Now I am making known to you, brethren, the evangel which I preach to you, which you accepted also, in which you stand also, <sup>2</sup> through which you are saved also, if you are retaining what I said in preaching the evangel to you, outside and except your belief is a sham.

<sup>3</sup> For I give over to you first what I accepted also, that Christ died for our sins according to the scrip- <sup>4</sup> tures, and that He was entombed, and that He has been roused the third day according to the scrip- <sup>5</sup> tures, and that He was seen by Cephas, thereupon by the twelve. <sup>6</sup> Thereupon He was seen by above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the majority are remaining hitherto, yet some were put to re- <sup>7</sup> pose also. Thereupon He was seen by James, thereafter by all the apostles.

<sup>8</sup> Yet last of all He was seen by me also, even as if by an abortion.

<sup>9</sup> For I am the least of the apostles, who am not competent to be called an apostle, because I persecute

NOT I YET BUT THE grace

<sup>12</sup> The resurrection is the very fundamental of fundamentals. The death of Christ is essential to the evangel, yet it is not enough. A dead Christ cannot save. The resurrection is not only essential, but it involves His death, for only one who is dead can be roused from the dead. Without His resurrection we are still in our sins.

<sup>20</sup> Christ was not the first one to be roused from the dead. The prophets, and the Lord Himself, recalled some to life before He Himself suffered death. But He is the first One to be made alive beyond the power of death. All the others were roused to die again. He is the Firstfruit of those who are vivified, and die no more.

<sup>21</sup> Death's entrance and exit are both through a man. Adam and Christ are the channels, respectively, through which death and resurrection reach all mankind.

<sup>22</sup> The words "even as" mark a close parallel. The universality of death, through Adam, is beyond question. "Thus" we are told, "in Christ, shall all be made alive". This will not occur simultaneously but in three distinct classes at widely separated intervals of time. Christ, the Firstfruit, is already alive at God's right hand. We who are Christ's will be made alive at His presence. This includes His coming to the air for the believers of this economy (1Thes.4<sup>16</sup>, 1Cor.15<sup>52</sup>, Phil.3<sup>21</sup>) and His coming to Israel before the thousand years. The rest, who are not included in "those who are Christ's", must wait until the consummation, when death, the last enemy, is abolished. This will not occur until the eons have run their course and Christ hands over the kingdom to the Father. At the great white throne judgment no one is vivified or made alive. Hence it is passed over. Authority and power are still in exercise in the new earth. The throne of the Lamb is there. The consummation must be later, for sovereignty is abolished before death, the last enemy. The consummation is at the close of the eonian times, at the close of the last eon which is presented to our view in the final vision of the Unveiling.

<sup>10</sup> the ecclesia of God. Yet, by the grace of God I am what I am, and His grace, which is for me, did not come to be for naught, but I toil more exceedingly than all of them—yet not I, but the grace of God which is with me. Then, whether I or they, thus we are proclaiming and thus you believe.

<sup>12</sup> Now if Christ is being proclaimed that He has been roused from among the dead, how are some among you saying that there is no resurrection of the dead? Now if there is no resurrection of the dead, neither has Christ been roused. Now if Christ has not been roused, consequently our proclamation is for naught; your faith also is for naught. Now we are being found false witnesses also of God, seeing that we testify in accord with God, that He rouses Christ, Whom, consequently, He rouses not if so be that the dead are not being roused. For, if the dead are not being roused, neither has Christ been roused. Now if Christ has not been roused, vain is your faith—you are still in your sins! Consequently they also, who are put to repose in Christ, were lost. If we have an expectation in Christ in this life only, we are more forlorn than all men.

<sup>20</sup> Yet now Christ has been roused from among the dead, the Firstfruit of those who are reposing. For since, in fact, death is through a man, resurrection of the dead is through a man also. For, even as, in Adam, all are dying, thus also, in Christ, all shall be vivified. Yet each in his own class: the Firstfruit, Christ; thereupon those who are Christ's in His presence; thereafter the consummation, whenever He may be giving up the kingdom to God, even the Father, when-

<sup>25</sup> The reign of Christ is so beneficent, it brings mankind to such a state of perfection, that all further need of the restraints of government vanishes. Rule implies insubordination, and is unnecessary where there is perfect subjection. Rule is a temporary expedient to cope with evil. When evil is banished rule also retires. The effects of evil for mankind are concentrated in death. When the universe has been purged of all other evil, then death itself becomes inoperative and yields up its victims. Not till then is it true that all are made alive in Christ.

<sup>28</sup> God is All in Christ now. He will be All in His saints when we are made alive. He will be All in all when death is abolished, at the consummation. What a marvelous outcome of God's purpose! What a Christ we have, Who can accomplish such a complete reconciliation!

The Corinthians denied the resurrection of any: Paul insists on the vivification of all.

<sup>29</sup> The argument here is founded on the sixth chapter of Romans. Baptism is a symbol of death. Its benefits are confined to those who are united to Christ in His death. But even then it is absolutely valueless except as it also figures the resurrection. Apart from the resurrection of the dead, baptism, instead of introducing to a resurrection experience, will lead to carelessness and indifference.

<sup>35</sup> The human body is not composed of definite, unvarying substance, but is changing its components daily, so that, in a few years, it has completely renewed its elements. Yet it remains the same body. So it is in resurrection. We do not look for the identical elements to be roused in the resurrection, even though we will identify the body as our own.

<sup>37</sup> The miracle of resurrection is wrought each spring in the fields of the farmer. Death sustains our life now and it will be the entrance to eonian life, if we are not caught up to meet Him ere it comes.

ever He should be abrogating all sovereignty and all authority and power. For He must be reigning until He should be placing all His enemies under His feet. The last enemy being abolished is death. For He subjects all under His feet. Now whenever He may be saying that all has been subjected, it is evident that it is outside of Him Who is subjecting the universe to Him. Now, whenever the universe may be subject to Him, then the Son Himself also shall be subject to Him Who subjects the universe to Him, that God may be All in all.

<sup>29</sup> Else what shall they be doing who are being baptized? for the sake of the dead? If the dead actually are not being roused, why are they being baptized also for their sake? <sup>30</sup> Why are we also in danger every <sup>31</sup> hour? By this boast of yours, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I am dying daily. <sup>32</sup> If, as a man, I fight wild beasts in Ephesus, what benefit is it to me? If the dead are not roused, we may be eating and drinking, for to-morrow we are dying. Be not deceived; <sup>33</sup> evil conversations are corrupting <sup>34</sup> kind characters. Sober up justly and do not be sinning, for some are ignorant of God. I am speaking to abash you.

<sup>35</sup> But someone will be protesting, "How are the dead being roused, and with what body are they <sup>36</sup> coming?" Imprudent one! What you are sowing is not being vivified if it should not be dying. <sup>37</sup> And what you are sowing you are not sowing the body which shall come to be, but a naked kernel, perchance of wheat or some of the rest. <sup>38</sup> Yet God is giving it a body according as He wills, and to each of the <sup>39</sup> seeds its own body. Not all flesh is

<sup>40</sup> There is no direct statement here that our bodies will be changed to celestial bodies, in accord with the later revelation of Ephesians, but such an inference would be in point. Even among the celestials there will be degrees of glory. Our Lord Himself has a body which excelled the noonday in its effulgence. Ours will be transfigured to conform to His (Phil.3<sup>21</sup>).

<sup>42</sup> In death the body disintegrates and returns to the soil whence it came. This loathesome process is reversed in resurrection. Disease and weakness accompany its dissolution, but power and glory will be the portion of all who are Christ's when He comes.

<sup>44</sup> Our present bodies respond to the soul, or senses. They seek for physical comfort and satisfaction and pleasure. They do not respond to spiritual things. The soul is not a distinct entity. It is the effect of the combination of body and spirit. Adam was made of the soil. When the breath of life was breathed into him he became a living soul. He could feel, see, hear, smell. He became conscious. Such is the body which we have now. We are dominated by our senses. In the resurrection our bodies will respond to our spirit. Physical sensations will give place to spiritual perception.

<sup>47</sup> The soil is the upper, oxidized crust of the earth from which Adam was formed and from which mankind derives its sustenance. It is the soil which sustains the plants and animals which provide us with food. Below the soil is the sphere of sulfation, which destroys life. As men are constituted now, they cannot exist apart from the soil of the earth. If we should be raised with bodies such as we now possess, we could not partake of a celestial allotment, for we would die from the lack of such food as our bodies can assimilate.

<sup>51</sup> This is a secret. It had not been told before. It lies in the one word change. It leads us one step nearer the celestial destiny revealed in the epistle to the Ephesians. Soilish as our bodies are, they need to be radically changed before they can endure the same flesh, but there is one, indeed, of men, yet another flesh of beasts, yet another flesh of fliers, yet another of fishes. And there are bodies celestial and bodies terrestrial, but there is a different glory, indeed, of the celestial, and a different of the terrestrial, another glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, for star excels star in glory.

<sup>42</sup> Thus also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; <sup>43</sup> it is roused in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is roused in glory. It is sown in infirmity; it <sup>44</sup> is roused in power. It is sown a soulish body; it is roused a spiritual body.

If there is a soulish body, there <sup>45</sup> is a spiritual also. Thus also it is written, "The first man, Adam, became a living soul; the last Adam <sup>46</sup> a vivifying Spirit". But the spiritual is not first, but the soulish, thereupon the spiritual.

<sup>50</sup> Now this I am averring, brethren, that flesh and blood is not able to enjoy an allotment in the kingdom of God, neither is corruption enjoying the allotment of incorruption. Lo! I am telling you a secret!

<sup>51</sup> We all, indeed, shall not be put to <sup>52</sup> repose, yet we all shall be changed, in an instant, in the twinkle of an eye, at the last trump. For He will be trumpeting, and the dead will be a life celestial. This change will come in an instant when the Lord descends from heaven with the trumpet of God (1Thes.4<sup>16</sup>). As the last note sounds we who are alive, who are mortal, as well as those who repose, who have gone to corruption, shall be changed. What a glorious prospect! Our bodies shall be like His—not as it was in His weakness before He was roused, not even as it was before His ascension, marvelous as that was, but as it was when Saul met Him and was blinded by the brightness of His presence. He will transfigure the body of our humiliation, to conform it to His body glorious (Phil.3<sup>21</sup>).

<sup>55</sup> What a victory that will be! Now death is operating in our bodies at all times, and eventually succeeds in dragging us down to the grave. Then we shall not only be restored to life, but enjoy incorruption and deathlessness, and a body so changed and glorified that it corresponds to the one which befits the Head of the universe. Yet the enjoyment and appreciation of the glory will depend on our previous humiliation.

<sup>55</sup> The Septuagint reads "O Unseen, where is your sting?" (Hos.13<sup>14</sup>), and some manuscripts follow this reading. As the tendency is to conform a quotation to its original, it is probable that Death was changed to Unseen by a copyist who knew the Septuagint reading but did not see that the apostle had enlarged the scope of the quotation to include the consummation, when there is no unseen (Un.20<sup>14</sup>) and only the second death remains. A quotation is often varied from its original reading to fit it for its new context.

<sup>1</sup> When Paul received the recognition of James, Cephas, and John, they asked him to remember the poor among the Circumcision (Gal.2<sup>10</sup>). At this time the nations were partaking of Israel's spiritual things (Rom.15<sup>27</sup>). It was not till later that they became joint partakers (Eph.3<sup>6</sup>). So they made such return as they could by collecting a contribution. Paul was delivering this money to the saints in Jerusalem when he was imprisoned (Ac.21<sup>18-22</sup><sup>21</sup>). Now we partake of our own spiritual things, for we have all spiritual blessings among the celestials, where Israel has none.

roused incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal put on immortality. Now, whenever this corruptible should be putting on incorruption and this mortal be putting on immortality, then shall come to pass the word which has been written,

"Death was swallowed up by Victory!
<sup>55</sup> Where, O Death, is your victory?
Where, O Death, is your sting?"

<sup>56</sup> Now the sting of Death is sin, yet <sup>57</sup> the power of sin is the law. Yet thanks be to God, Who is giving us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>58</sup> So that, my beloved brethren, become settled, unmovable, superabounding in the work of the Lord always, being aware that your toil is not for naught in the Lord.

16 Now concerning the collection for the saints, even as I prescribe to the ecclesias of Galatia, thus also <sup>2</sup> do you. On one of the sabbaths let each one of you lay aside in store whatever anyone may be prospered, lest collections should occur <sup>3</sup> when I may come. Now whenever I should be coming along, whoever you should be attesting through letters, these shall I be sending to carry away your grace to Jerusalem. Now if it should be worth <sup>4</sup> while, and I go, they shall be going together with me.

<sup>5</sup> Now I shall be coming to you whenever I may come through Macedonia, for I am coming <sup>6</sup> through Macedonia. Now, perchance, I shall be abiding with you, or even wintering, that you may be sending me forward where I may <sup>7</sup> be going. For I do not want to see you at present on the way, for I am expecting to stay some time

<sup>8</sup> Paul's delay in going to Corinth is fully explained in the second epistle. He wished to give them time for repentance. Besides, he was meeting with much success, for even his enemies acknowledged that "not only in Ephesus, but in almost the entire [province of] Asia this Paul influences a considerable throng . . .".

<sup>12</sup> It is evident that Paul was not jealous of Apollos, though some in Corinth had made him the head of their faction. Neither was Apollos inclined to take advantage of their schism. He was a scholarly man (rather than eloquent) who had been taught by Paul's friends, Priscilla and Aquila, and had gone to Corinth after Paul had left, being especially successful in confuting the Jews, publicly exhibiting, through the Scriptures, that Jesus is the Christ (Ac.18<sup>24</sup>).

<sup>23</sup> Maran atha is usually interpreted as "the (or our) Lord cometh" in accord with the Syriac version. But it seems far fetched to find a foreign expression here, whether it be Chaldee or Syriac, when the Hebrew furnishes a simpler and more agreeable solution. The Hebrew mghahram atah, "Cursed are you!" was probably the common phrase in which the anathema or doom was pronounced. The change of m into n is of frequent occurrence when Hebrew is turned into Greek. The Syriac version may simply insert the Hebrew without translating, in which case it should not receive a Syriac signification. The Hebrew ghahram and the Greek anathema are used for one another in the Septuagint and Hebrew Scriptures. Both mean to devote to destruction, to doom (Lev.27<sup>21-29</sup>, Josh.7<sup>1-15</sup>, 1Sam.15<sup>1-20</sup>). In these passages it is rendered destroy, devote, accursed, etc. The same form of expression, a repetition in a familiar tongue, is found in the phrase "Abba, Father". (Mk.14<sup>36</sup> Ro.8<sup>15</sup> Ga.4<sup>6</sup>). Moreover, the coming of the Lord is never set before us as an act of judgment, but as the culmination of grace. That blessed expectation could never be used as an imprecation. It brings grace, not judgment.

with you, if the Lord should permit. Yet I shall stay in Ephesus till Pentecost, for a door has opened for me, great and operative, and many are opposing.

<sup>10</sup> Now if Timothy should be coming, look to it that he should be with you without fear, for he is working at the work of the Lord, as I also. No one, then, should be scorning him. Now send him forward in peace, that he may be coming to me, for I am awaiting him with the brethren.

<sup>12</sup> Now concerning brother Apollos, I entreat him much that he may be coming to you with the brethren, and it was undoubtedly not his will that he should come now, yet he will come whenever he should have an opportunity.

<sup>15</sup> Now I am entreating you, brethren—you are acquainted with the house of Stephanas and Fortunatus: it is the firstfruit of Achaia, and they set themselves to the service of the saints—that you also may be subject to such, and to every fellow worker and toiler.

<sup>17</sup> Now I am rejoicing at the presence of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus, seeing that they fill up these deficiencies of yours, for they soothe my spirit and yours. Then be recognizing such.

II. CORINTHIANS

SECOND Corinthians is an epistle for the heart. It engages us with the fond solicitude which stirs the affections of the apostle for his much loved Corinth. It was written because he wished to spare them and dreaded the severity which his presence might demand.

This loving epistle reveals an aspect of the evangel which is well-nigh lost. This is the conciliation. God is love. He will not rest satisfied in merely justifying us. He wishes to clasp us to His heart. To restore His creatures to righteousness may indeed erase the stain of sin, but offers no valid reason or excuse for sin's intrusion into the universe. But if the entrance of sin is to bear the precious fruit of reconciliation, if it is to bring us infinitely nearer to God than is possible without it, if it is the means of revealing God's love to us, then may we give thanks even for the sin which is the source of our sorrows. Sin made man not only a sinner, but an enemy of God. It brought in estrangement. The mediation of Christ not only saves and justifies, but removes every barrier for the free outflow of God's love. God now condescends to beseech the sinner to be reconciled to Him. What can be more gracious than this?

Such is the aspect of the truth in this epistle. More than anything else he has written, this reveals the personal experiences and inward emotions of Paul during one of the most fruitful periods of his ministry. Instead of the smiling, complacent, comfortable existence which is usually supposed to be the ideal of Christianity, we find him full of fears within, distracted with fightings without, restless, sick, and despondent. Yet all of this was in perfect accord with his fervent love for the saints and his vehement desire to lead them on into an appreciation of God's love. The consolation and comfort he received in his afflictions fitted him to console and comfort others. It reveals God in the light of His affections.

One short verse in the book of Acts (Ac.20<sup>2</sup>) hurries us over the whole period referred to in this epistle. This alone should suggest the total divergence of their respective themes. Acts deals with Christ after the flesh, as the Messiah of Israel, and always gives the other nations a place subordinate. At the juncture when this epistle was written Paul first made known the truth of the conciliation, that God, in Christ, is beseeching all men to be reconciled to Him. Physical relationship to Christ no longer counted with Paul after this.

<sup>1</sup> Timothy is associated with Paul in this introduction, as Sosthenes is in the former epistle, yet it is evident that Paul himself wrote both epistles, for he continually refers to himself in them, and usually specifies who is meant when he changes the usual "I" to "we".

Corinth was the chief city of Achaia, hence the whole province was interested in and influenced by its internal spiritual condition. The many specific references to the ecclesia in the city make it plain that it was for the saints in the province only in a secondary sense, much as we profit by it today.

<sup>3</sup> The opening words strike the key note of the epistle. God is introduced as the Father of pity and consolation. It engages us with that strong undercurrent of feeling which stirred the heart of the apostle to its very depths. Here we see the precious fruit of the gospel abounding in the apostle's dealing with his erring children. Paul's previous epistle evidently had its desired effect, for he would not think of consoling them in their sins and schisms and departures from the truth.

<sup>5</sup> Paul's afflictions were, in a very real sense, "the sufferings of Christ", for they came, not as the result of his misdeeds, but because he proclaimed Christ's evangel. Not long before he had been in danger of death at the hands of a mob in Ephesus. He was suffering from some physical ailment. He was in much suspense about the Corinthians and their reception of his previous epistle. When he finds that they, too, have suffered, though it be for their own wrong doing, he is swift to console them, and sees in his own afflictions the means used by God to prepare him for this ministry. All this should be an object lesson to us to show how sin and suffering is being used by God to bring our hearts into closer union with Himself and with one another. And affliction is the surest means of ridding us of confidence in ourselves and of placing our reliance in God. Suffering for Christ's sake is the highest honor which can be accorded to mortal man. Just as His sufferings are the basis of the glories that shall follow, so our sufferings for His sake are sure to yield an untold harvest of happiness and exultation when He appears.

PAUL, an apostle of Christ Jesus, through the will of God, and brother Timothy, to the ecclesia of God which is in Corinth, together with all the saints who are in the whole of Achaia:

<sup>2</sup> Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

<sup>3</sup> BLESSED be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of pities and God of all consolation,
<sup>4</sup> Who is consoling us in our every affliction, to enable us to be consoling those in every affliction, through the consolation with which we ourselves are consoled by God, seeing that, according as the sufferings of Christ are superabounding in us, thus, through Christ, our consolation also is superabounding.

<sup>6</sup> Now, whether we are being afflicted for the sake of your consolation and salvation, or whether we are being consoled for the sake of your consolation, it is operating in the endurance of the same sufferings
<sup>7</sup> which we also are suffering. And our expectation is confirmed over you, being aware that as you are participants of the sufferings, thus also of the consolation.

<sup>8</sup> For we do not want you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning our affliction which came to us in the [province of] Asia, that we were inordinately burdened, above our ability, so that we were despairing of life also. But we have had the rescript of death in ourselves in order that we may be having no confidence in ourselves, but in God,

 n1 o. DEATH rescues US

<sup>9</sup> It seems probable that Paul was doubly in danger of death in Ephesus. The "rescript" of death may refer to a dangerous illness, while the "prodigious" death seems best suited to the violence of the Ephesian mob. It is most likely that, had he attempted to speak to them during the excitement, nothing would have prevented the unruly multitude from tearing him to pieces in their frenzy. Now that he had come through these dangers he desired the Corinthians to join him in thanksgiving.

<sup>12</sup> The apostle seems to be meeting the opposition of his enemies here, who accused him of insincerity and dishonesty in dealing with the Corinthians. His reply is that his course may not appeal to fleshly wisdom, but it is in accord with grace—a quality of which they knew little.

<sup>13</sup> Perhaps some suspected him of writing privately, to individuals, what he did not dare to put in his public epistles. This he denies, and registers his assurance that ultimately they would recognize him as one in whom they might well boast in that day when the hidden motives of the heart will be made manifest.

<sup>15</sup> Paul acknowledges that he formerly intended to come to them first, on his way to Macedonia, as well as to return to them on his way to Judea. His enemies probably accused him of being vacillating, and of changing his plans for fear he would not be well received in Corinth. But Paul insists that his plans are always made subject to God's further leading. Men in the flesh may make their plans and strive to carry them through from headstrong pride, but not so the plans of God's servant. Later on he gives the true reason why he did not go direct to Corinth. Not fear for himself, but for them, postponed his visit to a later date.

<sup>20</sup> God's promises are not like those of His servants, but are always confirmed in Christ. He is not only able to carry out His will, but His promises are made with a full knowledge of all conditions such as might arise to change the course of one of His servants. They are fallible, He is infallible.

will be rescuing, on Whom we rely, that He will still be rescuing also; you also assisting together by a petition for us, that from many faces He may be thanked for us by many, for our gracious gift.

<sup>12</sup> For our boasting is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in holiness and sincerity of God, not in fleshly wisdom, but in the grace of God, we conducted ourselves in the world, yet more superabundantly toward you. For we are writing no other things to you than what you are reading or recognizing also. Now I am expecting that you will recognize ultimately, according as you also recognized us in part, that we are your glory (even as you also are ours) in the day of our Lord Jesus.

<sup>15</sup> And in this confidence I intended formerly to come to you, that you should be having a second grace, and through you to come through into Macedonia, and to come again from Macedonia to you, and to be sent forward by you into Judea. Intending this, then, consequently do I use lightness? Or what I am planning am I planning according to the flesh, that it may be with me "Yes, yes," and "No, no"?

<sup>18</sup> Now God is faithful, seeing that our word toward you is not "Yes" and "No", for the Son of God, Jesus Christ, Who is being proclaimed among you through us—through me and Silvanus and Timothy—became not "Yes" and "No", but in Him has become "Yes". For whatever promises are of God, are in Him "Yes". Wherefore through Him also is the "Amen" to God, for glory,

 21 THE God TOWARD esteem THRU US THE

<sup>21</sup> The operation of God's spirit is here seen under three distinct figures: the anointing, the seal, and the earnest. Prophets and priests and kings were anointed for their office. They were anointed with oil. We are anointed with the spirit, as Christ, the Anointed, was at His baptism. This qualifies us for service. The seal is the sign of possession. We belong to God. The earnest is that small instalment of the spirit which we have received, which is the pledge of its fullness in the day of deliverance.

<sup>23</sup> In view of the devious motives which have been suggested as the reason why he had avoided Corinth, Paul solemnly calls God to witness, when he discloses the real reason. He wished to give them time to repent. He did not wish to be under the necessity of dealing harshly with them again. He looked forward to the day when those whom he had made sorry would rejoice. He did not wish to force their faith, as might be necessary if he did not wait patiently until his former epistle had borne its full fruition. That time now seems to have come. The present epistle is the fruit of much forbearance.

<sup>5</sup> Paul's sorrow over the incestuous person, concerning which he wrote to them in his former epistle (1Co.5<sup>1</sup>), was much modified because it was not countenanced by the majority. He did not wish to burden them all with this serious sin. Now, indeed, that the majority have administered the needed rebuke, and it has had a salutary effect, he would have them restore him to their fellowship again. He had doubtless been "delivered unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh", yet this was "that the spirit may be saved" (1Co.5<sup>5</sup>). Such is the invariable object of God's judgments. They may seem harsh and vindictive, but they eventuate in salvation. They may seem baneful at first but they are all dictated by the love that uses them to reveal itself. Like the returned prodigal, the Corinthian sinner became the special object of their love. From this it is evident that God is able to use Satan himself, as a destroyer, for the ultimate welfare and blessing of the saints. It proved so in Job's case. May He not be able to undo all his deeds in this manner?

<sup>21</sup> through us. Now He Who is confirming us together with you in Christ, and Who anoints us, is God, <sup>22</sup> Who also seals us and is giving the earnest of the spirit in our hearts.

<sup>23</sup> Now I am invoking God as a witness on my soul, that to spare you I came no longer to Corinth. <sup>24</sup> Not that we are lording over your faith, but are fellow workers of your joy, for you have stood 2 fast in the faith. Now I decide this with myself, not to be coming <sup>2</sup> to you again in sorrow. For if I am making you sorry, who, also, is gladdening me, except he who <sup>3</sup> is made sorry by me? And I write this very thing to you lest, coming, I may have sorrow from those who were obligated to be causing me to rejoice; having confidence in you <sup>4</sup> all, that my joy is all yours. For out of much affliction and pressure of heart I write to you, through many tears, not that you may be made sorrowful, but that you may know the love which I have more exceedingly for you.

<sup>5</sup> Now if anyone has caused sorrow he has not made me sorry but in part, lest I should burden you all. <sup>6</sup> Enough to such is this rebuke, <sup>7</sup> which is by the majority. So that, on the contrary, you are rather to deal graciously and console, lest somehow such may be swallowed up by the more excessive sorrow. <sup>8</sup> Wherefore I am entreating you to ratify your love to him.

<sup>9</sup> For I write also for this, that I may know your testedness, if you <sup>10</sup> are obedient in all things. Now with whom you are dealing graciously in anything, I, also. For in what I have dealt graciously (if I have dealt graciously in anything), it is because of you in the face of

<sup>12</sup> The grave and disquieting concern of the apostle for the Corinthians is most signally evident from his conduct at Troas. Once before he had been there, intending to preach the evangel, but the vision of the man of Macedonia drew him away. Now he finds himself not only in Troas but with a special opportunity for service. While he probably remained a considerable time and saw much to encourage further effort, his love and solicitude for the Corinthians draws him away again. He expected to meet Titus at Troas with news from Corinth. He was so concerned to know how they had received his epistle that he leaves the promising work in Troas and goes to Macedonia, probably meeting Titus at Philippi.

<sup>14</sup> The true servant of Christ is always triumphant. He need not be concerned whether his message be received or rejected, but rather let him be sure that he is preaching Christ and Him alone. His course then, as the apostle's, will be like the triumph of a Roman conqueror. Accompanied by his friends, and followed by captives laden with chains, while the whole procession is perfumed with the incense of many censers, the Roman triumph was but a rare occasion in the life of a general. It should be the continual course of the servant of Christ who so preaches His grace that its fragrance is found even on those who reject the message of life.

<sup>17</sup> Too many in these days are like those the apostle condemns. They make the word of God a matter of commerce and a means of gain. May He forgive them for such an infamous offense! Such grace as we have to dispense loses its flavor when coupled with avarice or cupidity.

<sup>1</sup> How the apostle's heart must have ached to think that his beloved Corinthians, who had been called into the grace of Christ through his ministry, should be so unmindful of his claims on their affections! How pathetic his appeal! "You are our letter, engraved in our hearts." They certainly should not ask for his credentials, for they themselves were the very best that could be found. No doubt those who opposed him were of the Circumcision, for he brings in the contrast of the Mosaic law.

<sup>11</sup> Christ, lest we should be overreached by Satan, for we are not ignorant of his mind.

<sup>12</sup> Now, on coming to Troas for the evangel of Christ, and a door having been opened for me in the Lord, <sup>13</sup> I have had no ease in my spirit at not finding Titus, my brother, but, taking leave of them, I came away into Macedonia.

<sup>14</sup> Now thanks be to God, Who always gives us a triumph in Christ, and is manifesting the odor of His knowledge through us in every <sup>15</sup> place, seeing that we are a fragrance of Christ to God, in those who are being saved and in those <sup>16</sup> who are being lost. To these, indeed, an odor of death for death, yet to those an odor of life for life. And who is competent for <sup>17</sup> this? For we are not as the majority, who are peddling the word of God, but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God in Christ, are we speaking.

3 Are we beginning again to commend ourselves? Or do we need, even as some, commendatory letters
<sup>2</sup> to you or from you? You are our letter, engraved in our hearts,
<sup>3</sup> known and read by all men, seeing that you are manifestly a letter of Christ dispensed by us, and engraved, not with ink, but with the spirit of the living God, not on tablets of stone, but in the fleshy
<sup>4</sup> tablets of the heart. Now such is the confidence we have through <sup>5</sup> Christ toward God (not that we are competent of ourselves, to count anything as of ourselves, but our <sup>6</sup> competency is of God), Who also makes us competent dispensers of a

<sup>6</sup> The covenant of the letter is the law of Moses which was engraven in stone, to symbolize its unyielding sternness. There is no reference to the letter of Scripture. It is the law that kills, just as it is the spirit (through the letter of Scripture) that gives life. The sayings that Christ spoke are both spirit and life to all who believe them.

<sup>7</sup> The account of Moses' reception, after his forty-day session on Sinai, is found in Ex. 34<sup>28-35</sup>. It is evident that they saw Moses' face even though they could not look intently at it. Moses did not hide the glory from them. He did not put the covering on his face till he had done speaking with them, but when he had finished (Ex. 34<sup>33</sup>). Later he put it on again "until he went in to speak with Him". He hid the fading of the glory, which indicated the transient, fading character of the law. As Paul says (verse 13), it was done so that the sons of Israel should not observe the consummation of that which is vanishing. Now, instead of a covering on Moses' face, there is one on Jewish hearts, which hides from them the true character of the covenant of Sinai. It had a glory once, but it has long since been eclipsed in Christ. This they will not discover until they turn back to the Lord.

<sup>9</sup> A bright torch, which will illuminate the night, becomes black when held up to the noonday sun. So the law, a bright exhibition of the righteous character of God, turns to blackness before the transcendent effulgence of grace which is now revealed. It had a glory but lost it all by contrast to the glory excellency. Since, then, the law's glory is darkened by a greater glory, how much greater must be the glory of this dispensation of grace!

<sup>12</sup> Moses, finding that the glory of his face was not permanent, hid the fact by covering his face until he went into the Lord's presence again. Not so Paul. He had no need of any covering, for the dispensation of the spirit is not like the law. The law led from glory to gloom. Grace leads from glory to glory. One deals out condemnation and death. The other dispenses righteousness and life.

new covenant, not of the letter, but of the spirit, for the letter is killing, yet the spirit is vivifying.

<sup>7</sup> Now if the dispensation of death by letters chiseled in stone came in glory, so that the sons of Israel were not able to look intently into the face of Moses, because of the glory of his face, which was vanishing, how shall not rather the dispensation of the spirit be in glory? For if the dispensation of condemnation is glory, much rather the dispensation of righteousness is exceeding in glory. For that also which has been glorious has no glory in this particular, on account of the glory transcending. For if that which is vanishing is through glory, much rather that which remains is in glory.

<sup>12</sup> Having, then, such an expectation, we are using much boldness, and are not even as Moses, who placed a covering over his face, so that the sons of Israel were not to look intently to the consummation of that which is vanishing. But their minds were calloused, for until this very day the same covering is remaining at the reading of the old covenant, it not being discovered that, in Christ, it is vanishing. But till today, if ever the reading of Moses should be reached, a covering is lying on their heart. Yet if ever it should reach a turning back to the Lord, the covering is taken from about it.

<sup>17</sup> Now the Lord is the spirit; yet where the spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom. Now we all,

<sup>18</sup> The ancient mirror was a burnished metal surface which reflected the light as well as the image of the one who used it. Paul did not climb the steep slopes of Sinai and bring back a transient reflection of the Lord's glory, as Moses did. He beheld Him continually, as we behold our faces in a mirror. The glory of the Lord irradiated him. It did not fade, but became brighter and brighter. Contemplation of the Lord led to likeness to Him. This is a beautiful epitome of Paul's ministries. He began with grace on the road to Damascus. He dispenses justification at Pisidian Antioch. He reveals the conciliation to the Corinthians. He teaches the truth transcendent from his Roman prison. Grace upon grace and glory upon glory! His successive ministries led onward to the transcendent glories contained in his Perfection Epistles.

<sup>4</sup> "The evangel of the glory of Christ!" Would that our evangelism reached to this altitude! And why are Christ's glories so lacking in the gospel efforts of today? Because the god of this eon not only blinds the minds of the unbelievers, but he centers the gospel on sin and self and sanitation—anything except Christ and His glories.

<sup>4</sup> Few subjects for meditation will be found so full of blessing as that of the Image of God. John presents Him to us as the Word of God, through Whom we hear Him; Paul shows us the One in Whom we can see God. God Himself cannot be seen, for He is invisible. Hence it is that He has given us an Image of Himself which we can discern. And just as we give the picture or statue of a person the same place in our minds and in our speech as the person himself, so Christ is seen in the Scriptures, addressed as God as if equal to God. Unlike the inflexible image of a lifeless photograph, He is instinct with the life of God, and changes to accord with the divine assumptions (Heb. 1st).

<sup>7</sup> The present pathway of God's saints and slaves is not calculated to glorify us, but God. And this is often best accomplished by contrast, for God will not give His glory to any of His creatures. We must be broken if we would be bearers of His blessing.

with uncovered face, viewing the Lord's glory as in a mirror, are transformed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the spirit.

<sup>4</sup> Therefore, having this dispensation, according as we were shown <sup>2</sup> mercy, we are not despondent. But we spurn the hidden things of shame, not walking in craftiness, nor adulterating the word of God, but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience before God.

<sup>3</sup> Now if our evangel is covered also, it is covered in those who are <sup>4</sup> lost, in whom the god of this eon blinds the minds of unbelievers, so that the illumination of the evangel of the glory of Christ, Who is the Image of the invisible God, does <sup>5</sup> not irradiate them. For we are not proclaiming ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, yet ourselves <sup>6</sup> your slaves because of Jesus, seeing that God Who is saying "Out of darkness light shall be shining" is He Who shines in our hearts, with a view to the illumination of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

<sup>7</sup> Now we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the transcendence of the power may be of God <sup>8</sup> and not of us. In everything—being afflicted but not distressed, perplexed but not despairing, persecuted but not abandoned, cast down <sup>10</sup> but not destroyed—always carrying about in the body the deaden-

<sup>10</sup> The widespread fiction that the life of a Christian must be one of settled calm and contentment, prosperous and in every way advantageous in this life, is proven utterly fallacious by the experience of the apostle Paul. The carnal Corinthians may live and reign, but he is afflicted, perplexed, persecuted and cast down. As in Job's case, little was left him but his life. If we are faithful to God we will find but little in this life, and will look forward to resurrection life in Christ. Apart from resurrection we should be the most pitiable of all mankind. The reason that this conception of the believer's experience has been lost is the widespread apostasy and conformity to the world. Do you see a servant of Christ persecuted and despised? Do not judge him hastily. He may be manifesting the life of Jesus, Who was despised and rejected because the world did not know him.

<sup>17</sup> How shall we characterize our trials if Paul's were only momentary and light? At times he even despaired of life. Just before this he had been crying to God to remove the thorn in the flesh. But what is all this to him, in view of the transcendent revelations of the future of which he had become the depository and dispenser? We would speak of our present burdens and of the lightness of our load in the resurrection, but he reverses this. The glory of that day would be an unbearable burden to our present bodies. Our burdens are light indeed in view of that transcendent outcome.

<sup>1</sup> Our present soulish body is here compared with the temporary tent of the Bedouins, but our spiritual bodies, which will be our eonian habitations, are compared to a house.

<sup>2</sup> Our present condition is aptly expressed in the two words, groaning and longing. We groan to be rid of

ing of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be manifested in our body. For we who are living are ever being given up to death because of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be manifested in our mortal flesh. So that death is operating in us, yet life in you.

<sup>13</sup> Now having the same spirit of faith—in accord with what has been written, "I believe, wherefore I speak also"—we also are believing, wherefore we are speaking also, <sup>14</sup> being aware that He Who rouses the Lord Jesus will be rousing us also, through Jesus, and will be presenting us together with you. <sup>15</sup> For all is because of you, that the increasing grace, through more thanksgiving, should be superebounding to the glory of God.

<sup>16</sup> Wherefore we are not despondent, but even if our outward man is decaying, nevertheless our inner [man] is being renewed day <sup>17</sup> by day. For our momentary, light affliction is producing for us a transcendently transcendent eonian <sup>18</sup> burden of glory, not noting that of ours which is observed, but what is not observed, for what is observed is temporary, yet what is not observed is eonian.

<sup>5</sup> For we are aware that, if our terrestrial tabernacle house should be demolished, we have a building of God, a house not made with <sup>2</sup> hands, eonian in the heavens. For in this also we are groaning, longing to be dressed in our habitation <sup>3</sup> which is from heaven, if so be that, being dressed also, we shall not be <sup>4</sup> found naked. For we also, who are in the tabernacle, are groaning, our temporary tabernacle. We long to enter our eonian habitation. We have, however, no desire for any intermediate condition. Death is always viewed as an unwelcome enemy, in Scripture. Resurrection, vivification, is the true expectation of the believer. Even the apostle, in his infirmity and distress, never chooses death, but always suggests a far better alternative, the coming of Christ, when the mortal shall be swallowed up by life.

<sup>6</sup> The article "the" in Greek, sometimes has almost the force of our "this". "The body" is not simply a body, but a particular body, that is, this body in which we are at home now. We have two homes. The tabernacle in which we now live and the eonian house in the resurrection; the soulish body and the spiritual body. We may be away from one home yet present in the other. Now we are away from home, from the Lord. Yet we would much prefer to be away from this home and be at home in our spiritual body, with the Lord. We have no third home, and if we had, the apostle has just made it clear that the naked, unsheltered condition is not at all to be desired. He could hardly reverse that conviction without some further explanation.

<sup>10</sup> The dais, or raised platform from which games were judged and awards given, must not be confused with a judicial bench. The quality of our acts may determine the award to which we are entitled, but the question of condemnation is entirely foreign to such a tribunal. We are absolutely absolved from all condemnation, but we are eligible to an award for meritorious service. These awards will be distributed at the dais of Christ, according to our acts in "the" body, that is, our present soulish bodies.

<sup>14</sup> The apostle looks upon the world as one vast charnel house. Since Christ died for the sake of all, then all died. He sees the end of all physical privilege and pretension in this great fact. This is the basis of the new departure in his ministry at this time.

being burdened, on which we are not wanting to be stripped, but to be dressed, that the mortal may be swallowed up by life. Now He Who is producing us for this same thing is God, Who is also giving us the earnest of the spirit.

<sup>6</sup> Being, then, courageous always, and aware that, being at home in the body, we are away from home from the Lord (for we are walking by faith, not by perception), yet we are encouraged, and are delighting rather to be away from home out of the body and to be at home with the Lord. Wherefore we are ambitious also, whether at home or away from home, to be well pleasing to Him.

<sup>10</sup> For all of us must be manifested in front of the dais of Christ, that each should be required for that which he puts into practise through the body, whether it is good or bad.

<sup>11</sup> Being aware, then, of the fear of the Lord, we are persuading men, yet we have been made manifest to God. Now I am expecting to have been made manifest in your consciences also.

<sup>12</sup> Not again are we commending ourselves to you, but are giving an incentive to you, boasting over you, that you may have it for those who boast in personal appearance

<sup>13</sup> and not in heart. For, whether we were beside ourselves, it is to God, whether we are sane, it is to you.

<sup>14</sup> For the love of Christ is constraining us, judging this, that if One died for the sake of all, conse-

<sup>15</sup> quently all died. And He died for the sake of all that those who are living should by no means still be living to themselves, but to the One dying and being roused for their sakes.

Change back place
at this juncture

<sup>16</sup> Paul had been proclaiming the kingdom, with Christ and the nation which is related to Him by physical ties at its head. Entrance into that kingdom was by a birth from above. But now the figure of birth is not radical enough to denote the great change. Just as, after the day of the Lord, heaven and earth will be re-created, so is the spiritual ~~experience of one who is in Christ~~. There is a new creation. Paul never connects the new birth with his teaching to the nations. It suffices to figure the change necessary for the sons of Israel and their proselytes, fitting them for the earthly millennial sphere. For us, far more is needed. Like Adam, we are not a mere renewal in kind, but an entirely new creation.

<sup>18</sup> "All is of God!" This is the key to real evangelism. Here we have, in brief, the heart of the true evangel for the world in this administration of grace. The key note is conciliation. Not the sinner conciliating God by penance or prayers, but God conciliating the sinner. The sinner may be most offensive and insulting, but God does not reckon these offenses against him. Let this be clear. God is not charging men with their sins, for Christ died for sins. He is not pressing their offenses, for He is bent on conciliation. The evangel is not concerned with the sinner at all but with God's attitude toward him and with the sufferings of Christ. He has placed in us, not the message of judgment, but the word of conciliation.

<sup>20</sup> God insists on being at peace with the world, no matter how they treated His Son, or Paul, or any of His ambassadors. He will withdraw us, His ambassadors, before He declares war, in the coming day of His indignation. What a marvelous token of His grace and love that God (not the sinner) does the beseeching now! Nothing can be so foreign to this evangel as a sinner praying to God, for it closes his ears to God's entreaties. We are ambassadors for the high court of heaven, proclaiming peace and conciliation. When the sinner receives the conciliation there is mutual reconciliation between him and God. Sinner, God is beseeching you, through us, "Be conciliated to God!" Your sins are no hindrance, for He has

<sup>16</sup> So that we, from now on, are acquainted with no one according to flesh. Yet, even if we have known Christ according to flesh, nevertheless now we know Him no longer. So that, if anyone is in Christ, there is a new creation: the primitive passed by. Lo! it has become new!

<sup>18</sup> Yet all is of God, Who conciliates us to Himself through Christ, and is giving us the dispensation of the conciliation, how that, in Christ, God was conciliating the world to Himself, not reckoning their offenses to them, and placing in us the word of the conciliation.

<sup>20</sup> We are, then, ambassadors for Christ, as God entreating through us. We are beseeching for Christ, <sup>21</sup> "Be conciliated to God!" For the One knowing no sin, He makes sin for our sakes that we may be becoming God's righteousness in Him.

6 Now, working together, we are also entreating you not to receive the grace of God for naught. For He is saying "In an acceptable era I hear you,

And in a day of salvation I help you."

Lo! Now is a most acceptable era!
Lo! Now is a day of salvation!

<sup>3</sup> We are giving no one cause to stumble in anything, lest flaws be found with the service, but in everything we are commending ourselves as servants of God, in much endurance, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in blows, in jails, in turbulences, in toil, in vigils, in fasts, in pureness, in knowledge, in patience, in kindness, in holy spirit, in love unfeigned, in the word of truth, in the power of God, through the implements of righteousness of the right hand and made Christ a Sin Offering for our sakes that we may become God's righteousness in Him. There is nothing for you to do but to accept His proffered love. Simply thank and adore Him for His grace.

<sup>8</sup> The true servant of God may well take heart from this list. Practically all the present day ministerial qualifications for service are absent. We know that Paul had no presence. His personal appearance did not commend him. His speech was counted contemptible. These were faults keenly felt by the carnal Corinthians, just as they are today. But he insists that he has given no one cause to stumble in anything. Paul deemed eloquence and physical appearance of no vital moment. Love, knowledge, toil, endurance, these ought to characterize the Lord's servant today even if he should not be called upon to bear affliction and distresses such as came to Paul. It is a vast comfort to the editor of this version to find himself able to enter fully into the apostle's experience in many particulars. His efforts have met with defamation and renown, he has been accused of deceiving yet is assured of his integrity, he is unknown yet recognized, disciplined yet not put to death, sorrowful yet ever rejoicing, poor yet enriching many.

<sup>14</sup> The church has fallen so low and has compromised so thoroughly with the world that the sharp distinction between saint and sinner has been almost obliterated. And with this the separation between believer and unbeliever is rarely acknowledged. Were we, who are Christ's, living up to our privileges, we would not even consider any alliance with unbelievers. In business we should have a standard of righteousness unknown to them. No partnership is possible between righteousness and lawlessness. The social organizations of the world are darkness to one who is light in the Lord. There can be no agreement between the religions of the world and Christ. The true believer cannot share in that which appeals to the unbeliever.

<sup>16</sup> A due sense of the solemn fact that God is making His home in us is the best preventive from contamination with the pollutions of the world.

<sup>8</sup> of the left, through glory and dishonor, through defamation and renown, as deceivers and true, as unknown and recognized, as dying, and lo! we are living, as disciplined and not put to death, as sorrowing yet ever rejoicing, as poor, yet enriching many, as having nothing and retaining all.

<sup>11</sup> Our mouth has opened toward you, Corinthians, your heart has been broadened. You are not distressed in us, yet you are distressed in your compassions. Now, as a recompense in kind (I am saying this as to children); you also be broadened!

<sup>14</sup> Do not become diversely yoked with unbelievers. For what partnership have righteousness and lawlessness? Or what communion has light with darkness? Now what agreement has Christ with Beliar? Or what part a believer with an unbeliever? Now what concurrence has the temple of God with idols? For you are the temple of the living God, according as God said, that "I shall be making My home and shall walk among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be My people." Wherefore "Come out of their midst and be severed", the Lord is saying, "and touch not the unclean, and I will admit you, and I will be a Father to you, and you shall be sons and daughters to Me", is saying the Lord Almighty.

<sup>7</sup> Having, then, these promises, beloved, we should be cleansing ourselves from every pollution of flesh and spirit, completing holiness in the fear of God.

Paul is not misquoting from memory, as is usually supposed. He makes inspired alterations to suit the occasion.

<sup>2</sup> What a tender yet cutting rebuke to the Corinthians! The idea that Paul had injured any of them! They owed all their blessings in Christ to him. They, indeed, had injured him by their ungrateful conduct. Whom, indeed, had he corrupted? He had led them out of the corruption of heathendom into the holiness which is in Christ. Had he overreached any of them? He did not even charge them with his bare subsistence, when he might have claimed all they had. They owed their very selves to him. But their ungratefulness did not alienate his affections from them. No doubt, at his coming into Macedonia, there would be much to engage his attention, much in Philippi to encourage and comfort him in his distress, yet nothing set his heart at rest until he had tidings from Corinth. This is but another example of the function of evil. Had the Corinthians been exemplary in their conduct, this marvelous interchange and expression of affection would never have found occasion. Men cannot bring good out of evil: that is God's prerogative. But God can, and does, control all the evil in the universe, so that its ultimate result will be blessing far beyond what could have been had evil never entered and marred His perfect creation. God is able to cope with evil. It is not stronger than He is.

<sup>6</sup> At Titus' arrival in Macedonia he conveys to Paul the good news that the Corinthians as a whole have been greatly affected by his former epistle and have been diligent to right the wrongs which he had pointed out. At times the apostle seems to have regretted writing the epistle, for he did not wish to cause them sorrow. But now that the sorrow produced has had such a beneficial effect, he rejoices that it was not superficial, or despairing, but caused them to change their mind, and act accordingly. Above all it proved that the gross sins into which some of them had fallen were not widespread. It did not have the countenance of the ecclesia, for they

<sup>3</sup> overreach no one. I am not saying this with a view to condemnation, for I have declared before that you are in our hearts to die together and to live together.
<sup>4</sup> Much is my boldness toward you; much is my boasting over you. I have been filled with consolation, I am superexceeding in joy in all our <sup>5</sup> affliction. For even at our coming into Macedonia, our flesh had no ease, but we are afflicted in everything. Outside fightings; inside fears.

<sup>6</sup> But God, Who is consoling the humble, consoles us by the presence
<sup>7</sup> of Titus, yet not only by his presence, but by the consolation also with which he was consoled by you, informing us of your longing, your anguish, your zeal for my sake;
<sup>8</sup> so that I rather rejoice that even if I make you sorry by an epistle, I am not regretting it, even if I did regret. For I am observing that that epistle makes you sorry,
<sup>9</sup> even if it is for an hour. I am now rejoicing, not that you were made sorry, but that you were made sorry to repentance. For you were made sorry according to God, that
<sup>10</sup> you forfeited nothing by us. For sorrow according to God is producing repentance for unregretted salvation, yet the sorrow of the world is working death.

<sup>11</sup> For lo, this same thing—for you to be made sorry according to God—how much it produces in you of diligence, nay, defense, nay, resentment, nay, fear, nay, longing, nay, zeal, nay, avenging! In everything resented it, and defended themselves. They made it clear that, as an ecclesia, they were pure in this matter. The majority laid aside their party affiliations and united to purge the ecclesia of its defilement.

<sup>12</sup> It would seem that the opposition to Paul in Corinth was not deep-seated, unless we except some of the Jewish leaders. At heart they were true to him though their conduct seemed to belie it. So Paul brings home to them for more than one reason the gross sin which was committed among them. Indeed, he might have made it an individual matter, and could have written to the offender personally. But he chose rather to involve the ecclesia that they might realize the true heart allegiance which they gave him, notwithstanding their schisms and divisions. Great calamities and persecutions of the saints have much the same effect still. Petty differences and party spirit disappear when some common danger recalls the saints to their allegiance to Christ.

<sup>13</sup> Titus seems to have been much concerned about the Corinthians, lest they should prove refractory, and his visit to them lead to dissension and disobedience. Paul was the more concerned to know of his reception on this account, and because he had sought to soothe his fears and had boasted of the outcome of his endeavors. Titus must have been much pleased to find his fears unfounded, but not nearly so much as Paul, who would have been disgraced for boasting without cause, and for sending Titus to them in spite of his apprehensions.

<sup>1</sup> Macedonia, and especially its chief cities, Philippi and Thessalonica, were models in many ways. The epistles addressed to them have much praise and hardly any censure. If Paul could boast to others about Corinth, he surely had a right to boast about Macedonia. They seem to have been very poor and in the midst of trying circumstances, so that Paul did not expect them to take any part in the collection for the poor saints in Jerusalem. But they beg to have a share in it, and give beyond their ability, first, indeed, giving themselves to the Lord.

you commend yourselves to be
<sup>12</sup> pure in this matter. Consequently, even if I write to you, it is not on account of one who injures, but neither on account of the one being injured, but on account of manifesting to you your diligence for our sake before God.

<sup>13</sup> Therefore we have been consoled, yet in our consolation we rather rejoiced more exceedingly in the joy of Titus, seeing that his spirit has been soothed by you all,
<sup>14</sup> seeing that, if I have boasted any to him over you, I was not disgraced, but as we speak all in truth to you, thus also our boast to
<sup>15</sup> Titus came to be truth. And his compassions for you are superabounding the more, having a recollection of the obedience of you all, as, with fear and trembling, you
<sup>16</sup> receive him. I am rejoicing that in everything I am encouraged in you.

8 Now we are making known to you, brethren, the grace of God which has been bestowed in the ecclesias of Macedonia, seeing that, in an extreme test of affliction, the superabundance of their joy and the corresponding depth of their poverty superabounds to the riches
<sup>2</sup> of their generosity, seeing that, according to ability, I am witness, and beyond their ability, of their
<sup>3</sup> own accord, with much entreaty beseeching of us the grace and fellowship in a service for the <sup>4</sup> saints; and not according as we expect, but they first give themselves to the Lord, and to us through the
<sup>5</sup> will of God. So that we entreat
<sup>6</sup> Titus that, according as he under-

7 Is it not remarkable that Macedonia, poverty stricken, in the midst of extreme affliction, deterred from contributing by Paul, entreats for the privilege as a favor, while Corinth, undoubtedly far richer and more able to contribute, needs their example and all the urging and spurring which the apostle can bring to bear in order that they should not disgrace him by a meager contribution?

9 Paul begins his pleading by giving the true motive which should actuate us in our gifts to God's work and to His poor saints. Christ was rich once beyond all our conceptions of wealth. The whole universe was created for him (Col.1<sup>16</sup>). He subsisted in the form of God (Phil.2<sup>6</sup>). He had no peer on earth or in the heavens. All this He laid aside to enrich us. He emptied Himself, taking the form of a slave, coming to be in the likeness of humanity, and being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross (Phil.2<sup>7-8</sup>). What poverty can equal this? The highest in heaven becomes the out-cast of earth. Who was ever impoverished as He was? He gave up all He had and all He was to enrich us. Now we are rich. But few of God's saints are rich in this world's goods, yet all are blessed with untold spiritual wealth. Such is the example He has set before us. If such was His disposition, it should be ours as well.

10 It is noteworthy that the apostle never commands them to give. He never forces them to be generous. It is no injunction. He gives his opinion. The tithe, which was regularly taken in Israel for the support of the Levites, is never applied to the nations, for it is a part of the law, and its spirit is entirely foreign to the spontaneous, hearty response which alone gives value to all donations.

13 It is evident that the Corinthians were blessed with more than sufficient for their wants or they could not have given of their superabundance.

takes before, thus also should he be completing for you this grace as well. But even as you are superabounding in everything—in faith and word and knowledge and all diligence and your love to us—you may be superabounding in this grace also. I am not saying this as an injunction, but, through the diligence of others, testing also this genuine love of yours.

9 For you know of the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that, being rich, because of you He is poor, that you, by His poverty, should be rich. And in this I am giving an opinion, for this is expedient for you, who for a year past, undertake before, not only to do but to be willing also. Yet now complete the doing also, so that even in accord with the eagerness to will, thus also may be the completion, out of what you have. For if eagerness lies before, it is acceptable according to what one may have, not according to what he has not.

13 For it is not that, to others ease, yet to you affliction, but by an equality, in the current period, your superabundance is for their want, that their superabundance also may be coming to be for your want, so that there may be coming to be an equality, according as it is written: "The one with much increases not, and the scant one lessens not".

16 Now thanks be to God, Who is imparting the same diligence for you to the heart of Titus, seeing that he, indeed, receives the entreaty, yet belonging to the more diligent, of his own accord he came out to you. Now we send together with him the brother whose applause

<sup>18</sup> It is probable that Titus' companion later returned with Paul when he conveyed the contribution to Jerusalem, and was one of the company which went with him into Asia (Ac. 20<sup>4</sup>). These were Sopater of Berea, Aristarchus and Secundus of Thessalonica, Gaius of Derbe, Tychicus and Trophimus of Asia. Timothy would have been mentioned by name. Luke also was with them. Trophimus, we know, went as far as Jerusalem. It would be especially fitting that he should be among the bearers of this offering to the saints at Jerusalem and that they should thus requite him for his kindness, for Paul's long imprisonment began as a result of Trophimus' presence in Jerusalem. The Jews thought that Paul had taken him into the sacred precincts of the temple.

<sup>20</sup> It was necessary that one in whom they had implicit confidence should have a hand in the conveyance of the collection to Jerusalem, lest Paul should leave open any possibility for false suspicions.

<sup>4</sup> The Macedonians had hurried their collection. The Corinthians had been preparing for it long before them. How would it appear if they should not be ready?

in the evangel is through all the
<sup>19</sup> ecclesias, yet not only so, but who was elected also by the ecclesias to be our fellow traveler with this grace, which is being dispensed by us to the glory of the Lord Himself; our eagerness also putting it thus. No one should find flaws in us in this exuberance being dispensed by us, for we are providing the ideal, not only before the Lord, but before men also.

<sup>22</sup> Now we send together with them our brother, whom we test in many things, often being diligent, yet now much more diligent. Now our confidence in you is much, whether for the sake of Titus, my mate and fellow worker for you, or our brethren, the apostles of the ecclesias,
<sup>24</sup> the glory of Christ. Then the display of your love and our boast over you to them is being displayed in the face of the ecclesias.

<sup>9</sup> For, indeed, concerning the dispensation for the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you. For I am aware of your eagerness, of which I am boasting over you to the Macedonians, that "Achaia has been prepared a year past". And your zeal provokes the majority.
<sup>3</sup> Yet I send the brethren, lest our boasting over you should be made void in this particular, that you may be prepared according as I
<sup>4</sup> said, lest somehow, if the Macedonians should be coming together with me and finding you unprepared, we may be disgraced (not that we should say you!) in this assumption of boasting.

5 God has no need. Gifts acceptable to Him must spring from a pure motive. It is better not to give at all than to give with a heavy heart or from an unworthy motive. Extortion, whether by appeals to pride, competition, tithing, or anything except the voluntary, spontaneous response to His grace, is not in keeping with His attitude toward us now.

6 While giving should never be mercenary, in hope of some return, it is doubtless most profitable in every way. It brings immediate happiness and satisfaction and it bears a harvest in the future. The farmer who stints his seed will reap a spare crop. Many of us, in that day, will wish that we had been more bountiful in our sowing for, no doubt, the harvest will be a hundred fold.

7 Hilarious is the English adaptation of the Greek word we have rendered "gleeful". One may give with cheerful resignation, but more than this is desired by the Lord. When we do it with irrepressible joy, then we come into closest communion with the God Who gave His Son and with Him gives us all.

12 Paul had promised James, Cephas and John, that, in carrying out his distinctive ministry, he would not fail to remember the poor saints among the Circumcision (Gal. 2:10). They may have had no higher thought than to relieve their distressed brethren. Paul was impelled by a worthier motive. Jews of the Circumcision were continually harassing him and threatened to create a bitter antagonism between the Jews and the ecclesias he had founded. They were already at work in Corinth and Galatia. If he could carry to Jerusalem some signal proof of the good will of these foreign believers he might repair the widening breach, and bring glory to God through the mutual interest and the thankfulness it would create. But they responded by putting him in chains. When the apostle came to bring the alms to Jerusalem, instead of giving him an ovation and gladly sharing their spiritual wealth with the nations, the mere suggestion that Paul had brought one of the aliens into the temple precincts nearly cost him his life.

5 I deem it necessary, then, to entreat the brethren that they may be coming before to you and should be adjusting beforehand your previously promised bounty, that this be ready thus, as a bounty and not as greed, yet as this: who is sowing sparingly shall be reaping sparingly also, and who is sowing bountifully shall be reaping bountifully also, each according as he has proposed in his heart, not sorrowfully, or of compulsion, for God is loving a gleeful giver.

8 Now God is able to lavish all grace on you, that, having all contentment in everything always, you may be superabounding in every good work, according as it is written, "He scatters, He gives to the drudges, His righteousness remains for the eon". Now may He Who is supplying seed to the sower, and bread for food, be furnishing and multiplying your seed and be causing the product of your righteousness to grow, being enriched in everything, for all generosity, which is producing through us thanksgiving to God, seeing that the dispensation of this ministry is not only replenishing the wants of the saints, but is superabounding also through much thanksgiving, to God, through the testedness of this dispensation, glorifying God at the subjection of your avowal to the evangel of Christ, and in the generosity of the contribution for them and for all, and in their petition for you, longing to be acquainted with you, because of the tran-

1 Paul now turns his attention to the minority in Corinth, who were still opposed to him. They may be that party which said, "I am of Christ" (1 Co. 1:12) and seem to have been led by an emissary of the Judaizers. These men were proud and imperious, quite unlike the Christ in Whom they boasted, hence Paul appeals to the meekness and lenience of Christ. They walked according to the flesh and were continually opposing him on that ground. They misinterpreted his gentleness, and called it cowardice, they said he was brave enough at a distance, but afraid to put his threats into execution when present. Paul, in reply, hopes he may not be called upon to exercise the authority he possesses in a destructive way, but makes it plain that he has the spiritual power to wage a campaign if necessary. By a bold figure he likens his spiritual warfare to the pulling down of the forts of the enemy, and leading all opposition into captivity. The most powerful weapons are not material but spiritual. Neither are place and prestige as potent as truth. Paul alone was more than a match for the judaizing legates sent out from Jerusalem. False brethren such as these were his most virulent enemies.

7 The unspiritual, fleshly minded man looks only on the surface. But nowhere are appearances so deceiving as in things spiritual. Our Lord Himself had none of the superficial marks of greatness. Paul seems to have been specially deficient in those qualities which were demanded from those who aspired to leadership in the world. His public speaking seems to have been the special point on which his enemies attacked him. Greek orators were probably the most accomplished the world has ever seen. By comparison Paul's presence was weak and his delivery contemptible. But what has become of all those masters of forensic art? They are dead and their efforts have died with them. The few that remain are models of beauty but are devoid of all spiritual power. Paul's words transformed his hearers, not by his mode of delivery, but by their truth and potency.

15 scendent grace of God on you. Now thanks be to God for His indescribable gratuity!

10 Now I, Paul, myself am entreating you through the meekness and lenience of Christ, who, as to personal appearance, indeed, am humble among you, yet, being absent, have courage toward you. Yet I am beseeching that I may not, being present, have courage with the confidence with which I am reckoning to dare some who reckon us as walking according to the flesh. For, walking in flesh, we are not warring according to the flesh. For the weapons of our warfare are not fleshly, but powerful to God toward the pulling down of bulwarks; pulling down reasonings and every height elevating itself against the knowledge of God, and leading into captivity every apprehension into the obedience of Christ, and in readiness to avenge every disobedience, whenever your obedience may be completed.

7 Are you looking on the surface? If anyone is presuming to have confidence in himself to be Christ's, let him be reckoning this again with himself, that, according as he is Christ's, thus also are we. For if I, as well, should be boasting somewhat more excessively concerning our authority. (which the Lord gives us for edification and not for pulling you down); I shall not be put to shame, lest I should seem as though terrifying you through epistles, seeing that he is averring, "His epistles, indeed, are weighty and strong, yet his bodily presence is weak and his expression contemptible". Let such a one be reckoning this, that such as we are in

<sup>11</sup> Even forbearance and gentleness have their limits. The apostle makes it clear that, when he came to them again he would act quite as severely as he wrote in dealing with those who still opposed him. He does not wish to be judged by their standard, for it is of no use at all to measure men by men. Anyone can be great in a community of dwarfs. If the standard is false, so is the greatness.

<sup>12</sup> These opponents of his were overstretching themselves. They never came as far as Corinth in proclaiming the evangel, but after Paul had toiled, then they came along and boasted as if they, not he, had outstripped others in bringing it to them. Paul was planning to carry the evangel beyond them into regions where it had never been proclaimed. Were they intending to outstrip him in reaching out to virgin fields, that they might have a real cause for boasting? It is evident that it suited them better to boast in what was already accomplished by another, rather than endure the toil and privation of a missionary journey with all its difficulties and dangers.

Paul had a right to boast, if anyone had. He ought to have been so high in their esteem that no one could displace him in their regard, least of all those who had no real claim on them and who chose to defame the one who had toiled and suffered for them in their very midst.

<sup>1</sup> Paul did not wish the Corinthians to divide their allegiance among a number of men, nor indeed, to yield it to anyone but Christ. When a virgin is engaged, she is no longer free to follow other men, but should keep herself for her affianced. So with us. Let us not follow men, but be single toward Christ. The point in this figure is confined to the singleness and purity of the espoused virgin. It must not be overstretching into an allusion to the marriage state. The faithful in Israel are the bride of the Lambkin.

Israel was Jehovah's wife, but was divorced for her unfaithfulness. John the Baptist introduced the bride to the Bridegroom. His disciples left him for his Lord. The new Jerusalem will be on earth, the home of the twelve tribes of Israel. Ours is a heavenly allotment.

word, through epistles, being absent, such also are we in act, being present. For we do not dare to judge ourselves by, or compare ourselves with, some who are commending themselves. But they, measuring themselves by themselves and comparing themselves with themselves, do not understand.

<sup>13</sup> Now we shall not be boasting immeasurably, but according to the measure of the rule which God parts to us—a measure to reach <sup>14</sup> as far as you also (for it is not as though, not reaching to you, we are overstretching ourselves, for we outstrip [others] even as far as you in the evangel of Christ), <sup>15</sup> not boasting immeasurably in others' toil, yet having the expectation, your faith being grown, to be magnified among you superabundantly, according to our rule, so as to preach the evangel beyond you, not to boast in another's rule for <sup>17</sup> that which is ready. Now he who is boasting, let him be boasting in <sup>18</sup> the Lord. For not he that commends himself is qualified, but whom the Lord is commending.

<sup>11</sup> You ought to have borne with me in any little imprudence. Nay, <sup>2</sup> and be bearing with me, for I am jealous over you with a jealousy of God. For I betroth you to one Man, to present a pure virgin to <sup>3</sup> Christ. Now I fear lest somehow, as the serpent deludes Eve by its craftiness, it should be corrupting your minds from the singleness and <sup>4</sup> the purity which is in Christ. For if, indeed, he who is coming is proclaiming another Jesus whom we do not proclaim, or you are obtaining a different spirit, which

<sup>4</sup> The newcomers in Corinth did not have anything to proclaim more than Paul had already made known to them. Paul's speech may have been plain, but his knowledge was not deficient by any means. In this, more than in anything else, he was far beyond any other apostle. He knew all that the Circumcision had to proclaim. They could tell him nothing that he did not fully apprehend already. They, on the other hand, had to learn of his commission and the truth he taught, from him. Peter, the greatest of them, found some things in his epistles hard to understand (2 Pet. 3:16). We may well go further than his own words, and acknowledge that he towers far above all the rest, especially in those later revelations which, at the time this epistle was penned, had not yet been made known.

<sup>7</sup> The only charge they could sustain against him was that he had proclaimed the evangel to them without receiving anything from them, not even enough to pay for his scanty wants. Poor Macedonia helped to supply his necessities in rich Corinth. Here is an excellent example for our modern evangelism. Where are the evangelists today who can say, I have preached the evangel gratuitously? Did these opponents of Paul in Corinth follow in his footsteps in this regard? Their mercenary motives would doubtless lead them in quite an opposite extreme.

<sup>13</sup> Satan changes his tactics to conform to God's administrations. At times he deceives, and again he destroys. Peter speaks of him as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. 5:8). Such will be his course in the judgment era following the present administration of grace, when the epistles of Peter will have their application. Now Satan is transfigured into an angel of light. He is not hideous, but beautiful. His servants stand for righteousness and pose as apostles of Christ. His work is not found in the sinks of iniquity, but in the efforts to educate and reform mankind apart from the blood of Christ. He deceives by assuming the very role which he is popularly supposed to oppose.

you did not obtain, or a different evangel, which you do not receive, you are bearing with him ideally.

<sup>5</sup> For I am reckoning to be deficient in nothing pertaining to the paramount apostles. Now even if I am plain in expression, nevertheless not in knowledge, but in everything being made manifest in all for you.

<sup>7</sup> Or do I sin in humbling myself that you may be exalted, seeing that I preach God's evangel to you gratuitously? I despoil other ecclesias, getting rations for dispensing to you. And when I was present with you and in want, I am an encumbrance to no one (for the brethren coming from Macedonia replenish my wants), and in everything I keep and shall be keeping myself from being burdensome to you.

<sup>10</sup> The truth of Christ is in me, seeing that I will not be barred from this boasting of mine in the regions of Achaia. Wherefore? Seeing that I am not loving you? God is aware! Now what I am doing and will be doing is that I may strike off the incentive from those wanting an incentive, that wherein they are boasting they may be found according as we also. For such are false apostles, fraudulent workers, being transfigured into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel, for Satan himself is being transfigured into a messenger of light. It is no great thing, then, if his servants also are being transfigured as dispensers of righteousness—whose consummation will be according to their acts.

<sup>16</sup> Again I am saying, no one should presume me to be imprudent. Yet if otherwise, receive me as imprudent, that I also should <sup>20</sup> Paul's patient and forbearing behavior among them was in striking contrast to the course of his detractors. They treated the Corinthians like slaves, while Paul served them like a slave. They devoured their substance. Paul provided for himself by his own labor or the gifts of other ecclesiastics. They took what they could obtain. Paul refused to take anything from them. They set themselves high above the Corinthians. Paul humbled himself among them. They even treated them to personal indignities. Paul confesses ironically that he was too weak to intimidate them in this fashion. And yet they not only tolerated but actually relished such treatment!

<sup>22</sup> "Hebrews" denotes not merely Israelites, but that party in the nation which was zealous for the law and the traditions, in contrast to the Hellenists, who were tainted with Greek culture. (See Ac.6<sup>1</sup>).

<sup>22</sup> Paul now, in his assumed imprudence, compares himself with them. As to physical descent he can match them on every point. But when it comes to his service, he stands unparalleled and unapproachable. Here was a man by no means strong, often suffering from some form of physical infirmity, leading a life of incessant peril, enduring and daring all for the sake of the evangel. The record in Acts seems full of his sufferings, but it is evident that the account in Acts is by no means complete. There is no record of the five Jewish scourgings. Only one of the Roman beatings, the one at Philippi, is elsewhere mentioned. The stoning was at Lystra (Ac.14<sup>19</sup>). Not one of the shipwrecks is found in the account in Acts, for the one there recorded was long after this.

<sup>26</sup> Travel was attended with much hazard in Paul's time, especially as he probably went unattended and unarmed. But more dangerous than the robbers who infested the highways was the constant plotting of the Jews to kill him, and the opposition on all sides to his evangel, which often clashed with the prejudice and material interests of the nations.

<sup>17</sup> be boasting a little! What I am talking, I am not talking in accord with the Lord, but as in imprudence, <sup>18</sup> in this assumption of boasting. Since many are boasting according to the <sup>19</sup> flesh, I also shall be boasting. For with relish are you tolerating the <sup>20</sup> imprudent, being prudent. For you are bearing with it if anyone is enslaving you, if anyone is devouring, if anyone is obtaining, if anyone is elevating himself, if any <sup>21</sup> one is lashing you in the face. I am saying this by way of dishonor, as that we are weak.

Now in whatever anyone is daring (I am saying it in imprudence), <sup>22</sup> I also am daring. Are they Hebrews? I also. Are they Israelites? I also. Are they the <sup>23</sup> seed of Abraham? I also. Are they servants of Christ? Being insane, I am talking for the sake of "I". In weariness more exceedingly, in jails more exceedingly, in blows inordinately, in <sup>24</sup> deaths often. By Jews five times <sup>25</sup> I got forty save one. Thrice am I flogged with rods, once am I stoned, thrice in a shipwreck, a night and a day have I spent in <sup>26</sup> a marsh, in journeys often, in dangers of rivers, in dangers of robbers, in dangers of my race, in dangers of the nations, in dangers in the city, in dangers in the wilderness, in dangers in the sea, in <sup>27</sup> dangers among false brethren; in weariness and labor, in vigils often, in famine and thirst, in fasts often, <sup>28</sup> in cold and nakedness, apart from what is outside, that which is coming upon me daily, solicitude for all the ecclesias.

<sup>29</sup> Is anyone weak and I am not weak? Who is snared and I am <sup>30</sup> not on fire? If I must boast, I will boast in that which is of my <sup>32</sup> When Paul returned from Arabia to Damascus and preached boldly in the name of Jesus, he confounded the Jews who lived at Damascus, proving that he was proclaiming the Messiah. Here was something for him to boast about! But no. He boasts only in his weakness. He had no strength to withstand the Jews who sought to kill him. They had the whole garrison of the city on the alert to arrest him. So he boasts in his humiliating escape, being lowered through the wall, probably at some overhanging window, in a wicker basket!

<sup>1</sup> Now, however, Paul comes to that which is, doubtless, his greatest ground for glorying. Fourteen years before finds him on his first missionary journey after his severance at Antioch. At Lystra he is stoned and left for dead (Ac.14<sup>28</sup>). It is more than likely that this, the time when his battered body was supposed to be finished with this life, is when he is transported in spirit to the third heaven. There are three heavens in Scripture. The first was of old (2Pet.3<sup>5</sup>) and perished, but was followed by "the heavens which are now" (2Pet.3<sup>7</sup>). But these, too, are transient. The third heaven is viewed by the apostle John in the Unveiling (Un.21<sup>1</sup>). John, however, does not enter the new heaven, but confines himself to a description of the new earth. Paul entered the third heaven and there saw (what he afterward revealed in his Perfection Epistles) the universal supremacy of Christ and the supernal dignity and bliss conferred on the ecclesia which is Christ's body. He also enters the new earth and its park, which John describes (Un.22<sup>2</sup>). All of this he had seen, but he was not allowed to disclose it until the time was ripe. This came when Israel's apostasy was full blown, as recorded at the close of the book of Acts. Till then he does not even claim to be the man who had seen and heard such transcendent revelations.

<sup>31</sup> weakness. The God and Father of the Lord Jesus, Who is blessed for the eons, is aware that I am not lying. In Damascus the ethnarch of Aretus, the king, garrisoned the city of the Damascenes, wanting to arrest me, and I am lowered in a wicker basket through a window through the wall, and I escaped his hands.

<sup>12</sup> If I must boast, it is not expedient, indeed, yet I shall also be coming to apparitions and revelations of the Lord. I am acquainted with a man in Christ, such a one, fourteen years ago (whether in a body I am not aware, or outside of the body, I am not aware—God is aware) was snatched away to the third heaven. And I am acquainted with such a man (whether in a body or outside of the body I am not aware—God is aware) that he was snatched away into paradise and hears ineffable declarations, which it is not allowed a man to speak. Over such a one I shall be boasting; yet I shall not be boasting for myself, except in my infirmities. For, should I be wanting to boast, I shall not be imprudent, for I shall be declaring the truth. Now I am reticent, that no one should be reckoning me to be above anything that he is observing or hearing of me.

<sup>7</sup> Wherefore also, lest I should be lifted up by the transcendence of the revelations, there was given me a splinter in the flesh, a messenger of Satan, that he may be buffeting me, lest I should be lifted up. For this I entreat the Lord thrice, that it should withdraw from me. And He has protested to me, "My grace is sufficient for you, for My power is perfected in infirmity". With the greatest relish, then, will I measure at such revelations as had been confided to him? But Paul had good reason to refrain from boasting. A painful physical infirmity was given him to keep him humble. A thorn in the flesh is hardly adequate, a splinter is nearer, but still too weak an expression, for Paul would not entreat thrice for the removal of some minor distress. But it was not removed. Instead, he received grace and the assurance that God's power finds infirmity its fittest tool. He needs none of man's strength. It hinders the manifestation of His power. O, that we could learn this lesson! We repine and are dejected when infirmity and persecution and necessity press upon us, when we should rejoice. Paul delighted in them, not for their own sake, but that the power of Christ may be manifested through them. May His grace be our sole sufficiency!

14 What a fund of fatherly affection is revealed in his protest, "I am not seeking yours but you!" And it must have humbled them to think of their own lack of care and consideration. They deserved nothing further at his hands. But instead of rebuking them and asserting his rights as an apostle, he proposes to lavish still more affection on them. And he will do this even if it should still further dampen their affection for him. Is not this a reflection of God's dealings with us in grace? We accept His bounty with all too feeble a response, yet He is not offended, but pours it out in more lavish style.

16 Paul anticipates a subtle insinuation which his enemies might suggest, even if he had cleared himself of their charges. He had sent Titus and others to them. Perhaps he had used them as tools to overreach them, so as to shield himself from blame. But it seems that Titus and those whom he had dispatched to them all were worthy delegates of the apostle, for they followed the same course he had done.

18 Thus he closes his appeal. His own defense was necessary for their edification.

rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ should be tabernacled over me. Wherefore I delight in infirmities, in outrages, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake, for whenever I may be weak, then I am powerful.

11 I have become imprudent: you compel me. For I ought to be commended by you, for I am not deficient in anything pertaining to the paramount apostles, even if I am nothing. Indeed, the signs of an apostle are produced among you in all endurance, in signs as well as miracles and powers. For is there anything in which you were discomfited over the rest of the ecclesias, except that I myself am no encumbrance to you? Deal graciously with me for this injustice!

14 Lo! this third time I am in readiness to come to you, and I shall not be an encumbrance, for I am not seeking yours but you. For the children ought not to be treasuring up for the parents, but the parents for the children. Yet with the greatest relish shall I spend and be bankrupted for the sake of your souls, even if loving you more exceedingly diminishes your love for me.

16 Now, let be, I do not overburden you, but belonging to the crafty, I got you by guile! Did not any of those whom I dispatched to you? 17 Through him I overreach you! I entreat Titus, and dispatch together with him a brother. Does Titus not overreach you in something? Walk we not in the same spirit? Not in the same foot-prints?

19 Again, you are presuming that we are defending ourselves to you. In God's sight, in Christ, are we speaking, yet all, beloved, for the

<sup>21</sup> It was probably some months before Paul fulfilled his intention of visiting them again in person. During the interval he went over Macedonia, and possibly as far as Illyricum, giving them much exhortation. But all this time his heart was in Corinth. He had written to them. He had sent messengers to them. They had given him much sorrow not unmixed with joy. He had exhorted and he had threatened. He had made it plain that he would not spare when he came again in person. Can we imagine his feelings as he approached the city? How he shrank from being severe! Yet he must be severe, should it be necessary. Doubtless the majority would receive him with hearts full of joy and affection. But what of the rebellious minority? It was with such powerful emotions that he followed this epistle some months later.

It would seem from the uncanonical epistle of Clement, that his efforts for the Corinthian ecclesia were not in vain, but bore precious fruit. According to Acts (Ac.20<sup>2</sup>), he stayed in Greece three months, and, as usual, had to leave because the Jews lay in wait for him.

<sup>4</sup> The power of Christ had been manifested amongst the Corinthians, yet Paul reminds them that even He was once crucified in utter weakness. Pilate and Herod and the chief priests all seemed stronger than He. But out of that very weakness came the power that saved them and that triumphed over His adversaries and that raised Him to the highest place in all the universe. So, says Paul, will it be with my weakness. The same power that raised Christ from the dead will impart strength to my weakness, and triumph over my adversaries.

<sup>7</sup> Paul had no desire, however, to exercise the power he possessed. This might serve to prove his qualification for the office of an apostle, but it would be ill for them. Rather would he appear as disqualified and spare them such a proof as this. No matter what he did, however, it would be for the sake of the truth, for he had no power against the truth.

<sup>20</sup> sake of your edification. For I am afraid, lest somehow, on coming, I may not be finding you such as I want, and I may be found by you such as you do not want; lest somehow there be strife, jealousy, fury, factions, viliations, whisperings, puffing up, turbulences.

<sup>21</sup> Not again at my coming will my God be humbling me toward you, and I shall be mourning for many who have sinned before and are not repentant of the uncleanness and prostitution and wantonness which they commit.

13 Lo! This is the third time I am coming to you. By the mouth of two witnesses, and three, shall every declaration be made to stand.

<sup>2</sup> I have declared before, and am predicting as if being present the second time, and now, being absent, to those having sinned before and to all the rest, that if I should be coming again, I shall not spare, since you are seeking a test of Christ speaking in me, Who is not weak for you, but powerful among you. For even if He was crucified out of weakness, nevertheless He is living by the power of God. For we also are weak together, with Him, but we shall be living together with Him by the power of God for you.

<sup>5</sup> Be trying yourselves, if you are in the faith; be testing yourselves. Or are you not recognizing yourselves that Christ Jesus is in you, except some are disqualified? Now I expect that you will know that we are not disqualified! Now we are wishing to God that you do no evil, not that we may appear qualified, but that you may be doing that which is ideal, yet we may be as disqualified. For we are not able for anything against the truth, <sup>10</sup> Edification should ever be the aim of God's servant in dealing with His erring saints. All other means should be exhausted before sharpness and severity should be used. They are a last resort, and seldom need be called into play if the example of Paul were followed, as it is given us in this epistle.

<sup>11</sup> The epistle closes with characteristic tokens of affection. Throughout the appeal is to the feelings. This is especially true of the evangel and its proclamation. God on His part beseeches the sinner to be conciliated. The saint is reconciled. He is not merely righteous, but at perfect peace with God. This is the fruit of the evangel which is so delicious to God's heart and to ours. Let us not fail to appreciate the marvelous affection of His message!

<sup>9</sup> but for the sake of the truth. For we are rejoicing whenever we may be weak, yet you may be powerful. Now this are we wishing also: <sup>10</sup> your readjustment. Therefore I am writing this being absent that, being present, I should not be using severity, according to the authority which the Lord gives me for edification and not for pulling down.

<sup>11</sup> Furthermore, brethren, be rejoicing, be readjusted, be entreated, be mutually disposed, be at peace, and the God of love and of peace <sup>12</sup> will be with you. Greet one another <sup>13</sup> with a holy kiss. All the saints are greeting you.

<sup>14</sup> The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the communion of the holy spirit be with you all! Amen!

GALATIANS

PAUL's Galatian epistle is the divine commentary on the doctrine of justification as set forth in the first four chapters of his epistle to the Romans.

Some time after Paul had been severed (Ac.13<sup>2</sup>) and had gone among the nations preaching justification by faith (Ac.13<sup>39</sup>) and had returned to Antioch, Judaising teachers came down from Jerusalem teaching that "If you should not be circumcised after the custom of Moses, you cannot be saved." (Ac.15<sup>1</sup>). The matter was taken up in the council of the apostles at Jerusalem, and Paul and Barnabas were sent with the decrees which made it manifest that circumcision was not necessary for the nations who believed.

After they had delivered these decrees Paul passed through the Galatian province (Ac.16<sup>6</sup>) and founded the ecclesias to which this epistle is addressed. Some years later he visited the Galatian province again, establishing the disciples (Ac.18<sup>23</sup>).

We never hear again that the Judaisers taught that circumcision was essential to salvation. The decrees of the twelve effectually forbade this. Now, however, they try to graft the law on to the evangel and make circumcision and the keeping of the law a further privilege and a means of perfection for the believers among the nations. It is against this subtler form of error that this epistle is directed. Paul shows that spirit and flesh, grace and works, faith and law, cannot be reconciled.

Paul is called upon to present a defense of his evangel. This is divided into two distinct lines of thought. First he discusses its origin and then its essence. He proves that its origin was quite independent of Peter and the twelve. He demonstrates that its essence is incompatible with the keeping of the law. Then he further shows that its fruits cannot be produced in legal bonds.

The origin of the evangel involves Paul's personal history after his call, and his points of contact with the twelve, especially Peter. He carefully rehearses the details of his three meetings with Peter, showing that he had no opportunity to receive his evangel from him, but that, in each case, he communicated his evangel to Peter and the others.

The doctrinal defense discusses the difference between the Abrahamic and Sinaitic covenants, showing the priority of the Abrahamic promise and the subordinate and temporary function of the law. It acted as an escort, during the minority of the chosen nation, to lead them to Christ. It was a guardian, suitable only for those under age. It must not continue. If faith came four hundred years before its advent, it is in no need of law. When law utterly fails then faith remains. Hence the utter folly of the Galatian ecclesias, to whom the law was never given by God, in voluntarily subjecting themselves to its demands when they already had far more than it could ever give them. Before law came, and after it fails, the just lived by faith. It never could give either righteousness or life. The Galatians had both, by faith in Christ.

In practise the law is powerless through the flesh. But grace, working through faith, can overfill the law's demands by ignoring its commands and curses.

PAUL TO THE GALATIANS

<sup>1</sup> Paul loses no time in coming directly to the heart of the trouble at Galatia. If he received his commission from the twelve apostles at Jerusalem or through Peter, he could have no distinct evangel for the nations. But he insists that he, as well as they, received his evangel directly from the risen Lord. He was given it without the intervention of Peter, he proclaimed it on a par with Peter, he maintained it in spite of the opposition of Peter.

<sup>6</sup> Unlike Paul's other epistles, there is no note of thanksgiving or blessing in this opening strain. Corinth, with all its moral and doctrinal evil, did not fail to call this forth. But here, the defection is too serious. Instead, he marvels at the Galatians and hurls his anathema at those who are disturbing them.

The two evangels were different in kind and could not be classed together. They had been called in the grace of Christ. They were being transferred to the bondage of law.

<sup>8</sup> The intense zeal of the apostle for the evangel he had proclaimed comes out in the fact that he calls down this anathema on himself, in case he should be guilty of distorting the message he is proclaiming. It is worthy of note that he is not objecting to the apostles of the Circumcision preaching a distinct evangel to them. That was what they had been commissioned for. But they had agreed that they would not go to the nations. Hence he repeats the words to you thrice.

<sup>11</sup> Those who were disturbing the Galatians had no message except what they had received from the twelve apostles. But Paul is unwearied in his insistence that he received nothing from them. His evangel was a fresh revelation made known to him by the Lord Himself. If Paul merely proclaimed what the twelve taught, why did he not receive it through them? What need for the Lord to descend and call him on the Damascus road? Why should he be severed from the rest at Antioch? Why did the believing Jews in Jerusalem oppose his ministry among the nations?

PAUL, an apostle (not from men, neither through a man, but through Jesus Christ and God, the Father, Who rouses Him from among the dead), and all the brethren with me, to the ecclesias of Galatia:

<sup>3</sup> Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ, the One giving Himself for our sins, so that He might extricate us out of the present wicked eon, according to the will of our God and Father, to Whom be glory for the eons of the eons. Amen!

<sup>6</sup> I AM MARVELING that you are transferred thus swiftly, from Him Who calls you in the grace of Christ, to a different evangel, which is not another, unless some who are disturbing you want also to distort the evangel of Christ. But if we also, or a messenger out of heaven, should be preaching an evangel to you beside that which we preach to you, let him be anathema! As we have declared before and at present I am saying again, if anyone is preaching to you an evangel beside that which you accepted, let him be anathema!

<sup>10</sup> For, at present, am I persuading men or God? Or am I seeking to please men? If I still pleased men, I should not be a slave of Christ. For I am making known to you, brethren, the evangel which is being preached by me, that it is not in accord with man. For neither did I accept it from man, nor was I taught it, but through a revelation of Jesus Christ. For you hear of my behavior once, in Judaism, that I inordinately persecuted the eccle-

<sup>14</sup> While his opposers know nothing of the grace of Paul's evangel, he was better acquainted with Judaism than they were. And not only so, but he had exceeded them in the energy and zeal with which he had defended it.

<sup>16</sup> The first revelation which came to Saul of Tarsus prepared the way for those which were to follow. He was called outside the land. Hence he found his sphere of service among the nations. He was not seeking God, but was His most implacable human enemy. He is saved by a display of grace which had hitherto been unknown. Hence his evangel is the exponent of the unadulterated grace of God. His first meeting with Christ was after His ascension and glorification. Hence he is concerned, not with His earthly life, but with His heavenly position. He recognizes Him as the Son of God, and, as such, he immediately proclaims Him (Ac.9:1-20).

<sup>17</sup> The natural course for one in Saul's case would be to go up to Jerusalem to the apostles and submit to them what he had received from the Lord and seek their patronage and fellowship in its proclamation, or, indeed, ask their opinion and permission to promulgate it. But what did he do? He went into the desert where no human influence was at work. He waited three years before telling Peter about it, and then he does not even form the acquaintance of the twelve or of the ecclesia. They actually did not know him personally, though they were glorifying God for the great change in him. All of this shows conclusively that Paul did not, at that time, derive his doctrine from Peter or the twelve.

<sup>1</sup> Paul's next visit to Jerusalem was pursuant to a revelation. The time had come to obtain official recognition of his apostleship and evangel. The occasion was furnished by those of the Circumcision themselves. They insisted that it was needful to circumcise those among the nations who had believed, and to teach them to observe the law of Moses. Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem to put this question before the apostles and obtained from them the assurance that circumcision and law keeping were not necessary for salvation.

<sup>14</sup> sia of God and ravaged it. And I progressed in Judaism beyond many contemporaries in my race, possessing more exceedingly a zeal for the traditions of my fathers.

<sup>15</sup> Now when it delights God, Who severs me from my mother's womb and calls me through His grace, to unveil His Son in me that I may be evangelizing Him among the nations, I did not immediately submit it to flesh and blood, neither came I up to Jerusalem to those who were apostles before me, but I came away into Arabia, and I return again to Damascus.

<sup>18</sup> Thereupon, after three years, I came up to Jerusalem to relate my story to Cephas, and I stay with him fifteen days. Yet I became acquainted with none of the different apostles, except James, the brother of the Lord. Now what I am writing to you, lo! before God, I am not lying. Thereupon I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia. Yet I was unknown by face to the ecclesias of Judea who are in Christ. Only they were hearing that "He who was persecuting us once, now evangelizes the faith which once he ravaged".

<sup>2</sup> Thereupon, after the lapse of fourteen years, I again went up to Jerusalem with Barnabas, taking Titus also along with us. Now I went up in accord with a revelation, and submitted to them the evangel which I am proclaiming among the nations, yet privately to those of repute, lest somehow I should be racing or ran for naught.

2 Paul's method in Jerusalem seems to have taken into account the low spiritual state and prejudices of the Jewish believers. It would have been practically impossible to impress the whole company with the character and divinity of his commission to the nations, so he singles out the leading brethren and seeks to show them how God has committed a distinct work to him. Peter and James seem to have grasped the essential points which he wished to impress upon them. Peter had had some preparation for this change, through the vision given him in connection with the proselyte Cornelius (Ac.15:7-11).

3 Titus was taken along as a test case. If circumcision was essential, then he must submit to it. If it was not essential, then he was to be a living proof that it was not necessary.

7 At the private meeting with those of repute Paul obtained the fullest recognition of his apostleship. James, Cephas and John, who were recognized as the chiefs, acknowledge his commission. This puts Paul on a par with Peter, the chief of the Circumcision apostles. There was a mutual understanding arrived at among them that they would confine themselves to the Circumcision, while Paul and Barnabas went to the nations. This agreement should have kept the judaizing disturbers of the Galatian believers from interfering with them. Paul kept his part of the compact, especially that which concerned the collection for the poor saints in Judea. He brought gifts from the nations. In return they harassed those to whom he had been sent and would have killed him.

11 Paul's third meeting with Peter is most conclusive. At his first meeting he tells Peter of his commission. At his second he gets Peter's recognition. At his third he towers far above him and withstands him to the face. Peter had been taught not to call anyone common or unclean who had the witness of the holy spirit, so that, when he first came to Antioch, he ate with the uncircumcised. But he was afraid of the Circumcisionists, and changed his attitude when they came down from Jerusalem. What prestige these men had, who could intimidate the very chief of the apostles!

3 But not even Titus, who is with me, being a Greek, is compelled to be circumcised. Yet, because of the false brethren who were smuggled in, who crept in to spy out our freedom which we have in Christ Jesus, that they shall be enslaving us—to whom, not even for an hour do we simulate by subjection, that the truth of the evangel should be continuing with you.

6 Now from those reputed to be somewhat—what kind they once were is of no consequence at all to me (God is not taken up with the human aspect)—for those of repute submitted nothing to me. But, on the contrary, perceiving that I have been entrusted with the evangel of the Uncircumcision, according as Peter of the Circumcision (for He Who operates in Peter for the apostleship of the Circumcision operates in me also for the nations), and knowing the grace which is being given to me, James and Cephas and John, who are supposed to be pillars, give to me and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, that we, indeed, are to be for the nations, yet they for the Circumcision—only that we should be remembering the poor, which very thing I endeavor also to do.

11 Now when Cephas came to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, seeing that he was self-censured. 12 For before some came from James he ate with those of the nations. Yet when they came, he shrank back, and severed himself, fearing those of the Circumcision. And the rest of the Jews play the hypocrite with him, so that Barnabas also was led away with their hypocrisy. But when I perceived that they are not <sup>14</sup> Peter's double dealing did not deceive Paul, though he seems to have dragged all the rest of the Jews in Antioch with him, not even excepting Barnabas. Paul is left alone as the champion of the truth. He has far more cause to fear Peter than Peter has to fear his misguided subordinates, but he does not flinch. He exposes Peter's inconsistent conduct.

Paul's logic is unanswerable. Peter had been living as the nations. If he was right then the nations were right in living as they did, and the Judaisers were wrong in trying to make Jews out of them. He could not withdraw without incriminating himself.

<sup>15</sup> Paul then takes up the case from the standpoint of the Jews who were with him. He and they were justified by the faith of Christ, apart from the law. Should they now voluntarily resume their former relations to the law they would become sinners, and Christ a dispenser of sin, for the law is not laid down for the just but for sinners. In fact, to go back under law would prove either that they had been wrong in leaving it or were wrong in returning to its bondage.

<sup>19</sup> Death is the ultimate effect of the law, yet it is also deliverance from law.

<sup>20</sup> We have endeavored to transcribe this marvelous compendium of the faith as nearly as possible as it is in the original, for even the order of the words is exquisite. The sentence opens and closes with Christ, and a negative I occupies its center. It may be shown graphically thus:

with Christ
have I been crucified, yet I am living—
no longer I,
but living in me is Christ.

<sup>21</sup> What a contrast between the slavery of the law and the exultant life by faith of the Son of God and the gift of His love!

DOCTRINAL DEFENSE

correct in their attitude toward the truth of the evangel, I said to Cephas in front of all, "If you, belonging to the Jews, are living as the nations, and not as the Jews, how are you compelling the nations to be judaizing? We, who are Jews by nature, and not sinners <sup>15</sup> of the nations, having perceived that a man is not justified by works of law, except it be through the faith of Christ Jesus, we also believe into Christ Jesus that we may be justified by the faith of Christ and not by works of law, seeing that by works of law shall no flesh be justified. Now if, while seeking to be justified in Christ, we ourselves also were found sinners, is Christ, consequently, a dispenser of sin? <sup>17</sup> May it not come to that! For if I am building again what I demolish, I am commending myself as a transgressor. For I, through law, died to law, that I should live to <sup>19</sup> God. With Christ have I been crucified, yet I am living—no longer I, but living in me is Christ. Now that which I am now living in flesh, I am living in faith of the Son of God, Who loves me, and is giving <sup>21</sup> Himself up for me. I am not repudiating the grace of God, for if righteousness is through law, consequently Christ died gratuitously."

3 O foolish Galatians! What bewitches you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ has been graphically crucified? This only I want to learn from you: Did you obtain the spirit by works of law or by the hearing of faith? Are you so foolish? Undertaking in spirit, are you now being completed in flesh? <sup>4</sup> Was so much suffering of yours a

<sup>3</sup> Paul now appeals to the experience of the Galatians themselves. Before the Judaizers came they received the spirit of God, and suffered for the evangel, and did mighty works quite apart from the law.

<sup>6</sup> Three great names are associated, in Scripture, with three distinct lines of truth. David is the one with whom the kingdom covenant was made, and his name is foremost in the proclamation of the evangel of the kingdom. When justification is in view we are taken back to Abraham and his faith in God. God's covenant with him was unconditional and included all nations in its scope. The conciliation engages us with Adam, and embraces all mankind in its gracious provisions.

All injustice finds its earliest source in the unbelief of Eve, and all righteousness acceptable to God is based on a reversal of the lack of confidence her act revealed. Nothing can be more just than to take God at His word.

<sup>9</sup> How striking the contrast! As many as are of faith are blessed. Accursed is everyone who does not remain in all which has been written in the scroll of the law to do it. Who would be so perverse as to choose law? Yet the heresy of Galatianism is far more prevalent today than ever. Life under law can only come to one who keeps every precept perfectly at all times, yet is forfeited at the slightest infringement. Life through faith does not depend on conduct but on the One in Whom the faith is placed.

<sup>13</sup> The sacrifice of Christ made provision for all classes and all contingencies. For those under law He bore its curse, so that they may receive the blessing of Abraham. And He bore the sins of those not under law that they, too, may obtain the righteousness of Abraham. So both, through faith, receive the spirit, by which they may exceed the righteous demands of the law.

<sup>15</sup> A contract, or agreement, or covenant, once ratified, cannot be set aside, neither can any of its provisions be altered. The Abrahamic covenant contained no conditions to invalidate it. It did not depend on obedience to confirm it. It depended solely on God, who swore by Himself that He would carry it out (Gen.22:15-18).

sham? If, to be sure, it was even a sham!

<sup>5</sup> He, then, who is supplying you with the spirit, and operating works of power among you—did you get the spirit by works of law or by the hearing of faith, according as Abraham believes God, and it is reckoned to him for righteousness? Know, consequently, that those of faith, these are sons of Abraham. Now the scripture, perceiving before that God is justifying the nations (by) faith, preaches before an evangel to Abraham, that “In you shall all the nations be <sup>9</sup> blessed”. So that those of faith are being blessed together with believing Abraham.

<sup>10</sup> For as many as are of works of law are under a curse, for it is written that “Accursed is everyone who is not remaining in all things which have been written in the scroll of the law to do them”. <sup>11</sup> Now that no one is being justified in law with God is evident, seeing that “The just by faith shall be <sup>12</sup> living”. Now the law is not of faith, but “Who does them shall be <sup>13</sup> living in them”. Christ reclaims us out of the curse of the law, becoming a curse for our sakes, seeing that it is written, “Accursed is everyone being hanged on a <sup>14</sup> tree,” that the blessing of Abraham may be coming into the nations in Jesus Christ, that we may be obtaining the promise of the spirit through faith.

<sup>15</sup> Brethren (I am saying this as a man), a human covenant likewise having been ratified, no one is repudiating or modifying it. Now to Abraham the promises were declared, and to his Seed. He is not saying “And to seeds,” as of

<sup>17</sup> The priority of the promise is most important. Nearly half a millennium elapsed before the law was given. The promise is in no way dependent on the law for its fulfillment.

<sup>19</sup> Law changes sin from a mere mistake into the over-stepping of a divine command. It enhances the sinfulness of sin. Transgression is sin against a known law, entailing not only the usual penalties, but the added displeasure of God against one who defies His precepts. The law was not given to the people directly, but through Moses, who acted as the mediator. Neither was it given through Christ, the Seed of the promise.

<sup>21</sup> Far from being against the promises, the law was intended to guard those to whom the promise was made and to lead them to Christ. It could not give life or justify in itself, but it could bring them to a realization of the sinfulness of sin and the need of a Saviour. These were its functions, and these it fulfilled. This was, however, only until the Seed should come.

<sup>24</sup> It was the custom in well-to-do Greek families, to have the children taken to and from school under the guardianship of an escort, usually a slave. These were inclined to be somewhat severe in their discipline. Such was the law.

<sup>25</sup> Those who believe are not under law. The grown sons would scorn the escort of their boyhood days. His presence would be an insult to their manhood. So those who know their maturity in Christ refuse the bondage of law as both unnecessary and humiliating. We are not children but sons. Law leads minors. Faith controls sons.

<sup>27</sup> Baptism, as practised in Paul's early ministry, was a symbol of unity with Christ in His death, burial and resurrection. "As many as" shows that not all the Galatians had been baptized. Nevertheless the truth of unity with Christ held for all, for in Him all physical distinctions vanish. In service, or in the Lord, the slave was still a slave, the sexes were still recognized, but in Christ, by faith, all have the same high place of privilege. All are entitled to the promise and the righteousness which comes by faith in God.

many, but as of One, "And to <sup>17</sup> your Seed", which is Christ. Now this am I saying, a covenant, having been ratified before by God, the law, having come four hundred and thirty years afterward, does not invalidate, so as to abrogate the <sup>18</sup> promise. For if the enjoyment of the allotment is of law, it is no longer of promise. Yet God has graciously given it to Abraham through the promise.

<sup>19</sup> What, then, is the law? It was added on behalf of transgressions until the Seed should come to Whom He has promised, being prescribed through messengers in the <sup>20</sup> hand of a mediator. Now there is no mediator of one. Yet God is One.

<sup>21</sup> Is the law, then, against the promises of God? May it not come to that! For if a law were given, able to vivify, really, righteousness <sup>22</sup> would be out of law. But the scripture locks up all together under sin, that the promise out of Jesus Christ's faith may be given to those who are believing.

<sup>23</sup> Now before the coming of faith we were garrisoned under law, being locked up together for the <sup>24</sup> faith about to be revealed. So that the law has become our escort to lead us to Christ, that we may be justified by faith.

<sup>25</sup> Now, on the coming of faith, we are no longer under an escort, <sup>26</sup> for, through faith, you are all sons of God, in Christ Jesus. For as <sup>27</sup> many as are baptized into Christ, <sup>28</sup> put on Christ, in Whom there is no Jew nor yet Greek, no slave nor yet free, no male and female, for <sup>29</sup> you all are one in Christ Jesus. Now if you are Christ's, consequently you are of Abraham's seed, enjoy-

<sup>1</sup> The place of an infant heir differs from that of a slave in right but not in fact. Though entitled to all, he is treated as though master of nothing. He is watched by guardians, and supervised by stewards. This was the position of Israel under the law. Theirs was the sonship and the glory and the covenants, but these are all reserved for future display. Dignities are suited to capacity; privileges to age. Infancy is debarred from their use, not merely by the formal legal prohibition, but by intrinsic disqualification. The responsibilities of property are beyond the strength and understanding of a child.

<sup>3</sup> Israel, during the period of minority, was in bondage under the "elements" of the world. These "rudiments" or elementary religious observances, while "infirm and poor" (<sup>9</sup>) and put in contrast with Christ (Col.2<sup>s</sup>), were necessary to their education and served an essential purpose in the progress of revelation. But no one who knows the liberty of sonship would tolerate their shackles for an instant.

<sup>4</sup> In Israel the assumption of the responsibilities and dignities of manhood was a notable event in a man's life. In the life of the nation this was signaled by the advent of God's Son, Who reclaimed them from the bondage of the law.

<sup>6</sup> The people in our Lord's day were bi-lingual. They used an Aramaic dialect in the familiar talk of the household, but all understood Greek, which was almost a universal language at that time, "Abba" is Aramaic, corresponding to our familiar "Papa".

<sup>9</sup> It is most remarkable that the apostle puts the Mosaic ceremonial on a par with heathen rites. They were not turning back to their previous idolatry but to the observances under the law, which they had not practised before. But he insists it is all the same in God's sight as if they really had returned to the rites of heathenism.

<sup>12</sup> If Paul had given up the Mosaic ritual and became as they were for their sakes, surely they ought to follow his example, for he certainly had far more reason to cling to it than they had to lapse back into it.

ers of the allotment according to the promise.

<sup>4</sup> Now I am saying, for as much time as the enjoyer of the allotment is a minor, he is of no more consequence than a slave, being master of all, but is under guardians and stewards until the time purposed by the father. Thus also we, when we were minors, were enslaved under the elements of the world. Now when the full time came, God delegates His Son, come of a woman, come under law, that He should be reclaiming those under law, that we may be getting the place of a son. Now, seeing that you are sons, God delegates the spirit of His Son into our hearts, crying "Abba! Father!" <sup>7</sup> So that you are no longer a slave, but a son. Now if a son, an enjoyer also of God's allotment, through Christ.

<sup>8</sup> But then, indeed, having no perception of God, you are slaves of those who, by nature, are not gods. Yet now, knowing God, yet rather being known by God, how are you turning back again to the infirm and poor elements for which you want to slave again anew? <sup>10</sup> You are scrutinizing days and <sup>11</sup> months and seasons and years. I am afraid of you lest somehow my toil for you is a sham.

<sup>12</sup> Become as I, since I am even as you, brethren, I am beseeching you. <sup>13</sup> You injure me in nothing. Now you are aware that because of the infirmity of the flesh I preach the <sup>14</sup> evangel to you formerly. And your trial, in my flesh, you do not scorn, neither do you loathe it, but you receive me as a messenger of <sup>15</sup> God, as Christ Jesus. Where, then, is your happiness? For I am

<sup>15</sup> Eye diseases are very common in the East. Paul's first acquaintance with the Galatians was when, as a sick traveler, he proclaimed the evangel to them in the midst of his infirmities. From this passage we get a glimpse of the fervent love his message evoked, and are led to suppose that he had some affliction of the eyes.

<sup>17</sup> The words zealous and jealous probably were once the same in English, as they are so closely allied in form and meaning. They represent a single Greek word. It is not always clear which is the better rendering, but here jealousy, rather than zeal, seems to satisfy the context.

<sup>22</sup> The controversy turns on the question "Who are the heirs of Abraham?" Is the ground of sonship circumcision and law keeping, or faith? The Judaizers said, We are Abraham's sons! Abraham had two sons, says Paul. Which line do you belong to, Ishmael or Isaac? You are Ishmaelites, sons of Hagar, born of the flesh, born into slavery. You are not heirs of Abraham! Isaac, the child of promise, is the true heir. These two sons of Abraham illustrate the relation between law and promise, flesh and spirit. Ishmael came into Abraham's home between the promise and the advent of the true heir. Born of unbelief, he was a continual trial and persecuted the son of promise. But finally the decree went forth: Cast out this maid and her son!

It could hardly be that the Galatians are listening to any but so-called "believing" Jews who were associated with the apostles, and with James. They would not listen to the persecutors of the ecclesia in Jerusalem. Tens of thousands of Jews "believed" but they all were zealous of the law (Ac.21<sup>20</sup>). This shows that those associated with the Pentecostal administration were virulently opposed to Paul and his doctrine of grace. When he was in Jerusalem they led the multitude against him and nearly killed him. These Jewish Christians were the most troublesome enemies of the ecclesias among the nations which had been founded by Paul.

testifying to you, that, if possible, gouging out your eyes, you would give them to me. So that I have become your enemy by being true to you!

<sup>17</sup> They are jealous over you, not ideally, but they want to debar you that you may be jealous over them. Now it is ideal for you to be jealous in the ideal always, and not only in my presence with you.

<sup>19</sup> Little children mine, with whom I am travailing again until Christ may be formed in you!—yet I wanted to be present with you at present, and to change my voice, seeing that I am perplexed about you.

<sup>21</sup> Tell me, those wanting to be under law, are you not hearing the law? For it is written, that Abraham has had two sons, one out of the maid and one out of the free woman. But the one, indeed, out of the maid has been begotten according to flesh, yet the one out of the free woman through the promise. Which is allegorizing, for these women are the two covenants, one, indeed, from Mount Sinai, generating into slavery, which is Hagar. Now Hagar is Mount Sinai in Arabia, yet she is in line with Jerusalem which now is, for she is in slavery with her children. Yet Jerusalem above is free, who is mother of us all. For it is written, "Be glad, sterile one, who art not bringing forth; burst forth and implore, thou who art not travailing; seeing that many are the children of the desolate, rather than of her who has the husband".

<sup>28</sup> Now you, brethren, as Isaac, are children of promise. But even as then, he who is generated according to flesh persecuted him according to spirit, thus also it is

<sup>1</sup> This paragraph is the summary and conclusion of the doctrinal argument. Tersely, he puts the case. Which shall it be, Christ or circumcision? No half hearted allegiance here, no serving of two masters. Circumcision might have been a badge of privilege in the past, but now it has become a sign of apostasy. It does not lead to justification from sin, but to exemption from Christ. It is incumbent on such to keep the entire law. Grace has no room in which to operate.

<sup>4</sup> "Falling from grace" is not, as usually supposed, a loss of the benefits of Christ's salvation through breaking the law, but, on the contrary, through attempting to keep the law. He who falls into sin does not forfeit the grace of God. Blessed to relate, grace abounds in such a case (Rom.6:1). But he who seeks to establish his own salvation by works has no need of the grace of God and forfeits all right to the benefits flowing from His redemption. He thus repudiates grace. He falls out of the sphere where grace operates. This is what "falling from grace" really means.

<sup>5</sup> Righteousness is here put before us as an expectation for which we are waiting. This is required by the contrast between that produced by the law and that effected by faith. At present, in God's sight, the one righteous thing to do is to believe Him. The man who believes God is absolutely right in that act. If we could view this from God's side we would see that such a man is just, and needs nothing more to make him righteous. The effect of this on his dealings with others may not be fully in harmony with this fact now, but the time is coming when our conduct will partake of the righteousness of faith. This is the "expectation of righteousness".

<sup>11</sup> The proclamation of circumcision, or of lawkeeping, or of any human effort to attain the favor of God entails no persecution. The cross is a snare, which not only captures but crushes us. No human pretensions can abide the great fact of His utter humiliation and shameful death for us on the cross, and the sober truth that such were our deserts, not His. Christ Himself is our righteousness. We loathe every effort of our own.

<sup>30</sup> now. But what is the scripture saying? "Cast out this maid and her son, for by no means shall the son of the maid be enjoying the allotment with the son of the free woman". Wherefore, brethren, we are not children of the maid, but of the free woman.

<sup>5</sup> For freedom Christ frees us! Stand firm, then, and be not again enthralled with the yoke of slavery. <sup>2</sup> Lo! I, Paul, am saying to you that if you should be circumcising, Christ will be of no benefit to you <sup>3</sup> at all. Now I am testifying again to every man who is being circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the <sup>4</sup> whole law. You were exempted from Christ, any who are being justified in law. You fall out of <sup>5</sup> grace. For we are awaiting, in spirit, the expectation of righteousness by faith. For in Christ Je- <sup>6</sup> sus neither circumcision is availing anything, nor uncircumcision, but faith, operating through love.

<sup>7</sup> You raced ideally! What hinders you from being persuaded by <sup>8</sup> the truth? This persuasion is not <sup>9</sup> of Him Who is calling you. A little leaven is leavening the whole <sup>10</sup> kneading. I have confidence concerning you in the Lord that you will not be at all disposed otherwise. Now he who is disturbing you shall be bearing his judgment, whoever he may be.

<sup>11</sup> Now I, brethren, if I am still proclaiming circumcision, why am I still being persecuted? Consequently the snare of the cross of <sup>12</sup> Christ has vanished. They who are raising you to insurrection ought to strike themselves off also.

<sup>13</sup> For you were called for freedom, brethren, only not freedom for an incentive to the flesh, but through love be slaving for one another.

26 IN ONE saying HAS-been-FILLED

<sup>15</sup> The Galatians were biting and devouring one another, while they supposed themselves to be keeping the law. The law usually acts thus. It makes men self-righteous and contentious. Instead of fulfilling its letter they destroy its spirit. Law should lead to regard for others and find its fruition in love. But it leads its votaries to despise others and finds its fruit in hate.

<sup>16</sup> Here is the divine prescription for our most troublesome problem—the flesh. Every attempt to directly control the flesh, to curb it or cure it, must end in failure. The only way to deal with it is to ignore it. In the epistle to the Romans this is fully set forth under the figure of death. Here the conflict between flesh and spirit is met by such complete occupation with the spirit, that no opportunity is left for the flesh to accomplish its desires.

<sup>19</sup> In this list there are some sins which we have come to condone or even justify, yet they are in the midst of a catalogue of crimes. Enmity and strife, jealousy and faction, too often assume a righteous garb. Sectarianism is defended as though it were an improvement on the divine unity of the body of Christ. In the kingdom of God there will be no one practising such things.

<sup>22</sup> The flesh acts, the spirit bears fruit, delicious not only to us but to God. Fruit is not the result of mechanical effort but the natural expression of life and growth. If we love others we will need no legal restrictions to keep us from injuring them. Law is a useless incumbrance to those who walk after the spirit. They need no promptings to do good and are above the penalties imposed on evil doers.

<sup>24</sup> The crucifixion of the flesh means far more than putting it in the place of death. It gives it the kind of death it deserves, for it is a criminal of the deepest dye. The shameful, ignominious death borne by Christ for our sins is the only fit finish for the flesh.

<sup>1</sup> A true self-knowledge will humble us so that we can deal meekly with a brother who has suddenly slipped. The law would condemn him, but we are to seek to bring him back into line.

<sup>14</sup> For every law is fulfilled in one word, in this, "You shall be loving your associate as yourself". Now if you are biting and devouring one another, beware that you may not be consumed by one another.

<sup>16</sup> Now I am saying, Be walking in spirit, and you should under no circumstances be consummating the lust of the flesh. For the flesh is lusting against the spirit, yet the spirit against the flesh. Now these are opposing one another, lest you should be doing what you want. Now, if you are led by spirit, you are not still under law.

<sup>18</sup> Now the works of the flesh are apparent, which are adultery, prostitution, uncleanness, wantonness, idolatry, enchantment, enmities, strife, jealousies, furies, factions, dissensions, sects, envyings, murders, drunkennesses, revelries, and the like of these, which, I am predicting to you, according as I predicted before also, that those committing such things shall not be enjoying the allotment of the kingdom of God.

<sup>22</sup> Now the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, fidelity, meekness, self-control: against such things there is no law. Now those of Christ Jesus crucify the flesh together with its passions and lusts. If we may be living in spirit, in spirit we may be observing the fundamentals also. We should not be becoming vain-glorious, challenging one another, envying one another.

<sup>6</sup> Brethren, if a man should be overtaken also in some offense, you who are spiritual be attuning such a one, in a spirit of meekness, noting yourself, that you also may not be tried. Be bearing one another's burdens, and thus fill up

<sup>5</sup> There is a contrast here between a burden and a load. Burden is from the element meaning heavy. Both of these elements occur together in Mt. 23<sup>4</sup> "heavy loads". In Mt. 11<sup>30</sup> our Lord did not say "My burden is light", but "My load is light". When a brother becomes overburdened it is our duty and privilege to help him bear his burden. But the load the Lord lays on us is not too heavy. We cannot do a service which God has assigned to another. In this each one must bear his own load.

<sup>6</sup> In order to perpetuate the instruction of His saints God has made it obligatory that such a service should be recognized and proper compensation provided for those who instruct.

<sup>7</sup> The figure of sowing and reaping is a most encouraging one to consider. The farmer plants the seed and sees no results at all for some time. He waits long and patiently ere he reaps the harvest. So we, too, may see little come of our sowing for the spirit, but in the proper season we shall reap as we have sown. That which is for the flesh will rot. That which is for the spirit will endure for the eons. There is much, very much, to make us despondent, but we should ever keep in mind the eonian harvest for which we are preparing.

<sup>11</sup> It seems probable that the rest of the epistle was penned by Paul himself. His usual custom was to write only a short ending to attest the genuineness of a letter, but here he is so concerned that he rehearses the heart of the argument in his own handwriting. It has been suggested that the writing was in large characters because of his defective eyesight.

<sup>12</sup> In this marvelous finale, Paul focuses the light of the cross upon the motives actuating both sides of the controversy. The Circumcisionists played for popularity. They dreaded persecution. They appealed to the flesh. How many of us are following the spirit of this course today? Paul boasted only in the cross, which puts an end to the flesh, whether in us or in the world. Now there is a new creation, in which the flesh has no place. This should settle the whole controversy.

<sup>3</sup> the law of Christ. For if anyone is supposing [himself] to be anything, being nothing, he is imposing on himself. Now let each one be testing his own work, and then he shall be having his boast for himself alone, and not for another, for each one shall be bearing his own load.

<sup>6</sup> Now let him who is being instructed in the word be contributing to him who is instructing, in all good things. Be not deceived, God is not to be sneered at, for whatever a man may be sowing, this shall he be reaping also, seeing that he who is sowing for his own flesh, from the flesh shall be reaping corruption, yet he who is sowing for the spirit, from the spirit shall be reaping eonian life. Now we should not be despondent in ideal doing, for in due season we shall be reaping, not fainting. Consequently, then, as we have occasion, we are working for the good of all, yet specially for the family of faith.

<sup>11</sup> See with what big letters I write to you with my own hand! As many as want to put on a fair face in the flesh, these are compelling you to be circumcised, only that they may not be persecuted for the cross of Christ Jesus. For not even they who are circumcised are maintaining law, but they want you to be circumcised that they should be boasting in that flesh of yours.

<sup>14</sup> Now may it not be mine to be boasting, except in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, through Whom the world has been crucified to me, and I to the world. For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is anything, but there is a new creation. And as many as 16 Paul does not wish to condemn all of the Circumcision indiscriminately for the sins of his opponents. Those amongst them who acknowledge the power of the cross in the midst of their observances, on these he invokes peace and mercy, for they are the true Israel of God.

17 It was customary to mark a slave with the brand of his master. Paul's many persecutions had doubtless left many marks, all of which indicated his loyalty to his Lord.

18 Note the emphasis on spirit, in line with the teaching of the epistle.

shall observe the fundamentals by this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and on the Israel of God.

17 For the rest, let no one afford me weariness, for I am bearing in my body the brand marks of the Lord Jesus Christ.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brethren! Amen!

PAUL'S PERFECTION EPISTLES

PAUL's perfection epistles are emphatically the truth for the present. The Ephesian letter, being addressed to all believers in Christ Jesus, in contrast with the Circumcision, who hardly knew Him by this title, is the ranking revelation for the members of the body of Christ. Here first are revealed those secrets which distinguish this administration from all others. Never before has the heavenly destiny of the present ecclesia been declared. All the other scriptures deal with the elementary and immature, but here we find perfection. God's purpose had been only partially made known before and seemed confined to earth. But in this final transcendent revelation His ultimate universal goal is first revealed. These three letters are closely related to each other and should be studied together. As was shown in the outline of Paul's epistles, this may be graphically presented thus:

EPHESIANS 1-3, Doctrine—The Body: its Members
EPHESIANS 4-6, Deportment
PHILIPPIANS, Deportment
COLOSSIANS, Doctrine—The Body: its Head

Ephesians begins by presenting a careful and comprehensive statement of the truth for the present secret economy, laying stress on those aspects which concern the members of Christ's body. Colossians is the counterpart of this, dealing with the same doctrines but presenting them in their relation to the Head of the body.

Both begin with God and with His primordial purpose. The members of the body were chosen before the disruption and now become the beneficiaries in His heavenly allotment. Christ is His Image, being the First-born of all creation and now becomes the Head of all creation in heaven as well as on earth.

Ephesians, then, unfolds the truth of the joint body in which all the members are of equal rank. Colossians makes Him the Head over the body and the members subordinate to Him.

Two secrets or "mysteries" are disclosed in these epistles. The secret of Christ (Eph.1<sup>9</sup>34Col.2<sup>24</sup><sup>3</sup>) was previously revealed but not as it is now revealed. His headship over the earth had been made known to the prophets of old. His headship in the heavens was made known to the apostles, especially Peter (1Pet.3<sup>22</sup>). But the secret economy, the present administration of grace, was never disclosed to any one except through Paul (Eph.3<sup>9</sup>). It was not partially hidden, like the mystery of Christ, but was an absolute secret, hid in God. It is the function of the first three chapters of Ephesians to explain its three aspects for the believer, and of Colossians to reveal the position which it accords to Christ.

These letters should be read in this light. It is only when we apprehend their radical difference and vast advance over the epistles written by others than the apostle of the nations (Eph.3<sup>1</sup>) that we can appreciate their marvelous message. It is only as we allow them to dominate and modify Paul's previous epistles, of which they are the ripened fruit, that we are able to entertain the transcendent nature of their contents.

The title Christ Jesus, calling attention to His present place of power, is the key to the marvelous grace which came to them after the nation of Israel had been rejected, as recorded at the close of the book of Acts. As associated with Jesus Christ they would be still subordinate to the favored nation, for He is still rejected. But the title which recognizes His present glory in the heavens makes it possible for the far off "Gentiles" to be blessed in celestial realms equally with a favored few of the nation of His choice.

Paul's Perfection epistles are based upon his Preparatory epistles to the Thessalonians, the Romans, the Corinthians, and the Galatians. They are addressed to those who had received the truth taught in his earlier ministries, who were in a state of prior expectancy (Eph.1:12 1Thes.1:10), who had been sealed with the holy spirit (Eph.1:13 2Co1:22), which was an earnest of more to come (Eph.1:14 2Co.5:5). They had been enjoyers of an allotment (Ro.8:17 Ga.4:7), and now become joint allottees (Eph.3:6). Once they were members of a body in which the members were of various rank (Ro.12:4-5 1Co.12:12). Now that Israel is set aside and the celestial destiny revealed, it is changed to a joint body, in which all the members are equally exalted (Eph.3:6). The nations become joint partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus (Eph.3:6) which once they held as guests of Israel's covenant.

All saints, during the eonian times, are under God's government, belong to His family, and become the nucleus of His worship. On earth, the nations are subordinate, for Israel must be the head. Such was the place of those who received Paul's message, before the Perfection epistles were penned. The new revelation not only changed their destiny to heaven, but made them the peers of the favored nation. We are felow citizens. We are not merely guests, but members of God's family. We are an integral part of the temple which God is building for His worship (Eph.2:19-22).

The Perfection epistles should be studied as a group. The truth is set forth didactically and logically in the opening chapters of Ephesians. Philippians goes over the ground experimentally, showing the truth operating in Christ and Paul and other examples. It applies the teaching of Ephesians to daily conduct. The "calling above" (Ph. 3:14) is the celestial calling of Ephesians 1:3. Colossians corrects departure from Ephesian teaching, with special stress upon the glories of Christ in creation and reconciliation.

Some of the chief figures in these epistles have often been misunderstood, especially that of Christ's headship of the ecclesia. It is usually taken that all of the body except the head figures the ecclesia. This is not true. The head is reckoned as a member. The headship of Christ is not figured by the head of the body. Its parts, such as the eyes and nose, are members. Christ is not a member of the body, but Head over the ecclesia, as a husband is head over his wife (Eph.5:23). The wife has a head apart from the headship of her husband.

The new humanity (Eph.2:15) is an entirely distinct figure from that of the body. It refers to the race, giving Christ the place lost by Adam. It can be put on (Eph.5:24), or taken off. This cannot refer to our union with Christ under the figure of the body.

It should also be remembered that the "mystery", or secret, is not the body of Christ, for that had been known before. It is threefold, and includes our relationship to God as allottees, and to saints as partakers, as well as to Christ as His body. It consists in the fact that, in each of these relationships, grace has raised those among the nations who believe to equal rank, so that all are joint allottees and joint partakers, and members of a joint body.

EPHESIANS

THE zenith of divine revelation, this heavenly epistle, leaving the earth, where the Christ is repudiated by His own people Israel, seats us among the celestials, where He is enthroned at God's right hand (1<sup>20</sup>). His saints, blessed with every spiritual blessing in Him (1<sup>3</sup>) in heaven (2<sup>6</sup>), are an object lesson to manifest God's manifold wisdom to celestial beings (3<sup>10</sup>), so that the purpose of the eons (3<sup>11</sup>), which embraces Christ's headship over the heavens as well as the earth (1<sup>10</sup>), may be effected through the transcendent riches of grace (2<sup>7</sup>) which has come to the nations through the repudiation of faithless Israel, until their salvation and reception (Ro. 11<sup>12</sup>).
